AMERICAN SHIPS MAY BE "WET" AT SEA: ALL FOREIGN VESSELS "BONE DRY" IN PORT

Finding of Supreme Court Places American Ships on Equal Basis With Those of Foreign Lines—Permits American Vessels to Sell Intoxicants to Passengers Outside the Three Mile Limit—Holds That Foreign Ships Are Subject to the Laws of the Nation Whose Ports They Visit—No Intoxicants Within the Three Mile Limit Even for the Use of Crews as Required by the Laws of Their Respective Countries.

Washington, April 30.—Intoxicating liquors, even under seal, cannot lawfully be brought in American or foreign ships within three miles of the shores of the United States, the supreme court held today in a decision which declared, however, that outside the three mile limit American vessels can legally sell intoxicants to passengers. The right of foreign ships to do so had not been questioned.

The opinion, rendered in ten cases brought by foreign and two by American steamship companies, was delivered by Justice Vandeventer. Without expressing his views, Justice McReynolds dissented. Justice Sutherland in a dissenting opinion agreed with the majority of the court in reference to American ships but declared that foreign vessels had the right to bring liquors into American ports under restrictions adequately guarding against leakage ashore.

The effect of the decision was to affirm that of Federal Judge Hand in New York insofar as it sustained the opinion of Attorney General Daugherty that intoxicants could not legally be brought into American ports, and to reverse it with regard to the right of American vessels to have liquor aboard o nthe high seas and in foreign ports.

The court today pointed out specifically that congress has the power, if it sees fit to exercise it, to forbid all ships flying the American flag to carry and serve liquors outside the three-mile limit. This view of the court resulted in predictions by many "dry" leaders, after the gist of the decision had become known, that an attempt would be made to obtain legislation on this point at the earliest opportunity.

Sweeping in its scope, the decision left administration officials somewhat at sea as to how they would proceed as a matter of permanent policy. Chairman Lasker of the shipping board announced that for the present at least the ban on liquor would be kept on all shipping board vessels. The treasury, it became known, intends to begin at once to redraft its prohibition regulations to make them jibe with today's decision.

Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, expressing gratification at the court's interpretation of the law, declared it would greatly simplify prohibition enforcement within American territorial waters, his view being that a benefit would be gained as a result of foreign and American vessels being placed on the same basis within the three mile limit.

The question is expected to come up for discussion at tomorrow's cabinet meeting.

In its decision the court asserted the complete supremacy of American laws within the three-mile limit and inferentially conceded that other nations had as exclusive jurisdiction within their own territorial limits. Under the decision, American vessels, should congress prohibit them from having aboard intoxicating liquors on the high seas, would be subject to the laws of the nations whose ports they might visit, and while within its jurisdiction, should those laws require, would have to place intoxicating liquors aboard. The jurisdiction of the nations extending, under the court's construction, only one marine league or three geographic miles to sea, American vessels required to take aboard liquor by the laws of a country visited would be under the necessity if the laws of congress required, it was stated, of throwing them overboard on crossing the three mile line.

Although the question was not directly presented in any of the cases the court completely interpreted the much discussed question of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States. It distinctly confined such jurisdiction to three miles off shore, holding that the prohibition amendment and the enforcement act could be enforced to that extent and to that alone, except that congress could, as stated, make American ships dry at all times. The court pointed out that congress had made one exception to the dry rule, and that was the Panama canal, through which ships of all nations with intoxicating liquor aboard, could sail.

The court announced that foreign ships are not a part of the territory of the country whose flag they fly, but are subject to the laws of the nation whose port they visit. The prohibition amendment and the enforcement act were directed, the court declared, to make unlawful the transportation of liquor. Such a national policy could be effectively enforced within the territorial jurisdiction of the country without respect to the laws of other nations.

The United States, having complete jurisdiction over the vessels of all nations within its harbors and three miles to sea had determined, the courts said, to make them "bone dry." It had not qualified that policy in any way, it was pointed out, even to the extent of permitting foreign ships to bring in liquor for the use of their crews as required by the laws of their respective countries.

Many questions considered of importance by counsel for the steamship companies were permitted by the court to go unanswered. Nothing was said in the opinion of the complications which it was alleged would arise should nations requiring intoxicating liquor to be carried on ships flying their flags have such regulations interfered with by American law. It was strenuously contended in presenting the cases to the court that grave consequences might develop should foreign vessels be permitted to enter American ports without having liquor aboard, or ward described the ruling. He said should American ships ask clearance papers without liquor aboard when the laws of the country in which the port was located required them to have a specified stock before sailing. Nothing was said by the court on either issue, nor did the court make any reference to the question of having liquor aboard ships in American waters exclusively for medicinal use.

Diplomatic negotiations may have to be resorted to in a settlement of these and other questions, including the supply of liquor for diplomatic representatives in the United States. The bringing of intoxicating liquor into American waters being completely prohibited, diplomats, it was pointed out in some quarters, are shut off from their supply.

The decision of the supreme court, however, may not go down as a mandate to the lower court for thirty days, and that court must then modify its decree to correspond to it.

In the meantime it is expected the treasury will be ready to announce new regulations desired to cope with the situation, Secretary Mellon, declaring that no attempt would be made to force foreign steamship companies to immediately adjust their service to meet the requirements of the law laid down by the court, said that a date would be set by which the new regulations would become effective.

Another difficulty in the way of enforcement loomed in the wake of the court decision. Some treasury officials insisted that the decision would require inspection of every vessel entering an American port. Mr. Mellon was said to regard it as physically impossible to have all ships boarded but he is understood to believe that a majority of the larger lines will obey the new effect of the law.

Information regarding the decision was conveyed to the shipping board while it was in its regular Monday meeting.

Chairman Lasker, who has repeatedly asserted his belief that American ships were within their legal right in maintaining bars on the high seas, was said to have decided against any action, however, as a matter of public policy.

After the meeting of the board the chairman issued the following statement:

"My actions showed before, in serving liquor, that I thought if we were to have an American merchant marine with all the other handicaps, it should at least have the right to meet foreign competition in every way the law permitted. Because I thought the law permitted the serving of liquor, I served liquor and only quit serving it when I was instructed by the president to do so. Until he changes those instructions or the board after review reaches a different decision, liquor will not be served so far as I am concerned, though I still feel that American ships should have every facility that the law permits.

"I do know from my talks with the president that his view is based on the position that government owned ships in the intent of congress might be considered government territory; that is, he feels that in the spirit of the law they are different from privately owned ships. Therein we differed, I want to say in fairness to the president. It now becomes in my view entirely a question of policy."

PLACES AMERICAN SHIPS ON EQUAL BASIS WITH FOREIGN

New York, April 30.—American ships will be placed on an equal basis with those of foreign lines as the result of the supreme court's ruling today permitting United States vessels to sell liquor beyond the three mile limit, provided none is brought into port, it was declared tonight by Ira M. Campbell, counsel to the American Steamship Owners' association.

Mr. Campbell based his assertion on that portion of the ruling which prohibits foreign vessels from bringing their stocks of wet goods within the three mile zone, thus making all ships actually dry when they touch American ports. Foreign owners were silent, although the ruling was discussed at a meeting of the International Mercantile Marine today.

Although he said he had not yet read the decision Mr. Campbell said from press reports he considered the decision a distinct victory for American owners.

"It places American ships on a parity with foreign owned and operated vessels," he said, "and removes at once a serious disadvantage to the operation of American ships. The decision should be especially advantageous to American ships in the South American and Oriental trade where light wines and beers are considered part of the food diet. I believe the decision will result in many Americans taking American boats for passage to Europe where, because of the adverse ruling, they chose to take ships flying foreign flags."

The ruling was also greeted with favor by Palmer Canfield, federal prohibition director for New York, and by William Hayward, United States attorney, to whom is given the task of prosecuting many violations of the liquor law.

"This will make permanent the restrictions in effect since the decision of Judge Learned Hand," said Mr. Canfield. "For six months no vessels, either foreign or American, have been able to bring liquor into American ports for beverage purposes. The foreign ships have been able to bring in liquor as ships stores for the crews, but now, as I understand it, they will not be able to do that."

A 99 per cent. victory for the government was the way Attorney Hayto the question as to whether American ships could carry liquor outside the three mile limit was, after all, only an academic legal question so far as prohibition was concerned. The big question, he said, was whether either foreign or American vessels could bring drinkables into the harbors of the United States under the guise of their being stores or medicine. The trouble with this practice, he said, was the fact that too much of the "medicine" found its way ashore.

Scudder-Robere Marriage.

London, April 30.—Evarts Scelye Scudder, son of Dr. and Charles Locke Scudder of Boston, was married in Brompton Oratory today to Donna Elena Lante Della Robere, daughter of the Duke and Duchess Lante Montesseltro Della Robere of Rome. The Robere are one of the most prominent families of Italy. Many well known Americans and Britishers were present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Scudder will make their home in London.

SEARCHING FOR WIFE OF MURDERED MAN

Aurora, Ill., April 30.—City and county authorities were searching tonight for the body of Warren J. Lincoln, former attorney and prominent nurseryman, who they believe was beaten to death with an Indian club as he lay in bed last night, and his body spirited away.

John Lincoln, 20 years old, son of the missing man, was arrested late today in a Chicago drug store where he was employed and was held for questioning by the Chicago police.

The elder Lincoln was missing when his brother Edward, his partner in the nursery business, went to his home, about a mile and a half from here, this morning. His clothes were piled on a chair in his bedroom and brother told the police, while in a greenhouse near by was found a large pool of blood, a blood-stained Indian club and a partly emptied flask of whiskey.

Lincoln's wife, from whom he is separated, is missing. The authorities are searching for her and for a brother, B. L. Shoup, who lived at the Lincoln home for a time, and with whom Lincoln is said to have quarreled.

The missing man is said to have been a distant relative of Abraham Lincoln. When his home was built many years ago he gave the architect instructions to follow the outline of the dodecahedron.

After a day spent in the progress dragging of the Fox river and an irrigation well, the police tonight centered their efforts in apprehending Mrs. Lincoln and her brother.

SHARP BREAK IN PRICES IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, April 30.—One of the sharpest breaks in recent months took place in today's active session of the stock market, popular industrial issues dropping 1 to 7 points and rail shares 1 to nearly 5 points, the low Saturday's closing level. Professional operation for the decline, founded on the recent disquieting developments in the sugar and oil industries furnished the impetus for the reaction which was added to by the calling of loans by banks and a anticipation of May 1st settlements, as the closing out of weakened speculative accounts.

Stock prices have been fluctuating within a narrow area since early March. Prices continued to sag throughout the opening today but the succeeding fluctuations came in the late hour when approximately 40 per cent of the day's business was transacted.

Several market leaders, including U. S. Steel, Texas Co., Southern Pacific and New York Central declined to their lowest prices of the year. The day's sales ran over a 1,000,000 shares.

ARE CHINESE POLICE SUPERIOR TO AMERICAN?

New York, April 30.—Chinese police authorities are more successful in checking activities of opium smugglers than the police of this country are in combatting whiskey bootleggers, C. C. Wang, chief police inspector of Nanking, province of Kiangsu, China, said today. He is here as a delegate to the international police conference which opens tomorrow.

Inspector Wang denied the recent statement of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, assessor of the opium advisory committee of the league of nations, that opium growing, as well as the smuggling of opium, is on the increase in China.

"The production and importation of opium has been forbidden for many years," he said. "Opium is smuggled into China the same as whiskey is smuggled here, but I think we are more successful in fighting the smugglers than you are here."

SHERIFF SHOT IN FIGHT WITH A MOONSHINER

Dixon, Ills., April 30.—Sheriff E. C. Rosley, former University of Indiana football star and seven deputies were beaten in a gun fight with Elmer Roberts, an alleged moonshiner and his housekeeper in a farm house near Ambery last night. Several shots were fired and the sheriff was struck but not badly injured. Armed with state warrants and accompanied by a formidable crowd of deputies, all carrying high powered rifles, the sheriff returned to the scene this afternoon to get his man.

MALFEASANCE CHARGE AGAINST FLORIDA JUDGE

Tallahassee, Fla., April 30.—Governor Hardee today recommended to the Florida senate that County Judge B. F. Willis be removed from office on charge of malfeasance growing out of the death of Martin Tabert of Munich, N. D., in the private convict lease camp of the Putnam Lumber company at Chara. He was the second official of Leon county to be recommended for removal. Final consideration went over until tomorrow.

Business Men Are Becoming Cautious

Boston, April 30.—Cautious attitude noticeable among business men at present is "a factor which fundamentally strengthens the situation," says the Monthly Review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston issued tonight.

"Manufacturing activity in New England," the Review says, "remains at a high percentage of capacity, although there has been little increase during recent weeks, largely because of the labor shortage. At the same time many concerns are producing an output about equal to that reached at the peak in 1920, if not even larger, and are doing it with a relatively smaller number of employees and less overtime, a condition apparently indicative of some increase in labor efficiency during the past two years. Greater production per man is probably is one of the factors making possible the present high scale of wages, as well as the numerous increases recently granted.

"While the general outlook for most industries continues bright it appears that during the latter part of March and extending into April there was a decline in the volume of new business in many parts of the country. There have been several similar periods of quietness during the business recovery of the past year or two and each was followed by greater activity than before. There are no important signs to indicate that the present slowing down in orders is of more significance or more widespread than earlier ones. Nevertheless it should be noted that two of the important industries handling agricultural products, namely, cotton and cotton manufactures, are being affected as well as New England as in other parts of the country.

"The essential attitude of business men on the outlook for the near future is more cautious than it was a month ago. The average man of affairs is now using a much more conservative basis for the future trend of business conditions than a year of sustained prosperity would warrant.

"The study of business cycles does not indicate any impression that hard times inevitably follow good business, and consequently while many people have a more cautious attitude in regard to future business conditions than previously, a general feeling of pessimism which prices are reflecting. A few concerns seem to be doing nothing at present, but the majority are still operating with a relatively small inventory and retail purchases, for example, have compared favorably with those of a year ago as well as sales of wholesale dry goods houses. Express companies report the volume of business handled by them as very satisfactory, while reports from railroad executives indicate that the movement of commodities is keeping pace with the increased production of the country. The freight car situation, however, is not entirely satisfactory, and there is a shortage in the number of coal cars in operation. Reports from the banks of the country indicate that the banking situation is in a very satisfactory condition, with a large volume of funds available for commercial purposes at relatively low rates. The banks of the country are in a position to meet any demands which may be made upon them from their own business customers or from business interests seeking additional funds. From a purely banking standpoint credit conditions, however, would seem to be fully adequate

Twelve cases were heard Monday morning at the session of police court. Six were for gambling, five for intoxication and one was for reckless driving. Edward Willis was fined $10 and costs when he pleaded guilty to intoxication and the assessment was paid. Frank Civolette drew a fine of $5 and costs for a charge of intoxication to which he pleaded guilty. Michael Grady, Michael Moquin and John Hearne, all boarders at the Corporation boarding house on Main street were also charged as being week-end intoxicants and all pleaded guilty except Grady who had an additional charge of breach of the peace. Moquin and Hearne were each fined $5 and costs, totalling $12.15 and the case against Grady was continued until next Saturday morning.

Following are the young men whose ages ranged from 17 to 22 and who were charged with gambling by shooting craps: Andrew Fuchs, Fred Lerol, N. Hanson, Levi Lucy, Arthur Lagace and Jean Montigne. Pleas of guilty were entered by all but Leroy and Montigne. Officer Frank McLean testified to seeing the group of boys in a circle while he was riding up Main street near Mansfield avenue. He went to the scene and found that the group were engaged in "calling the bones." Fuchs had the dice at the time and the stakes were for $2.16. The cases against Leroy and Montigne were nolled and the remainder were fined $2 and costs amounting to $7.16, which was paid.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. House of 125 Valley street, this city, announce the marriage of their daughter, Gladys Adelle, to William E. Holcomb of Hartford on Saturday, April 28. The couple were united at the home of Willis H. Butler of Washington street, pastor of the Congregational church of Hartford. They were the recipients of beautiful gifts, including silver, aluminum ware, money and cut glass. Upon their return from their honeymoon the newlyweds will be tendered a reception at the home of Mrs. Mae Corcoran of Ashley street, Hartford, given by the friends of Mrs. Holcomb and fellow employes in the listing room of the Underwood Typewriter company where the bride has been employed for the past four years.

The groom has been manager of the collection department of a well known magazine and other periodicals for a number of years.

Chief of Police Daniel J. Killourey will probably not be transferred to the Veterans' Reserve Force on May 3 as was expected as the result of a resolution to that effect introduced at the April meeting of the board of aldermen.

Mayor Charles A. Gates states that the resolution was simply an approval of the plan being considered by the police committee and not in the nature of an order directing that the chief be retired on that date.

As the police committee have not as yet reached an agreement as to the amount of pension to be drawn by Chief Killourey it has been declared by Mayor Gates that there will be no changes in the department until the committee have decided upon an amount and it has been approved by himself. Before pension is effective and the chief is retired, the police committee must come to a unanimous agreement and it must meet the mayor's approval.

It is intimated by Mayor Gates that upon reaching an agreement the chief will be placed on the Veterans' Reserve Force list and men would be appointed to temporarily fill the offices of the police department up to such a time as he saw fit to present the names of permanent appointees to the board of aldermen for its approval.

NUGGETS HAVE FIRST WORKOUT IN PREPARATION FOR TWILIGHT LEAGUE

About 18 candidates for the Nuggets baseball team turned out for practice at the Academy campus on Monday evening and barring sore arms and a few sore leg muscles the boys seem in fit condition. The practice Monday evening was light owing to the cold weather, but on Wednesday evening Manager George Madden expects to put his team through some snappy work.

The Nuggets this season will put a strong team in the field, according to Manager Madden, and will enter the Twilight league with the firm determination of copping the flag and trophy. Manager Madden in discussing the prospects of his team said he had yet to find a team that he thought could trim his Nuggets. To substantiate his claim he said that he would do none of the pitching himself, and he said: "You can depend on that."

The way the team lines up this season will be Manchester or "Pop" Murphy doing the backstop work; Mike Kelly, veteran of last year, Bill Wright and Hal Hull, pitchers; Ed Harris, on first; Mcnight, second; Eddie McKay, short; Joe Burke, third; Hull, Standish, Warwick and Murphy in the outfield.

BRILLIANT INFIELD WORK WINS FOR CINCINNATI

Cincinnati, April 30.—Sensational work by the Cincinnati infield enabled the home team to make it two straight from Chicago by a score of 6 to 4. Rixey was hit freely but was aided by four lightning double plays. Cheeves was wild and lasted only two innings while Fussell was hit hard in the fourth and sixth. The score:

GIANTS TURN TABLES ON BROOKLYN AND WIN

New York, April 30.—After losing three straight games, the New York Giants defeated Brooklyn in a fast played game today, 4 to 3. McQuillan was effective after the first inning, while Reuther was handicapped by poor support in the Brooklyn infield.

Frisch led at bat for New York with a double, two singles and a base on balls in four times at bat. Score:

HARMON SETS NEW ROLLER SKATING RECORD

Houston, Tex., April 30.—Leo Harman, of Houston, holds the roller-skating record of the world, it is said here. He went 50 hours, stopping at 10.40 Sunday night. Frank Paladino left the floor at 2.40 Sunday morning, leaving Harman as the lone skater. Harman used only two pairs of skates and was not suffering from blistered feet when he stopped.

CARDINALS MAKE IT FOUR STRAIGHT FROM PIRATES

St. Louis, April 30.—St. Louis made it four in a row by defeating Pittsburgh today, 7 to 5.

Just before game time, members of both teams grouped around the plate and, with heads bared, stood for two minutes in a silent tribute to Umpire Sentelle, who died Friday. The score:

JACK DEMPSEY IS MATCHED TO FIGHT TOM GIBBONS NEXT FOURTH OF JULY

Chicago, April 30. (By the A. P.)—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, will defend his title against Tom Gibbons, St. Paul challenger, at Shelby, Montana, on July 4, in a 15 round to a decision contest, Loy Molumby, state commander of the Montana American Legion, announced tonight. Molumby said that an agreement was reached tonight over long distance telephone with Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager. All that remains to be done, Molumby said, is to sign the articles and select the referee.

Articles of agreement will be signed Wednesday or Thursday in either New York or Chicago, Molumby indicated. He said he expected Kearns to come here to sign the formalities, but that if he did not Molumby expected to go to New York by airplane.

While the agreement under which Dempsey will fight was not announced by Molumby, it was learned that the champion will be handed a certified check for $100,000 as soon as the articles are signed. It was intimated that Kearns had agreed to a plan providing for a guarantee for Dempsey, with the privilege of a percentage of the gate.

Shelby, Montana, the site of the encounter, will prove a much different experience for Dempsey than the scenes of his previous fights since becoming champion. It is a town of less than 1,000 persons, located in the midst of the Montana oil fields.

KEARNS DECLINES TO DISCUSS PROPOSED BOUT

New York, April 30.—Jack Kearns, manager of Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey, tonight declined to discuss the Associated Press report from Chicago that he had agreed in a long distance telephone conversation for a title match with Tom Gibbons of St. Paul, July 4 at Shelby, Mont.

Earlier in the evening, before the Chicago report arrived, however, Kearns freely discussed terms for the proposed match and said he expected a telephone call from Loy Molumby, Montana, commander of the American Legion, who made the announcement in Chicago.

Molumby proposed, said Kearns, that Dempsey be guaranteed $300,000 for the bout. A certified check for $100,000 would be paid when the contract was signed, $100,000 more would be paid within a month and the third $100,000 at least 48 hours before Dempsey entered the ring. The champion would have the option of 60 per cent. of the gate receipts.

Gibbons Knocks Out Wiggins.

New Orleans, La., April 30.—Tommy Gibbons, of St. Paul, knocked out "Chuck" Wiggins, of Indianapolis in the tenth round of a scheduled fifteen round bout here tonight.

ARE SOME TRACK RECORDS AUTHENTIC

Many records have been made at the track meets held during the indoor season now closed, but there has been quite a bit of doubt expressed by athletic experts as to whether some of the marks that have been announced from time to time as new world's records really were the best performances ever made.

It was the belief of a few that some of the performances made by Joie Ray during the winter were not as good as the records made by some of the Scandinavian stars last fall.

All of this doubt was cleared away last week with the appearance of the Official Athletic Almanac for 1923. This book contains the revised list of world's, American, intercollegiate and interscholastic records, and the records and champions of England, Sweden, France, Finland, Australia, Belgium, Germany and Ireland.

The book shows that Paao Nurmi, of Finland, did run three miles and 5,000 meters in faster time than did Willie Ritola or Joie Ray. It clears up a number of other questions on records that have been very much in doubt during the indoor season.

THIS MAKES A CLASSY LITTLE BALL TEAM

Will 1923 be able to show as fine a team as good as this, made up of pastimers who, up to 1922, never had played in the majors:

Pitcher—Leverette of the White Sox, graduate of Fort Smith, Western association (Class C). Won 13 and lost 10 games.

Catcher—Mattox of the Pirates, graduate of Rochester, International league (Class AA). Batted .294 in 29 games.

First Baseman—Bottomley of the Cardinals, graduate of Syracuse, International league (Class AA). Batted .328 in 37 games.

Second Baseman—Blades of the Cardinals, graduate of Houston, Texas league (Class A). Batted .360 in 37 games.

Third Baseman — Haney of the Tygers, graduate of Omaha, Western league (Class A). Batted .352 in 81 games.

Outfielder—Harper of the Reds, graduate of Oklahoma City, Western league (Class A). Batted .340 in 128 games.

Outfielder—Bert Griffith of the Superbas, graduate of New Orleans, Southern league (Class A). Batted .308 in 106 games.

Outfielder—Bob Fothergill of the Tygers, graduate of Rochester, International league (Class AA). Batted .322 in 42 games.

LOCAL RING ASPIRANT GETTING INTO CONDITION

Kid Miller, local aspirant for bantamweight honors here and elsewhere, is training hard for his coming bout with K. O. Brown of Jersey City at a Harlem athletic club arena on May 18. The Kid is under the tutelage of Young Joe Gans, a former stable mate of Jamaica Kid on Joe Gans.

Miller is young and needs lots of experience but is earnest in his efforts to make good. He is willing to work and under the direction of Gans his performance against the Jersey battler should be the best since his entry into the squared circle. The accompanying photograph shows the Kid in his characteristic fighting pose a la Battling Nelson.

TO DECIDE ON EASTERN CONN. LEAGUE TONIGHT

Tuesday night will decide the fate of the Eastern Conn. league.

President L. M. Carpenter will call the meeting to order at the Ashland club at 8 o'clock and if there are any teams in this section that wish to attend the meeting, this is their last chance to make a bid for a berth in the league.

There is still a vacancy in the league to fill and unless some desirable team makes application for it at this meeting, it is possible that the league may be abandoned for this season.

It is a well known fact that every club in Eastern Connecticut furnishes the grand old pastime to the fans at a financial loss every season, and if the teams would only get together and form a league taking in the best towns in this section, this financial loss could be eliminated and no doubt baseball could be run on a profitable basis.

There are a few who are willing to lend their efforts and give their time to see a good league through, but unless there is more enthusiasm at this meeting the plan will be abandoned for this season at least.

ACADEMY PLAYS WESTERLY AT CAMPUS TODAY

At the Academy campus this afternoon at 3 o'clock the Academy team meets the Westerly High team in the first home game of the Interscholastic Baseball league. Westerly has a good team and recently trimmed Bulkeley 9 to 8, and Bulkeley in turn overwhelmed the local school.

Coach McKay has been drilling his boys hard since their recent defeats and has made a shift in his lineup. Walz will probably be McKay's choice to start in the box, with "Butch" Mileski on the receiving end. This will be Mileski's first game since his injury in the first game of the season. Burke will be at first. McGowan will be shifted from second to short and Tombari will play the keystone position. Phil McNamara will be at third. In the outfield will be Hinricks, Kilroy and Cohen.

This combination looks the best of any tried this season and should make a splendid showing against the Westerly team.

COLUMBIA TO BE GRANTED AN EXTENSION OF TIME

Halifax, N. S., April 30.—Trustees of the international fishermen's trophy were reported today to favor granting the request of owners of the Columbia, the newly built American entry, for an extension of the time in which, under the conditions of the trophy, their craft must sail for the fishing banks.

In the absence of the chairman of the board of trustees, another member said the committee had agreed to allow the Columbia "a reasonable time" to complete her outfitting and start on her first cruise. The time was to have expired this midnight but reports from Shelburne, N. S., where the Columbia was outfitting, said Captain Alden Geele would be unable to fill his crew and get certain necessary fishing equipment installed by that time.

PADDOCK STARTS TRAINING FOR PARIS GAMES

Paris, April 30.—(By the A. P.)—Charles Paddock, the California sprinter started training in earnest at Pershing stadium yesterday to compete in the Paris University club games next Sunday, notwithstanding the ruling of the American A. A. U. to the contrary. Paddock said today that he found the running track in the stadium very fast and that he expected to make better time in competition than he did at Antwerp.

Paddock is very popular with the French public, and the announcement that he would train in public brought several hundred spectators to the stadium to see him work, notwithstanding the fact that he chose an early hour in the morning for it.

WORCESTER SWAMPS BRASCOS IN FIFTH INNING SLUGFEST

Waterbury, April 30.—Worcester defeated Waterbury in a heavy hitting game here today, 10 to 3. The Boosters staged a slugfest in the fifth and scored nine runs on a triple, two doubles, six singles and a pass and an error. Manager Herman Bronkie pitched the final inning for Waterbury. He was touched for four hits when accounted for one run. The last two batters that faced him were struck out. The trick was accomplished with the bases occupied. The score by innings:

DEWEY AT MANILA BAY.

Today marks the 25th anniversary of that famous Battle of Manila bay at which Admiral Dewey made such a remarkable cleanup of the Spanish fleet and dealt a death blow to the activities of the Spanish in the Pacific during the Spanish-American war. That great victory was far reaching. It entirely changed the complexion of the war and was preliminary to the capture of Manila which soon followed.

But that blow by Dewey was more than it appeared at the time. It gave greater prestige to the American fleet than had been possessed previous to that date, had a tremendous influence upon the activities in Cuba and placed this country in an important position among the world powers.

Before that time we had kept strictly in our own back yard. We believed in the policy of isolation and we stuck by it. We had no desire to enter into the affairs of other nations. Spain forced it and there was nothing else to do. We were put to a test in which we realized that there could be but one result, and yet, as it was afterwards shown, we were none too well prepared for it in many particulars.

By the time of the battle of Manila bay, however, we demonstrated the daring and the marksmanship of the American navy, and what was done by Dewey to the Pacific fleet of the Spanish was during the following summer administered to the unsuspected Spanish fleet at Cuba.

From that time our obligations have increased and our standing has gained, and marked is the contrast of our position among the world powers today to what it was before that demonstration which Dewey gave after being given orders to operate against the Spanish fleet. Step by step have we developed our position until today we are told that no great international movement can hope to succeed without the participation of the United States. We are certain to "remember the Maine," but while we do we cannot well forget Dewey at Manila bay.

DANGEROUS PLAYTHINGS.

At Central Falls, R. I., the police have been ordered to arrest all children playing with bows and arrows, slingshots and similar playthings. This order has come about as the result of the blinding of an eleven-year-old girl when a boy with a bow and arrow shot it in such a way that it struck her in the eye and as the result she has permanently lost the sight in that eye.

It wasn't a case where the youngster sought to do any such thing. He had a dangerous plaything and without fully realizing what the consequences might be took a shot while she was in the yard with him watching him use the bow and arrow. Dick Deadeye couldn't have found the mark any more successfully and the deplorable affair directs attention to the danger that exists from the use of what might ordinarily be regarded as harmless and interesting toys. Used in the right way and with due caution they may be so regarded, but there is no certainty that the proper care will be exercised. They are invariably in the hands of those who have little thought of care or the harm that is likely to result from the lack of it.

The situation is much the same as that which develops frequently from the use of air rifles. The fun that can be had with them is unquestioned. Every boy has a longing for the possession of one sooner or later, but the injury inflicted by them is painful and distressing when recklessness or lack of ease results in injury to some companion or other person. Waterbury recently had occasion to deal with air rifles quite the same as Central Falls has with the bows and arrows and as a result greater safety prevails.

Playthings as such as highly desirable and necessary. No one can wish to restrict them unnecessarily, but when there are those that can be and are used in such a way as to permanently injure, there is provided the best of reasons for just such tragic action as certain communities have taken.

SHIP HIM AWAY.

In view of the character of business in which he appears to have been engaged the authorities of Boston did an extremely wise thing in deporting about the arrest and detention of a resident of that city who was operating his efforts to the sale of a device which facilitated the setting of fires and from the literature which was used in connection with it did want the incendiary or the tools needed to successfully carry their dastardly word.

It seems it was particularly pointed out that the device could be used secretly for setting fires and would operate so that the person using it would be far away by the time any trouble was discovered told much of the invention. What the claims may have been it would it was intended [illegible] were absolutely false.

upon destruction. It even gave encouragement to those who might have had a desire to burn or destroy but who feared the probability of being caught through the use of the common torch.

In connection with his arrest the authorities have learned that the accused is a British subject, although he has been a resident of this country for the past 27 years. Though he has made no effort to become a citizen it will be interesting to know what his record has been during that quarter of a century if such can be ascertained.

When a person is engaged in that kind of business it is easy to regard him as an undesirable alien, one who ought to have been kept out but inasmuch as he was able to get in and put into operation his dangerous ideas ought to be branded for what he is, following conviction, and deported. This country wants no more of him. It has no reason to even desire to pay the expenses of his term in the penitentiary. It is time to turn him back to the country to which he holds allegiance and warn it of the character of the man that it may properly guard itself against his inclinations. No opportunity should be lost to get rid of such undesirables.

LIQUOR ON SHIPS.

A decision of much importance is that which has been handed down by the United States supreme court relative to the sale of liquor on American ships and the bringing of liquor into the ports or within the three mile limit of this country on any ship, whether American or foreign.

In interpreting the law the court holds that any ship bringing liquor within the three-mile limit violates the prohibition law, but that any vessel, including American, can sell it to passengers outside that limit.

This places American and foreign ships upon the same basis and removes the discrimination that has existed. It is therefore an advantage gained for American ships, inasmuch as hitherto the sale of liquor on American vessels anywhere, even outside the three-mile limit, has been prohibited. Because of this situation American ship owners and operators have maintained that business was being driven to foreign ships. Undoubtedly much business was but under the new decision it will be regained, provided some way is devised of removing the stock of liquors when coming to this country and taking it aboard again on leaving, somewhere outside the three mile limit.

The supreme court decision will not satisfy the foreign ship owners and operators. It will not please the prohibition forces. It does mean that all ships are to be treated alike beyond our territorial limits by the removal of the restrictions which have existed on American ships.

The problem now is to establish a liquor service station for all ships somewhere beyond the three mile limit.

SENATOR NELSON.

Long, valuable and conspicuous had been the service of Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota in the congress of the United States. It was a job for which he was well fitted, one in which he fully assumed his responsibilities and in which he took a conscientious interest. It was the welfare of the nation that was uppermost in his activities, and the state and the country have suffered a distinct loss in his death.

Senator Nelson was a native of Norway but no better American could be asked than he has proved to be. His was a humble beginning, starting as he did as a newsboy in Chicago, the job which has been the start for many men of wealth and prominence, he pushed his way rapidly to the front. He became prominent as a lawyer and a leader among the Scandinavian settlers in the northwest. His judgment was prized and dependence upon him was unwavering. He was not carried off his feet by the whims as they came and went. He was a steadfast legislator and it is a distinct loss which any legislative body suffers when such a man is taken away.

Few are there who are able to or desire to continue such duties up to and beyond four score years, but Senator Nelson was a tower of strength in body as well as mind. What the right kind of immigrants can do for this country, or have done for it, is well illustrated in his case. If all were of such a type there would be no call for the putting up of the bars or thought of denying any of them admission.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Moving day, and all the world watches the mover.

For those who desire, "Oh, that we were a Maying" can now become a reality.

The man on the corner says: Even an open mind needs a housecleaning once in a while.

Mounts Stromboli and Etna have erupted again. But they are also certain of plenty of human emulators.

As the oyster retires to seclusion for the next four months, the lobster and the strawhat are sure to make a bid for popularity.

After Mr. Ford winters a factory full of farmers in one of his new plants how does he expect to get them back to the farm after the snow melts?

Now that it has been found that gasoline can be extracted at less expense, does it mean relief for the consumer or bigger profits for the refiner, or both?

When the consumers stop buying sugar they'll not only save money but quickly drive the speculators to cover. Nothing makes them squeal more than a loss.

Lord Robert Cecil says the league can get along without the United States for a while. According to President Harding it is going to do so for longer than that.

Babe Ruth says those who tried to frame him up and now admit it are not going to go scot free. That is the proper attitude and the punishment of such framers would be beneficial.

UNDYING BELIEF

"My goodness!" shrieked the girl who fondly thought she had pinned up her bobbed hair so that nobody would know it had been bobbed, here's all about the wedding of Jimmy Richpoor and that Glycerine Brittle we used to know at college! He's the man who was crazy about you two years ago, Nectarina! How does it seem to realize that a wild adorer has really gone and forgotten all about one?"

"You can't make any woman believe a man who ever looked at her twice ever can forget her," morosely pronounced the cynic who proudly admitted that he was a cynic. "Any man foolish enough to insist to a girl that he is in love with her is targed for life. The girl may not care a hoot for him but her proprietary interest in him never dies. Without a quiver she can hear of his marriage three times in succession because she is so secretly certain that his love for her was the one great love of his life and that the others were mere makeshifts. She pities the poor boy in his desperate attempts at forgetting her and revels in the idea of his perpetual unhappiness.

"He may develop into a fat, jovial, contented individual who bores the community with his constant boasting about his wife and progeny, but she smiles serenely, knowing that it is merely his way of covering up his empty life.

"Why, my grandmother had a large family and a dozen grandchildren, and led a blameless life of devotion to her husband, but whenever any one mentioned Ebeneezer Butterfingers, the millionaire philanthropist, she would look conscious and sigh until somebody would anxiously inquire the trouble. Grandmother would begin by saying that she supposed you didn't know that she and Ebeneezer played together when they were children and lived next door. Why, Ebeneezer never even looked at another little girl—and he was that way all through high school, too! Absolutely devoted.

"Of course it was so gradual that she didn't realize — she would have scorned to encourage a man and give him hope when there was none, and really, in spite of their long friendship, you could have knocked her down with a feather when he made such a scene over her refusal.—She really thought he would lose his mind for a time and his family was terribly anxious about him.

"It was an awful situation for her, but what was a girl to do when she just simply didn't care about a man and had only the friendliest, most sisterly feeling for him? Ebeneezer had been a pale little boy and he always did have those pop eyes and no chin to speak of—wasn't it wonderful that he had become so rich and famous! Sometimes a great disappointment was the making of a man's character.

"Of course Ebeneezer had been divorced and married twice and his second wife had run away with somebody and it did seem as though fate was determined to show him that one cannot trifle with real love. Not that grandmother would have wanted him to live a lonely, unwedded life simply because he had not got the girl he really wanted—but, well, things certainly did turn out queer! Poor Ebeneezer, it was a shame! And grandmother would purr like her own tabby cat, perfectly happy in the firm belief that she had wrecked the life of Ebeneezer Butterfingers and that he had not known a happy moment since she had refused him!

"I tell you, the kindest-hearted women on earth will act exactly after this fashion and it's a shame to spill the beans! The truth is that all the Ebeneezer Butterfingers couldn't for the life of 'em recite, right off and without thinking, the names of their boyhood sweethearts about whom they were so desperate.

"The world is so jammed full of women they have discovered during their pilgrimage, that the difficulty is in dodging them. And their only emotion left toward the girl in the dim past is one of great gratitude that there at least was one girl who had sense enough not to marry them and start trouble. Anyhow, by that time, if he does remember her at all it is as a nice girl whom he was dead sure he could have married had he really seriously wanted to!"

"Well, all this doesn't let Nectarina out," persisted the girl with the nearbobbed hair who had been considerably impressed by the lecture. "How about it, old thing?"

"Oh, well," answered Nectarina, "you know, Jimmy Richpoor never did propose to me at all, so the excitement falls flat in this case! But I'll bet I could have made him if I had wanted him to!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Laurel Hill Trees

Mr. Editor: Philistine, Vulgar, Carthaginian, Barbaric are the words some use to describe present day civilization and after reading the proposal to destroy the trees on Laurel Hill avenue, such language is surely justified. I walked through the avenue the other day, and it seemed plain that if 30 or more are cut down there will be few left of any consequence. As for planting some spindling ones, or maples in their place, the present generation cannot hope for any benefit from them even if they live.

Yours truly,

NON-RESIDENT.

Preston, April 29, 1923.

Dogs and Roosters

Mr. Editor: While the dogs are an advantage to the city in one way, they have in many localities become an unbearable nuisance for the reason they are left out at nights for no reason whatever unless it is to entertain and keep the neighborhoods awake. Every person who owns a dog that barks and most of them do, should be required to keep them in the house during the night. It has always been a strange thing to me that persons who keep noisy animals or noisy roosters are never annoyed by these pests themselves so "why should they worry?" If any neighbor makes a reasonable request concerning these nerveracking animals they are either told to mind their own business, or why don't they move?

A NEW VOTER.

Wives of Famous Men

Maria White, Wife of James Russell Lowell.

Maria White Lowell, like her husband, was a poet, and while their life together was not as picturesque and romantic as that of the famous Brownings, they were perfectly suited to each other and the brief time they had together was ideally happy.

Unlike so many poets and other creative artists, the Lowells were never faced with financial difficulties. They did not have to struggle along, unrecognized, but both of them found a ready market for their verse, and with money being earned by both, they were easily able to meet all their obligations. Nor did any friction arise from the fact that Mrs. Lowell "worked." The poet was many years ahead of his generation, and did not share the general masculine feeling prevalent in his day, that a man's dignity was injured if his wife earned money.

Marriage agreed with them in every way. Their work improved; their health improved, and altogether they found peace and comfort in their union. Mrs. Lowell, while not precisely conforming to the classic ideal of beauty, was a pretty woman, with dark hair, shining eyes and an expressive face. At any rate, she was her husband's ideal of beauty.

Their happiness apparently was the kind that is too perfect to last. Illness and death cast their shadow upon the sunshine of the Lowell household. Three of the children died within a short time, and with them Mrs. Lowell seemed to bury most of her vitality. She failed steadily from then on, and although her husband took her to Europe in search of a cure, the effort was unavailing. Soon after their return she died, after nine years of marriage.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rev. Daniel J. Curley, whose consecration as bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Syracuse takes place today in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York city, a native of the metropolis, which has also been the scene of his ecclesiastical labors since his ordination to the priesthood. He pursued his academic studies at St. Francis Xavier College, New York city, and St. Joseph's seminary, at Troy, and then went to Rome to complete his theological education with a four years' course in the American college. Soon after his admission to the priesthood he was appointed curate at the Church of the Holy Name and continued there until 1906, when he was appointed secretary to the late Archbishop Corrigan. On the death of that distinguished prelate Father Curley was made pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Solace and has continued in that position for more than twenty years.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown, N.Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 203 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system, indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

A Little Talk on Thrift

Where Thriftlessness Prevails

All true progress whether individual or national comes from work. This is the inevitable conclusion one reaches after a visit to the countries of the Near East and Southern Europe.

In these various lands one, of course observes various religious, customs, occupations and viewpoints of life. But no matter what these conditions may be, the main course of progress rests solely on work.

Perhaps the most striking example of this fact is found in Egypt which today holds so much of interest for the people of the world. Generally speaking the people of this country do little or no work. They are the last word in thriftlessness. They are not interested in education or apparently in anything else that will improve their condition. They have little to wear. They sleep when they like and they eat when they like, their diet consisting mainly of sugar cane. Yet these people can be made mentally vigorous and alert if the proper examples and teachings are given them by their leaders.

Wherever there is distraction from intelligent and systematic work the inevitable result is stagnation. In some of these countries, for example, the distraction is militarism, and, while the training and development of national armies is necessary, too much militarism makes for a life of idleness and creates ideals that are not founded on thrift and industry. One cannot travel through France without being impressed with the thrift of the people, especially the peasant classes. It is evident on every hand. Even along the roadways one sees women gathering wood in vineyards. Small boughs of trees, sticks and dead bushes are of too much value to be wasted, in the estimation of these industrious French people.

What, of course, is most urgently needed in the Near East is political stabilization. The hatreds that exist between some of these people, the cost of military upkeep and the uncertainty of the future are combining to retard these countries. But the elimination of the war menace is not the only requirement for the success of a people.

No matter what a man's circumstances in life may be, his progress stops when he ceases to be a worker.

And the same rule holds true with nations.—American Thrift Society.

Stories That Recall Others

He Admitted It

At a drug store recently a clerk was overheard to call a wholesale drug house on the phone.

"Hello, ——," he said. "I am a clerk in a drug store. There's a lady here who wants to buy some ipecac, and I don't know how to spell it."

Threat of Nickname Was Patent

Some years ago when a certain business man was in school he admits that he cut up a little, but was fearful of a certain nickname.

One day he took with him into the school a copy of "Billy Bowlegs," which he hid in his geography and began to read with avidity. In fact, he became interested and he failed to hear the teacher when the latter called on him for a recitation. Finally he was called to the desk in the front of the room. There was no opportunity to get rid of the book, so up to the desk he walked, book in hand.

Several days later, when he began to whisper and grow fractious, the teacher said to him just two words: "Now Billy."

Instantly the pupil became very quiet and always in the future was a model student, while in that class. For he feared the teacher would disclose the dreadful truth and he would go through school, branded with the name, "Billy Bowlegs."

POETRY

MAYFLOWERS.

If you catch a breath of sweetness
And follow the odorous hint
Through woods where dead leaves rustle
And the gray moss is tinted,

Along the spicy seacoast,
Over the desolate down—
You will find the dainty mayflowers
When you come to Plymouth town.

Where the shy spring tends her darlings
And hides them away from sight,
Pulling the covering leaf-sprays
And gather them, pink and white.

Tinted by mystical moonlight,
Freshened by frosty dew,
Till the fair transparent blossoms
To their pure perfection grew.

Then away them home to your lady;
For flower of the spring is she
Fine and white, and dainty and slight,
And lovely as Love can be.

Shall they die because of beauty?
Shall they live because she is sweet?
They will know the end they were born for,
But you must wait at her feet.

—Louise Chandler Moulton.

ANTARES.

Out of my window, over the tree,
Little Antares is beckoning me!

White and remote are the Bear and the Crown;
Chastely elusive, the Pleiads gleam forth;
Brilliant and stately, Orion looks down!

But Kite Antares is ruddy and gay,
And twinkles a song for the heart that can hear:
"Follow the feet of the moon while you may!
Hasten, for Love may not always be near!

Art is a phantom and wisdom is vain:
Fame and ambition, achievement, success
Shine in the daylight while men count them gain—
Fade into mist in the night's loveliness!

"Love is the first and the last of a life;
Love is the Answer, the Cause and the End;
Hasten while yet the sweet springtime is rife!
Haste where the white, flying moonbeams may tend!"

Out of my window over the tree,
Little Antares is beckoning me!

—Agnes Bligh Turnbull, in New York Sun.

Don't Let High Blood Pressure Shorten Your Life

Those who have suffered from general weakness, dizziness, palpitation and other symptoms of high blood pressure and who have feared that their trouble might even end in sudden death, will be delighted with this new opportunity for quick relief and renewed health.

An eminent physician has been so successful in treating high blood pressure that physicians everywhere have been prescribing his treatment. The use of his prescription has become so wide-spread that it has now been placed in all good drug stores under the name "Bialin."

It is absolutely harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. It acts by driving out even from the most remote corners, which most treatments do not reach, the poisons that clog the system and bring on high blood pressure.

Patients report that their distressful symptoms stop almost immediately and there comes a power and vigor that makes them feel younger and look younger; with every vital organ functioning with the vigor of former years.

OBITUARY.

Nils Johnson.

Friends in this city have received word of the death of Nils Johnson, a former Norwich resident, at his home in Los Angeles on Friday, April 13th. Mr. Johnson had not been well for some time but on April 7th he and his wife celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary in a quiet manner. That night he became ill and soon became unconscious, remaining so until his death.

Mr. Johnson was for many years a prominent tailor in Norwich, having his place of business on Broadway in the block now occupied by the Shetucket Harness Company. Following that for several years he was in the Chapman block. About 15 years ago he moved to Los Angeles, continuing in the tailoring business in that city where he worked up a prosperous business. He had been ill for several months, death resulting from illness of a chronic nature.

He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. B. P. Anderson and Mrs. Lesley Green of California; four sons, Ernest V., who was in business with his father in Norwich, Harold and Albert of Los Angeles, and Frank of Havana, Cuba.

The many friends of Mr. Johnson in Norwich learned of his death with sorrow.

Mrs. Stanislaw Sikorski.

After a short illness Pauline Mondelick, widow of Stanislaw Sikorski, died Sunday at her home at 10 Hadley avenue, aged 80 years. She was born in Germany, the daughter of Joseph and Rose Mondelick, but had spent the greater part of her life in this city.

Surviving are three sons, Gustave, Albert and John Sikorski, and three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Romanoski, Mrs. William Denker and Mrs. Theophil Keller, all of Norwich. There are also other relatives.

Thomas Martin.

Thomas Martin of No. 139 Beaver street, New Britain, died Sunday afternoon at New Britain General Hospital of pneumonia. He had been at the hospital only a few days. He was 67 years old and leaves two sons, Samuel of New Britain and John of Hartford; three daughters, Mrs. William Smith of Camp street, New Britain, Mrs. Goepfert of Norwich and Mrs. Hooper of Brooklyn, N. Y. His wife died a few weeks ago.

Albert Rosenlund.

Albert Rosenlund of the Pequot section of Montville, died Monday at his home. He was a native of Sweden born 72 years ago. Until a year ago he was employed at the Robertson paper mill but was forced on account of his health to retire. He leaves a wife and several sons and daughters.

Amos Lester.

The many friends of Amos Lester will learn with sorrow of his death Sunday at his home in San Jose, California, following an illness of about one week.

Mr. Lester came of an old colonial family, his forefather, Andrew Lester, coming from England to Gloucester, Mass., and settling there on Jan. 7, 1646. He was born in Ledyard Center, Dec. 3, 1839, the son of Isaac Avery Lester and Mary Chapman Lester, and spent his boyhood days in that village. On May 28, 1868 he was united in marriage with Caroline Gallup Spicer of Ledyard Center and continued to live there for several years.

Later with his brothers he went to California and spent several years in farming in that state but again returned east giving up the business he and his brothers were engaged in on Laurel Hill at the Lester place. Removing to California, he engaged in ranching and then operated a large dairy farm supplying all kinds of dairy products to wholesalers. His farm was in Gilrow, Calif., and after being for some time there, he left the farm to his son, Charles, and moved to San Jose to live with his daughter, Mrs. Minnie Clark, on a large ranch. He was always successful in business and kept up interest in home affairs.

On May 28, 1918 he and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and not long afterwards they came to Norwich to visit relatives and friends remaining for some time before returning to San Jose.

About a year ago the family received a sad blow when their son, Charles, a wealthy ranchman, was almost instantly killed in an automobile accident in Gilrow, and at about the same time his last surviving sister, Mrs. Courtland Lamb of Ledyard, this state, passed away.

Mr. Lester is survived by his wife of San Jose, and the following children, Henry, John and Milton, and Mrs. Minnie Clark, all of San Jose; also one brother, Edward Lester, of Ledyard, Conn. There are also six grandchildren and other relatives in Norwich. Three older children, Mr. and Mrs. Lester are buried in the Ledyard cemetery having died before their parents returned to California the second time.

Burial is to be in San Jose, California this (Tuesday) afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, western time.

Older residents of Norwich remember Mr. Lester as a man of character, a real friend and loyal citizen, and the family has their sympathy in their time of sorrow.

RICHARD HOURIGAN POST WILL OPEN NEW ROOMS

Richard Hourigan Post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is to celebrate the opening of their new post rooms in Venice building Wednesday evening. For the past few weeks the entertainment committee in charge of Lewis S. Hull has been arranging for an attractive opening program, and final arrangements call for speaking by Mayor Milo R. Waters, State Commander Williams of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Orrin M. Price, past commander of the Connecticut Department, G. A. R., officers and members of the post.

Following the speaking there will be a smoker during which refreshments will be served. The entertainment of the evening concludes with a dance in Venice hall, music to be furnished by Herb Smith's orchestra.

Richard Hourigan Post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars, since its organization in Norwich early in 1920 has shown a steady growth and today is perhaps the largest veterans' organization in the city, and is the largest organization in the city composed of ex-service men who have seen service in foreign lands. It is planned in the near future to hold a parents' night, when the older people of the city will be invited to come to the new post rooms and inspect the newly furnished quarters of which the post is rightfully proud to occupy.

Florida, were held Monday morning from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony M. Medice of 13 Cove street. The casket was draped with an American flag and there were many floral tributes. Services were held at St. Joseph's church at 8 o'clock, Rev. V. Maciejewski officiating and burial followed in St. Joeph's cemetery, where Rev. Maciejewski read a committal service.

Arrangements were by Shea & Burke.

MADE SUICIDE ATTEMPT BY INHALING CHLOROFORM

Mrs. Ida Durgin, 27, inhaled chloroform with suicidal intent Monday afternoon and was unconscious when found about 4.30 in her room at the McCarthy boarding house at 178 West Thames street. She was rushed to the ambulance to the Backus hospital where medical aid saved her life and Monday night she was reported to be resting comfortably.

It was understood that she declared at the hospital that she was sorry she had not succeeded as she had nothing to live for.

But little was learned by the authorities of her previous history. The woman and her husband came to the boarding house Monday morning and engaged a room. When she was taken to the hospital a man accompanied her there, but he told the hospital authorities he was not her husband.

Word of the suicide attempt was telephoned to police headquarters, whence Officers Morgan and O'Neil were sent to the Thamesville house by Chief George Linton. Meanwhile the ambulance had also been summoned, reaching the house before the officers were able to respond to the call.

PINE TREE DEMONSTRATION PLOTS ARE ESTABLISHED

Through the efforts of Osias Dodge, George A. Ingalls and Grosvenor Ely, representatives for New London county, the Connecticut Forestry association has established demonstration plantations of small white pine trees at the Norwich Golf club and on the property of Charles S. Johnson of Willimantic, and later will set out trees on property of the Connecticut college at New London.

The committee has done this work without funds and the success is due to the co-operation of the Mohegan Park commission which furnished the trees, the Norwich Golf club and Charles S. Johnson who furnished the sites, Willis Austin and George A. Ingalls who furnished the trucks, and other members of the committee who generously gave of their time.

The reports of the Connecticut Forestry indicating the rapid exhaustion of Connecticut timber, the loss by fire of over half a million dollars, much of which was in New London county, have aroused considerable interest in reforestration and forest fire prevention.

Other white pine plantations are being planned and as soon as possible the committee plans to place shade trees along the highways of New London county. The cost of membership in the association is nominal and everyone interested in trees, their planting and preservation is invited to communicate with any member of the committee and information will gladly be given.

COMPROMISE SETTLEMENT AT HALL & GONS' MILL

Meetings between employes and officials of the Joseph Hall & Sons, Inc., mill at Trading Cove, held on Monday resulted in both sides making concessions and the men are to return to work this (Tuesday) morning at 7.15 o'clock, daylight time, to work at an increase of 12 1-2 per cent. in wages. The weekly basis of hours has also been fixed to the satisfaction of both sides at 50 hours a week.

Three weeks ago Monday about 100 employes of the company walked out when their demands of a raise of 12 1-2 per cent. with a 48 hour work week were not met in full by the company, which agreed on the 12 1-2 per cent. raise but held for the 55 hour week.

Efforts to settle the strike were not successful until Monday when full settlement took place.

The employes at a meeting held Monday night in Carpenters' hall voted unanimously to accept the compromise [illegible] between their to organize. The meeting was addressed by Robert McNeely and other union officials. Following the meeting it was stated that arrangements had been made with the company to take back all old employes of the company who might now be working at other trades. These men, it is stated, are to be given opportunity to give notice on their new jobs and return as soon as possible to their old positions in the mill.

MRS. SARAH S. BRADWAY FIVE YEARS PAST CENTURY

A real daughter of the American Revolution, Mrs. Sarah Bosworth Bradway, of Eastford, Conn., reached the age of 105 years Monday and on her anniversary as she entered upon her 106th year she is energetic and her physical activity is amazing, for her mind is clear, her bodily vigor is surprising and the only handicap she encounters are lack of clear vision and a slight deafness. These impairments in her faculties have come since her centennial year. Mrs. Bradway lives at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Darwin Clark (Mary Bradway), at the farm homestead in Eastford.

Born in Eastford on April 30, 1818, Mrs. Bradway has always lived in the little town. About two miles from her home is the house overlooking Crystal Lake that was built by her father, Allen Bosworth, a Revolutionary soldier, and which later was occupied by Elisha Lyon who married Mrs. Bradway's sister, Delosia. Mrs. Bradway's mother was a native of Sutton, Mass., which town is strong in tradition of the Revolutionary period and sent many of her citizens to Connecticut.

Allen Bosworth's Revolutionary record shows that on June 30, 1776, he was a private in Capt. Stephen Lyon's company, Col. John Chester's Connecticut regiment for six months. From May to October 1778, he was in Capt. John Sumner's company in the battle of Rhode Island and from May, 1780 to 1781 in Capt. Benjamin Sumner's company.

Allen Bosworth who was born in Eastford in 1758, had even children in two marriages of whom Mrs. Bradway is the only survivor. She was a child of the second marriage and married William Bradway. Allen Bosworth died on March 18, 1831, and was buried in the old Eastford cemetery where on his daughter's 98th birthday his grave was marked by the Elizabeth Porter Putnam Chapter, D. A. R. of Putnam.

Mrs. Bradway remembers that she began going to school when she was three years old, and that she and her sister, Delosia, were carried on horseback by her father a distance of a mile and a half, for wagons were not in common use on the uncared for country roads of those days. She has a wonderfully keen memory of the events which have marked her long life and have made history. She is an honored member of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., of Putnam, which on Sunday made its annual pilgrimage to visit her, always a real gala day in Mrs. Bradway's life. Monday, her anniversary, was celebrated with a family gathering and an old fashioned New England dinner.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Bradway has another daughter, Mrs. Aaron M. Bowen of Eastford, a son, Selectman Charles W. Bradway of Putnam, died a few years ago, and another son died when he was 27 years of age. Mrs. Bradway has many grandchildren and great grandchildren and has also three great great grandchildren.

SUNSHINE BISCUIT MEN HOLD SALES MEETING

In connection with the opening of the new Norwich agency of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., a sales meeting of eastern Connecticut and Rhode Island representatives of the company was held at the Wauregan hotel Monday, followed by a dinner in the evening.

Plans for the development of business in this section were outlined, as well as a complete program for giving store door delivery service to all grocers in Norwich and vicinity.

There is a special local interest in the coming of Sunshine biscuits to Norwich because the Atlantic Carton Co. of Norwich manufactures all cartons used by Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co. for Tak-Home-a Biscuit and other well know products.

E. W. Rice, New England sales manager addressed the meeting and other representatives of the company who were present and advanced practical sales suggestions were James Gregory, E. H. Fowler, G. F. Moranz and T. J. McGuire.

The company looks forward to a very prosperous business in Norwich.

HEDGE AND TREES FOR NORWICH TOWN GREEN

The 5th annual meeting of the Norwich Rural Association was held Monday evening in the First Congregational chapel with a good number present, including both men and women, and President Grosvenor Ely in the chair.

Philip A. Johnson, secretary and treasurer, gave a detailed report of what the association had accomplished during the past year; also read a summary of the work covered in several former years. The special topics for the evening were discussions on permanent sidewalks, and the beautifying of the Norwich Town green.

The sidewalk committee reported that a number of signed agreements had been received from the residents on Washington street, from Harland's corner to Peck's corner, also several locations on Town street.

Osias Dodge suggested a hedge of shrubbery not to exceed three feet in height, to be made in the form of a crescent at the lower end of the green; also edging the grass and planting new trees, elmtrees in preference to maples. This was adopted and will be carried out by the tree committee, of which Miss Elizabeth Huntington was appointed chairman.

The question of refuse receptacles placed upon the green when brought up, was disregarded because of the fear of unsanitary conditions. The obligation of keeping the green in good condition was pledged by Frederic H. Wyant, scoutmaster of Troop No. 26, in behalf of the scouts, who will make this a part of their civic duty.

The question of collecting garbage from house to house and disposing of same, was deferred to a later date.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, Grosvenor Ely; secretary and treasurer, Philip A. Johnson, both of which were re-elected. Eleven committee [illegible] M. Post

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

At St. James' church at 8 o'clock Monday morning Miss Alice E. Gorman, daughter of Hugh Gorman, Sr., of Brooklyn and Daniel A. Smith, son of Mrs. Mary Smith of Moosup were united in marriage by Rev. J. E. Shelley, M. S., who was also celebrant of the nuptial mass, attended by relatives and many friends of the bride and groom and representative of many towns and cities.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Sarah Gorman and James L. Smith, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride was very beautiful in a gown of white with veil and a bridal bouquet. The bridesmaid was gowned in pink and wore a black hat; her bouquet being of pink flowers.

The bride was met at the entrance of the church by Misses Margaret Head and Margaret Duggan, and presenting the Children of Mary, of which she has long been a member and escorted to the altar rail at the Blessed Virgins altar, where her medal as a member of the society and one of her bouquets was laid and her act of consecration said. She was then escorted within the sanctuary, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

After the marriage mass there was a reception at the home of the bride's father and the bride received the congratulations of those present. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are now away on their wedding trip after which they will make their home in Moosup, where the groom has built a home. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

Norman Ross, youthful member of the Danielson Rod and Gun club, gave the trout fishermen something to think about Monday when he displayed a trout that weighed 2 pounds, 2 1-2 ounces and placed himself right at the head of the list of all the nearly 300 members who entertain any hope at all of winning the club's splendid prize of a $25 trout rod for the largest trout taken in Windham county waters during the present fishing season. Mr. Ross caught the trout in one of the lower reaches of Snake Meadow brook and it was as beautiful a fish of its kind as has been shown here in a number of years—16 1-2 inches in length and exceptionally plump and well rounded out.

It was such a trout as every fisherman has visions of catching some day and that it should be brought in by one still in his teens made all the old timers sit up and take notice. Prophesy is rated a dangerous and unprofitable indulgence, but one may be permitted the comment that Mr. Ross stands an excellent chance of having a high class trout rod handed to him with the compliments of the club on about July 1.

[illegible] appeared unnecessarily rough in passing out of the calendar for another year. Its closing day was raw and blustery with dashes of rain at times, this weather following after one of the most severe southeasterly [illegible] storms in several years. Silos [illegible] blown over, blinds torn from [illegible]es and window panes crushed in [illegible] the gale that developed late Saturday night and raged through the early hours of Sunday. Limbs were torn from trees and roofs damaged in the blow hereabouts.

Despite the damage the storm was welcomed as a protector against the forest fire danger and as bringing relief from a drought such as is rarely ever experienced in a month noted for its showers.

Monday morning the funeral of Miss [illegible] St. Onge was held from her home with funeral services at St. [illegible]' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. Jo[illegible] Moussier, M. S., being celebrant of high mass of requiem attended by relatives and friends resident here [illegible] others from Springfield, Webster and Putnam. Burial was in Holy [illegible] cemetery. The bearers were [illegible] Turgeon, Joseph Ollette, Joseph [illegible]n, Joseph St. Jean, P. Poirier [illegible] Lavallee.

Miss St. Onge died Friday at her home on Dyer street at the age of 79 years. She was a native of Canada, and had lived the greater part of her life in this town. She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Manda Woisard and Miss [illegible] St. Onge, both of Danielson.

Funeral services for Charles T. Westcott were conducted at East Killingly Monday afternoon by Rev. J. [illegible] Carpenter, pastor of the United Baptist church of that place and today the body will be forwarded from Danielson to Sioux City, Iowa, for burial. Mr. Westcott was a resident of Sioux City for many years, though a native of Killingly, to which town he returned about three years ago, having retired from business.

The advantages derived in having deposits in the savings department of the Windham County National bank of Danielson are many, and the officials will be interested in enumerating them to present or prospective depositors. All deposits made in the saving department on or before May 5th will draw interest from May 1, and any deposit of Victory bonds during the month of May will draw interest from May 1. To assist the bank in handling the detail of collecting the bonds they would appreciate deposits made as early in the month as possible. The Windham County National Bank, Danielson, Conn.—adv.

Mrs. Delie Messier, 65 years of age died Sunday at her home on South Chestnut street, Wauregan. She was born in New York state, but came to Wauregan as a girl and had been resident in the house where she died the past 50 years. She leaves her husband and several children.

Under the auspices of the Danielson Firemen's association, the Frank Murphy shows opened Monday on the carnival lot south of Cottage street and drew a large attendance. This is the second appearance here of the Murphy shows, expanded this year into a considerably larger organization than when it previously was in Danielson.

All of the familiar attractions are included in the shows this year, and some new features that add spice and variety. As usual, this show restricts its attractions to lines that eliminate features that are objectionable. This year the show has its own lighting plant and the grounds and all the attractions are brilliantly illumined.

Weather-wise the opening night was not all that could be desired, but the show attracted hundreds of people who found much to amuse and entertain them.

This (Tuesday) evening members of Rose of Lima council, No. 52, K. of C., are to have the pleasure of hearing an address at their rooms by Rev. J. E. Shelley, M. S., an assistant at St. James' church. The address is to be given as a feature of a smoker. This is the last event for the members until after the annual state convention, which is to be held at Stamford next week. The delegates who will represent the local council are the grand knight, Bernard R. Casey and past grand knight, Henry N. Dubuc.

The plant of the French River Textile company at Mechanicsville was closed during Monday while inventory was being made prior to the passing of the plant and other properties connected with it today to the Guerin Mills, Inc., of which Theophile Guerin of Woonsocket is the directing head, the property was included in the estate of the late Frank Bayles, millionaire manufacturer of Pawtucket and Providence.

It was announced in connection with the sale that there will be no change in the policy at the mills for the present, but that the plant hereafter will be operated under the title of the Beechmont Worsted Mills.

The Guerin interests are chiefly French and Belgian and have been remarkably successful in operating worsted mills, the plant taken over at Mechanicsville being the seventh in the Guerin chain.

On Sunday a number of those interested in the Guerin Mills, Inc., were at Mechanicsville inspecting the property and making ready for the inventory, which was being rushed to completion during Monday. Operations will be resumed today.

The plant employes about 450 operatives. Some of these are resident in this city, while others live, exclusive of Mechanicsville, in the Grosvonordales and at Webster and Dudley.

Closing exercises of Putnam's evening school were held Monday evening in the assembly hall of the high school building and attracted many who have become interested in what is being done by Principal L. F. Battey and his able corps of teachers in advancing the educational interests of numbers of young people who for one reason or another had to leave school early in life or who, coming here as aliens unfamiliar with the English language, desire to familiarize themselves with it and the history of the country and the working of its governmental system.

The address of the evening was by Robert C. Demming of New Haven, Americanization director for the state board of education. Mr. Demming's interesting and entertainingly treated subject was The Making of an American. Attendance certificates were presented by Supt. R. S. Jenkins of Putnam's school system. The high school orchestra contributed much to make a splendid success of the evening's exercises.

The evening school has been in session 75 nights since its opening last fall. Much interest has been shown and much progress made by those who have attended. Indicative of the interest aroused among those attending is the fact that on an evening last week eleven of those in the advanced or elementary section of the school took books from the public library, these books on subjects that are instructive and of a nature to generally improve the mind.

In the city court Monday morning Judge M. H. Geissler assessed a fine of $100 and costs of $18.64 on Joseph Morin of this city, guilty of operating an automobile while he was in an intoxicated condition. Morin's appearance in court followed a collision, on the Chepachet route, between the machine he was operating and another car, but fortunately the affair did not [illegible]

[illegible] tages at Oakland Beach over the week end experienced the full fury of the gale that swept the coast during the late hours of Saturday night and the early hours of Sunday morning, playing havoc with shipping and causing loss of life. At the beach the new chutes in course of erection for the coming season were torn apart and hurled down in a tangled mass of lumber by the gale. Motor and fishing boats were torn from their moorings and cast up along the beach or against piling at the water's edge. None of the cottages were damaged in the gale as far as was known here Monday.

It is probable that some plan for more restricted parking regulations in the business section of the borough will have to be worked out if congestion and danger of accidents now existing is to be relieved. The vast increase in the number of motor vehicles owned in this territory and the fact that the new Providence route is diverting additional heavy traffic through Danielson's business section makes the regulation proposition one of vital interest. Main, Center and Academy streets are three thoroughfares that are favorites. These streets are none too wide and when they are lined with parked cars what space remains for driving purposes is very limited.

Up to Monday the Connecticut Co. had made no changes on its local line as to running time due to the introduction of what amounts to daylight saving time in sections of eastern Connecticut. However, the fact that the cars on the line between Central Village and Norwich are on the new time changes the connection hours for points south from Central Village. Cars now connecting leave here on the old hours of the day, whereas throughout the winter the cars leaving here at twenty minutes past the even hours connected at Central Village from Plainfield and points farther south.

May 1—the date on which the small boy used to get out his pea shooter, a barbarity long since discarded, and his tick-tack and whole bag of tricks intended to razz those who were rated as old crabs and would give a live boy a chase if sufficiently stirred up.

Legislators who are returning to Hartford today for the week's sessions find relief in the thought that their work for the session is far advanced and that a recess, prior to final adjournment, may be expected some time bounced by the state trade school in during May.

Special summer courses are announced by the state trade school in Putnam. These courses are open without charge to residents of Killingly and other towns and offer a splendid opportunity for young men and young women to employ their time very profitably during the coming vacation season. Summer courses are to be given in mechanical work, carpentry, electrical work, home economics, etc., and any interested person may obtain full particulars by applying to the school.

Hope of locating the body of Benn Kershaw of Putnam by dragging the waters of Alexander's lake has been practically abandoned after a fruitless search of more than a week.

William C. Walton of Worcester was a visitor with friend in Danielson on Monday.

This is the last day for registering dogs if one would davoid liability to be penalized for neglecting this matter. There will be a dollar extra charge for registration after today also, as provided by law.

There was very high water in the Quinebaug river Monday as the result of the unusually heavy rain during the preceding 36 hours.

Mr. and Mrs. John Greely of Academy street, Mr. and Mrs. John Riley and Miss Netty O'Connor of Providence were the guests of T. J. Riley in Hampton Sunday.

Mrs. May Smith of Wakefield, R. I., visited her aunt, Mrs. Annie Dawley Sunday.

[illegible] have any serious consequences to those riding in the machines.

Two cases in which intoxication charges were preferred also were disposed of at Monday's session of the court, one of these being a continued case in which a fine of $20 and costs was assessed, the other a case in which the accused was placed on probation for a period of six months.

Introduction of daylight saving schedules in a number of Putnam's manufacturing plants Monday morning, put scores of housewives on a two dinner-a-day basis insofar as meeting the convenience of members of their households is concerned. It seemed rather strange to see the entire working forces of some of the big plants hurrying home to dinner at 10.45 and at 11 o'clock Monday forenoon while many other workers in many other lines were in the midst of their morning's labor. This, to all appearances, will be the program from now until late September.

One of the little flurries that the introduction of daylight time in the mills was held accountable for eventually resulted in an unfounded rumor that a strike was to be declared. Investigation of this through police channels developed that two or three workers in one plant arrived an hour late Monday morning, getting in on the old running time schedule. Certain circumstances in these cases led to the discharge of the men and subsequent loose talk on their part about starting a strike, something that did not occur, by the way.

Tentative plans for the two story brick structure they are to erect on the Donahue block site are in the hands of Stoumbelis brothers, recent purchasers of the site of the destroyed structure. These plans call for a building with four stores on the street level and 14 offices on the second floor, which will have two corridors running across its entire width, one of these corridors well toward the front of the building, the other well toward the rear. The proposed structure will be deeper than the building that was destroyed by fire on Washington's Birthday.

The plans call for stores in excess of 80 feet deep in each case. It is likely that the contract for the erection of the building will not be long delayed in placing.

Mrs. Seraphine Gardner, 75, long a resident of this town, died Monday morning at the Putnam town farm. She was the widow of James Gardner, who died about 26 years ago after having been a resident of Putnam for a long time.

State Atorney Charles E. Searls of Windham county was at New Haven Monday attending a conference of state attorneys from every county in the state, the conference called at the suggestion of the chief justice of the supreme court.

Down on the links of the Putnam Country club south of the city a tractor is in use this spring to haul a heavy roller over sections of the links that it is desired to have in high class condition for the playing season about to open.

[illegible] Members of the members of Elisha [illegible] both Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., motored to Eastford Monday to make an annual visit with Mrs. Sarah Bosworth Bradway who was observing her 107th birthday and who is a real daughter of the revolution, he father having served with the American army.

This (Tuesday) evening the annual banquet of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce is expected to bring out the largest attendance the organization has had within a year. Aside from the fact that the banquet will be excellent there will be special features to make the attendance of members well worth while.

Lowland sections about Putnam and all along the valley of the Quinebaug were inundated Monday morning following the rapid rise of the river after the terrific southeast storm of Saturday night and the early hours of Sunday morning. The river was running at practically as high a level as has been noted at any time since winter broke up.

In the usual monthly change of police tours of duty Officer Eugene Gibney is on day duty in the business section for the month of May and Officer Durand again has gone on night duty.

As is the case each year when daylight saving schedules go into effect and the railroad runs trains approximately an hour earlier than for months before, passengers who forget about the changes lost their trains Monday. No change in time has been made on the Putnam lines of the Connecticut company, but south-bound connections at Central Village are now made on the odd hours instead of on the even hours, as has been the rule throughout the fall and winter seasons.

Today, May 1, is the last day of grace for registering dogs. Dogs remaining unregistered after today are liable to be seized by the dog warden, and all owners of dogs are warned that this is apt to happen.

Today, the ninth day since the disappearance of Benn Kershaw at Alexander's lake, comes in without any trace of Mr. Kershaw, having been found though diligent search of the waters of the lake and all the surrounding territory has been made. It is usually the case that bodies of drowned persons come to the surface at the ninth day if they are not held down by some special cause, so close watch will be kept at the lake today.

Thrills Galore in "The Third Alarm."

The search for a thrill, a new and unique thrill with the tingle of swift and dramatic action, is ever the problem of the motion picture producer. As time passes and producers continue to outdo one another in the development of thrills on the screen, one begins to wonder when, if ever, the [illegible] possibilities of thrills will be exhausted. Moreover, will progress [illegible]

Emory Johnson, famous producer of "The Third [illegible]" has a knack of developing the [illegible] carry all the thrills and [illegible] Javian thunderbolt yet Mr. Johnson has admitted [illegible] to it in his [illegible] to create new and [illegible] ideas [illegible] up his photoplays.

In "The Third Alarm", for instance, Mr. Johnson has a number of ideas [illegible] been the basis of thrills in the past but he has done these in such a novel manner and developed upon such a [illegible] that screen [illegible] are hailing him as a genius in the [illegible] of photoplay construction.

The most [illegible] scene is a case in point. There have been fire scenes on the screen before. There is nothing especially novel to such an episode. [illegible] in the unusual [illegible] which [illegible] a four-days' [illegible] the Breed theatre tomorrow [illegible] developed by the hand of [illegible] director who knows how the fans [illegible] how to present a scene [illegible] the screen in order to get across to the audience the full measure of [illegible] effect.

[illegible] "The Third Alarm" [illegible] spectacular thrill smack in the eye. It comes at you full force with a bang. It is the manner of introducing the [illegible] that makes it entirely new and novel. As a matter of fact [illegible] and reflects the [illegible] of Mr. Johnson and his [illegible] staff.

The photoplay feature is Johnny Hines in "Sure Fire Flint." Movie picture lovers will again be thrilled and rocked with laughter at the ever-clever Johnny Hines, whose characterizations as the "Torchy" of the screen have made him a popular idol wherever pictures are shown. Hines is now giving a thoroughly appreciable account of himself in an ingenuously humorous comedy-drama, titled "Sure Fire Flint", which taken all and large is a sure-fire hit. This [illegible] comedian is at his best in this production for the action carries him into a [illegible] of amusing situations that [illegible] a laugh for the audience. "Sure Fire Flint" starts out with a punch when Flint is born on the Glorious Fourth and successfully keeps up the high tension throughout the performance. The audience is kept on edge throughout the full six reels, for coincident with the clear comedy vein the plot is rich in melodramatic moments, which by the way, gives Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson and Charles Gerrard untold opportunities to portray some of the finest acting we have seen in this city in some time.

NEW LONDON GIRL ATTEMPTS SUICIDE AT OCEAN BEACH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 30.—Anna Gammons, the 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. May Gammons of Faye street, attempted suicide at Ocean Beach this afternoon and that she was not successful was due to the timely arrival of Patrolman John Sullivan and the crude manner in which the girl attempted her self-destruction.

The girl departed from her home about noon and boarded a car for the beach. She had been at the shore but a short time than she decided to carry out her suicide plan. Walking to the edge of the water the girl started to wade out towards the end of the pier, but she had gone but a short distance when Patrolman Sullivan appeared on the boardwalk unobserved to the girl. Surmising that the girl was seeking her self-destruction Sullivan hastened to the water's edge and jumping into the water hustled to a point where the girl was floundering and seizing her by the clothing pulled her to safety. The girl was taken to a warm place and later transferred by automobile to her home by Patrick J. Clifford, a merchant at the beach.

The reason for her act has not been learned.

William M. Dunn, a former resident of New London, was one of the Gary, Ind., city officials, who received a jail sentence from Judge Ferdinand Geiger in the United States district court at Gary Saturday for violation of the prohibition laws. Dunn, who was judge of the city court there until his conviction a few days ago, received a sentence of a year and a day in jail and was fined $1,000.

Dunn resided in New London about twenty-five years ago, at which time he was employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad as a passenger brakeman. Following his departure from New London, Dunn went west where he studied law and a few years ago received the appointment of judge of the Gary city court.

Police Sergeant Patrick Murphy, who has been confined to his home several days by grip, resumed his duties tonight.

The New London fire department established a record with the close of today for the department responded to a greater number of alarms during the month of April than has been the case in any one year during the history of the department. The several companies responded to a total of fifty alarms, of which forty-five were grass fires. The grass fires did not cause damage of consequence and the damage from box alarms was slight.

There was a rush at the office of the city clerk today by delinquent owners of dogs for tomorrow being the final day in which to register dogs without the payment of an additional fee of $1, the dog owners thronged the municipal building the entire day and evening with the result that over 200 dogs were registered. There are, however, as many more dogs to be registered before all the canines in the city are supplied with 1923 registration tags.

Earl N. Rose of No. 25 Terrace avenue will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with violation of the automobile laws. Rose was observed committing an infraction of the law this afternoon by State Policeman M. R. Sterling and the officer caused the summons to be served on Rose for the latter's hearing.

Fred Church, one of the veteran motormen in the employ of the Connecticut company, with a run now on the Jefferson avenue line, has resumed his labors, after having enjoyed an extended vacation.

Police Sergeant Frank T. Howard and wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage in an informal manner at their home, No. 91 Walker street, this evening. Only relatives and intimate acquaintances of the couple attended the affair. However, Mr. and Mrs. Howard were visited Sunday by a large number of their acquaintances and besides receiving the well wishes of their callers, they received many presents, both of an ornamental and useful nature.

At the regular meeting of New London lodge of Elks to be held next Thursday evening, the members are assured of an evening of pleasure. A class of candidates will receive the initiatory degree. Following the initiation and the transaction of business, the members will enjoy a feast and entertainment.

In all probability all of the journeymen carpenters in the city will not be at their work tomorrow for they have demanded a flat minimum wage of $1 per hour, an increase of 10 cents per hour. The masters have made a compromise offer of 90 cents an hour and this, it is understood, is not satisfactory to journeymen, especially as some of the journeymen have been receiving 90 cents an hour for a year or more. A meeting of the journeymen is being held this evening, and from the sentiment of some of their members prior to the session, the compromise offer will be turned down.

Manager Barlow caused his order for the assigning of two of the supernumary officers to duty to be carried out tonight and at midnight Supernumeraries Thomas Lyden and Jeremiah Murphy joined the third squad in a patrol of the city. Both officers were assigned to beats on the outskirts of the city, Lyden going to the section in the vicinity of the Pequot and Murphy to the Vauxhall street and Post Hill section.

At the meeting of the city council this evening Councilor Gragan failed to take up the battle of Senior Supernumary Officer John Sheridan, as it was claimed he would do, because Murphy and Lyden were given assignments while Sheridan was compelled to go to the background. It now appears as if Sheridan will not receive a chance to do police duty, although when he was on duty a year ago he performed with credit to himself and the department.

The New London Chamber of Commerce elected its directorate today when the ballots that have been in the hands of the members over a week were counted. The counting showed that the membership had selected Frederick W. Mercer, Waldo H. Clarke, James E. Barlow, Cornelius C. Costello, Viggo E. Bird, Ward T. Alling and James P. Sullivan. The body will sit for a two year term. A supplementary board of directors was also elected, this board to act in the case of the death, removal from the city of any member of the board or to fill any vacancy that may arise from time to time. The membership of the supplementary directorate is as follows: F. Valentine Chappell, Philip Z. Hanley, William Apley, Charles H. White, William D. Harris, Thornton N. M. Lathrop, William H Reeves, Edward S. Doten, Sidney H. Miner and Percy C. Eggleston.

The former directorate and the board elected today will hold a meeting tomorrow when the board of officers that will guide the destinies of the chamber another year will be chosen.

Half a dozen young men today found themselves in a serious predicament for they were charged with breaking and entering a cottage at Ocean Beach, and taking therefrom goods of considerable value. They went into the cottage owned by Mrs. Effie Putnam Tobin, which happened at this season of the year to be tenantless and stole a Victrola, records, a watch and a pair of shoes. Their case was today continued till the 6th of October, it is supposed that they may return the property taken from the cottage or make good for its loss in dollars and cents.

Such a course may have the effect of satisfying the owner of the property if it is satisfactory to the prosecuting authorities of the city. But that sort of thing is not to be tolerated in the future. They are all young men who should have better judgment, for three of them are 21 years old and the others from 17 to 20 years of age.

A large throng of diversion seekers attended the dance and whist conducted in the Crocker House this evening by the Ladies Catholic Benevolent Association. The event was held in the ball room and after a couple of hours in the playing of whist dancing was enjoyed until after midnight.

Mrs. Mary Jordan, wife of Thomas Jordan, died this forenoon at her home, No. 20 Hill street, her demise ending a long illness. Mrs. Jordan was a native of Ireland but had resided in New London the greater part of her life. She was 68 years of age and is survived by two sons, Thomas of New London and Michael of Groton and by three daughters, Miss Margaret of New London and Mrs. C. A. Fogg and Mrs. R. L. Crockett, both of Groton.

Joaquin Cabral of 601 Main street died Saturday night following an illness of about six months. He was a native of Portugal and had resided in New London practically all of his life. Mr. Cabral had been employed 29 years as a section hand by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jessie J. Cabral, and by two sons, Manuel and Anthony Cabral, both of New London.

The funeral of Mrs. Fannie G. Latham, widow of Daniel Latham, was held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at her former home, No. 30 Granite street, and was attended by a large throng of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth and Rev. J. Beveridge Lee. The bearers were Harry H. Walker, Frederick W. Mercer, Meredith Lee, Ernest E. Rogers, Dr. George N. Bates and Albert Farrows. Interment was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hattie L. Gurley, wife of Giles Gurley, were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her former home in Niantic. Rev. F. S. Leather officiated. The bearers were Everett Whiting, John Sharne, Levi Tucker, Edward Garlick, Fred A. Beckwith and George Kelsey. Burial was in Flanders cemetery.

Antonio and Sadie Lentini have sold a house and lot on Chappell street to Guiseppi and Catherine Scribelliti.

John C. Geary has sold a building lot on Crystal avenue to M. Emma Lincoln.

Benjamin Brody, employed by the New London Glass company, who sustained a fractured leg by being hurled through the windshield of a commercial car he was driving just outside of Norwich last week, has returned to his home in New London after having been under treatment at Backus hospital, Norwich. Jeremiah Twomey, who was an occupant of the car when it crashed against a telephone pole, and who sustained an extensive laceration of the wrist, is still under treatment at the hospital.

Mrs. S. Victor Prince and baby of Terrace avenue, Paul Teroni of Montauk avenue, Allen Bay of Shaw street, William Sawyer of Hamburg, Mrs. Elisha Payne of Howard street, Mrs. Bertus Cottrell of Pearl street, James Davis of Groton and Charles Wilcox of Prest street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

The case of John Ramistella of No. 197 Bank street, former deputy fish and game warden, now a driver of a public service automobile, charged with reckless driving, did not come to trial in the Groton town court this forenoon. The case was continued two weeks and Ramistella furnished a surety on his bond of $200 for appearance at that time.

Abraham Vermilyea of Hartford this morning was ordered by Traffic Patrolman William Corcoran to appear in the police court tomorrow morning and answer the charge of violation of the traffic laws in parking his machine on State street for a period longer than is permitted by ordinance.

A live wire of the Connecticut Power company became dislodged at the corner of Truman and Blackhall streets early this morning, causing danger to both pedestrian and vehicular traffic. The police notified the power company of the danger and the wire was soon placed in its position on the pole.

An automobile owned and operated by Charles Senior of No. 279 Huntington street and a machine owned and driven by Manuel Cordidesi of No. 76 Goshen street were in collision this morning at the corner of Huntington and Church streets. Neither machine was damaged to any extent.

An automobile owned and driven by George W. Currier of Beckwith street, in passing through North Bank street this morning, collided with one of the police motorcycles which was parked in front of the police station. The cycle was slightly damaged.

Charles R. Noyes, the laudanum addict, is to stay at the state farm for inebriates during a term of six months. He was sent there by Judge Prince in the police court today. Narcotics had gotten such a hold upon Noyes that he couldn't break away from their use. He even went so far to obtain them that he forged prescriptions for laudanum at New London drug stores. But Noyes has improved very much since he was first presented in the court. He was then so drowsy that he could hardly keep awake. Today he was interested in all that transpired and pleaded guilty to the complaint alleged against him. He will probably come out of the hospital at Norwich improved in condition.

Judge Prince cleaned out a vile nest on John street this morning in the police court when he sent Kate Harrison, a negress, to jail for maintaining a house of ill repute. Half a dozen habitues of the place were fined $27 each. That will keep them away from the resort for a considerable period.

"Shorty" Wilkinson was among the number fined, and Judge Prince told him he had a record that was about as long as that of the woman he was consorting with. Then he told Shorty to watch his step in the future.

There were three drunken sailors in the court this morning. One of them was fined $10 for creating a disturbance at the Army and Navy hotel. The others had overstayed their leave of absence from the base and for that reason were allowed to take their punishment there instead of a fine in court.

WILL TAKE WHISKEY TO NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 30.—Inspector Jerry Dillon of the custom house service here will bring a lot of whiskey to the New London custom house today from the motor boat Thelma Phebe, the vessel being a wreck at Fisher's Island, near the lighthouse. The Phebe is of British registry, but she was formerly owned in the United States when she was the yacht Onward. She was sold abroad and now seems to be in the business of conveying liquor from Nassau to Halifax. The vessel is not a large one, being of only 89 tons, but she was large enough to have some 2,000 cases of liquor on board.

Sunday night was a fierce one for a little craft to be poking along the Atlantic coast and the Thelma couldn't make the run in safety. She was blown ashore or her master was not familiar enough with the run to keep in clear water and away from the reefs, of which there are many along the Fisher's Island coast. The wind was howling from the northeast and a dense fog prevailed.

The Thelma went ashore and she will be a total wreck. Only about 100 cases of the booze were saved. The disaster that came to the boat was 'phoned to New London and to the deputy collector, Joseph C. Comstock. He hustled Inspector Dillon with a power boat to Fisher's Island and the crew of the unfortunate little craft was brought here and sheltered at the Learned Mission. They are chiefly West Indies negroes and they rather enjoyed their experience of being ashore with white folks.

It is not likely that they will be held, for they are English subjects and the government has no claim upon them. Their vessel was in distress and it is not likely that it can be shown that she was in an American port from choice or that they intended to dispose of the liquor on the Thelma in an American port. The vessel was, of course, within the three mile limit, but she was blown there while en route to a British port and from a British port.

Whether the United States authorities can hold the liquor they now have in their possession is also disputed. It is the property of a foreign subject and was being transported in a British vessel and bound from one British port to another. That the vessel got into American waters was not the fault or rather the design of the commander of the Thelma. She was there without his consent.

The liquor will be stored at the custom house until the matter of the seizure is determined.

NEW LONDON TO HAVE WELFARE WORKER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 30.—New London is to have a policewoman or at least a charity and welfare worker. She is not to wear breeches nor is she to go about displaying a badge of authority, but she is to have the right and the facility for taking into custody those who should be thus treated if circumstances warrant. All this was decided upon at the council meeting this evening.

This woman with the authority of a policeman is not to be a kill-joy who shall haunt the dance halls of the city, and especially at the beach, but she is to be generally useful in helping to settle family differences and to bestow her good offices and her assistance wherever and whenever they are needed. The proposal for her appointment was endorsed by Rev. J. R. Danforth, President Marshall of Connecticut college and Captain Behrens of the submarine base.

Engelbert Sauter was opposed to the appointment, and said so, because he did not understand whether the appointee was to be provided for by the police department or by the charity department. The appropriation made for the purpose was $1,500. It was the plan to provide an automobile for the policewoman but there was not money enough available at this time to do that.

The council fixed the tax which property holders will have to pay at 25 mills on the dollar. The tax is payable the 1st of July.

A vote endorsing the purchase of land at East Lyme for the Seaside sanatorium was passed unanimously by the council and it is to be submitted to the legislature that the committees having in charge the matter of more land for the sanatorium may have it to present to the assembly.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Helped by Big Brown Bear.

Well, before Mr. Wicked Wolf found out who was talking to him, as I meant to tell you in the last tale, he spied the tip of Little Jack Rabbit's tail just ahead of him, so off he ran down the dark tunnel as fast as he could.

"Oh, dear me!" sighed the little rabbit to himself, "I thought Mr. Mole would keep him for a few minutes until I got away," and the little rabbit hopped along faster than ever, but I guess he would have been caught if the tunnel hadn't been so low and narrow that Mr. Wicked Wolf had to be very careful and not bump off his head.

Well, pretty soon the little rabbit came to a door and when he opened it he found himself in the Shady Forest. Just then, who should come along but the Big Brown Bear.

"How?" asked the big bear.

"Roll that rock against this door," begged the frightened little bunny. "Mr. Wicked Wolf is after me!"

The Big Brown Bear put his shoulder to the rock and rolled it up against the door. "Whew! That was a job!" he exclaimed, and I guess it was for the rock was as big as himself, and maybe bigger.

"Let me out! Let me out!" shouted Mr. Wicked Wolf through the keyhole, for he couldn't even open the door a tiny crack because the bear had rolled the stone up against it as tight as could be.

"You stay in there till the Fourth of July,
Away from the sun and bright blue sky,
And maybe by then you will have grown wise
Enough to wear spectacles over your eyes," sang the Big Brown Bear as he and the little rabbit hopped away. Dear me! Maybe the bear didn't hear but I was so excited for fear Little Jack Rabbit wouldn't get away that my typewriter picked out the wrong word.

"Gracious me!" said the little bunny after a while, and maybe a mile, "I guess I'll telephone to my Uncle Lucky and tell him what a narrow escape I had."

So, hopping into the Hollow Stump Telephone Booth, he called two, three, ring happy Hollyville, Clover Dell" and presently heard Uncle Lucky's voice say:

"Who 's it?"

"It's me!" answered the bunny, an dthen he told the old rabbit what had happened. Then excited dear Uncle Lucky dropped the receiver on his left hind foot, in it, you remember.

"Comp over right away!" cried Uncle Lucky, after rubbing his foot three times and a half, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Day's total sales 1,940,000 shares. Twenty industrials averaged 88.88, net loss 2.25. High 1923 105.38; low, 84.84, net loss 1.24. High 1923 90.63; low, 84.84.

MARKET CLOSED WEAK.

New York, April 30.—Stock prices, after having fluctuated within a narrow three-point trading area since early in March, broke sharply in the last hour of today's stock market. Popular industrial issues dropped one to seven points and railroad favorites one to five points below Saturday's final quotations, many of them to new low prices for the year.

The apparent failure of the market to respond to good news in the last few weeks, combined with unfavorable developments in the sugar and oil industries, encouraged operations for the decline although there was nothing new in the day's news to materially influence prices. When the bears discovered that they were meeting with less resistance than in their previous attempts to depress prices they increased their offerings and succeeded in touching off a number of stop-loss orders.

The rapidity of the decline, particularly in the last hour, when approximately forty per cent. of the day's business was transacted, resulted in the wiping out of a number of weakened marginal accounts. This forced liquidation, together with the calling of loans by banks in anticipation of May first requirements, accelerated the downward trend.

U. S. Steel broke below 104 for the first time this year, establishing a new low at 103 1-8 or 3 5-8 points below last week's final sale. Other stocks which dropped to new low prices for the year included U. S. Alcohol at 59, Famous Players at 80, Brown Shoe at 57, Sears Roebuck at 91, Reading at 74 1-2, St. Paul at 30 1-8 and New York Central at 92 5-8, the aggregate losses ranging from one to six points.

A heavy tone was apparent at the outset. Week-end reductions in the prices of refined sugar and a growing propaganda for a buyers' strike brought about a rather free offering of the sugar shares, which yielded readily to selling pressure. Reports of another cut in Midcontinent Crude Oil prices were used as an excuse to depress the oil stocks. California Petroleum and Standard Oil of California offered stubborn resistance to selling pressure but finally yielded with the rest.

The only outstanding stocks to show a net gain on the day were Consolidated Cigar, National Cloak & Suit, Rand Mines and Union Bag & Paper, each of which advanced about a point, but the turn over in each case was less than a thousand shares.

Call money opened and renewed at 5 3-4 per cent., but advanced to 6 in the late afternoon, closing at that figure. Some short time loans were arranged at 5 1-4 per cent., but bankers continued to hold out for 5 1-2 per cent. for the longer maturities. Trading in Commercial Paper was squiet with prime names commanding 5 and 5 1-4 per cent.

Pre-holiday dullness in the European foreign exchange markets resulted in a small volume of business here, the principal rates showing little change on the day. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.63 1-4 and French francs eased slightly to 6.75 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 30.—Marked heaviness in the sugar, oil and copper company liens featured today's relatively dull trading in bonds on the New York stock exchange. The tendency toward lower prices extended also to the railroad group but losses in that division were generally small.

Active U. S. government bonds, after opening heavy, steadied somewhat and were either unchanged or off 1-32 to 5-32 of a point at the close. There was a slackening of the demand for foreign issues and some of the French bonds closed fractionally lower than last week's final quotations. The Mexican 4's and Brazil 8's, however, advanced a point each.

Price movements in the industrial group followed in general the downward trend displayed in the stocks, losses of one to five points being recorded by Marland Oil 7 1-2's and 8's, with warrants, Punta Alegre Sugar 7's, Eastern Cuba Sugar 7 1-2's, Cerro De Pasco Copper 8's, Chile Copper 7's, and Wickwire Spencer Steel 7's.

Railroad mortgages were offered freely but losses generally were confined to fractions. New Haven convertible 6's were off 1 1-2 points.

Total sales (par value were $10,074,000.

Public offerings will be made tomorrow of an issue of $13,500,000 Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company 5 1-2 per cent. one to 15 year equipment trust certificates, series "C" at prices to yields an average of 5.75 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 30.—Notwithstanding a sharp, temporary upturn in the wheat market today prices averaged lower, chiefly as a result of maneuvers to avoid a compromise delivery tomorrow on May contracts. The close was unsetled at 1c net decline to 1 3-8c advance, with May $1.22 1-2 to 1.22 5-8 and July 1.22 1-8 to 1.23 1-4. Corn gained 1 1-8 to 1 3-8c. Oats finished at 1-2c off to 1-8 up, and provisions 5 to 10c down.

Liquidating sales of May dominated the wheat market except for about an hour shortly before the middle of the trading session. A temporary absence of wheat offerings then which hapuened to be simultaneous with a forecast of unsettled weather northwest and with notable developmnet of strength in the corn market, led quickly to a rapid advance in wheat values. For the most part, however, the gains in wheat failed to hold, and sellers were in a majority throughout the late dealings, especially so as to May.

Bullish estimates on the probable yield of winter wheat this season had much to do with the relative firmness of July and September deliveries. One authority put the total at 545,000,000 bushels as compared with 586,000,000 bushels harvested last year. Two reports made the crop condition 14 points under a ten year average, and indicated that 7,000,000 acres would be entirely abandoned. Decrease of 1,074,000 bushels in the domestic visible supply counted also as a steadying influence.

With lake vessels sailing out of Chicago today for the first time this season and taking east 1,000,000 bushels of corn, the advance in the corn market came as a natural sequence. Oats, like wheat, were depressed by liquidating sales to prepare for May deliveries beginning tomorrow.

Provisions declined in the absence of any special demand.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Another week of mild weather has sent building operations in Norwich along at a rapid stride and during the past seven days no little amount of work has been accomplished. There is considerable work in progress in the Thamesville section of the city and numerous buildings are in the various stages of construction.

The garage at the city line is well along the building being boarded in and the windows and door casings set in place. The building near Dunham street on West Thames is practically completed and ready for occupation. The building has two stores on the lower floor and tenements on the upper stories. On Nelson place two bungalows have been completed by Tongren and Hourigan, one being occupied and the other is ready for occupation. There are several other dwelling houses in this section of the city that are being constructed.

On the West Side and at East Great Plain there are several buildings under the process of construction. These include several in the Elizabeth and Peck street sections and some on the Westerly end of West Main street.

The work on the Pasnik block on West Main street is also well along and three of the brick walls have been raised to the roof. The front of the building has not yet been completed although work is well along on the interior.

The new Palace theatre building has also been brought along at rapid strides and the brick walls are nearly complete. The steel superstructure is being erected.

At Montville the work on the new power-house is being rushed along and the excavation work is rapidly nearing completion and will soon be ready for the cement work.

In other sections of the town there is much building being done and local contractors report that the indications are for a banner year in the building line. The month of April showed far above the normal for the number of building permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. Several building applications for large buildings are out but have not yet been returned to the fire marshal for recording.

NEW LONDON

A permit has been issued for a garage on Shaw St., for Thomas Noscorello. It will be one story high, 32 x34 feet, of stone, and will be built by the day.

The Williams property at State, Huntington, Church and Meridian St., has been sold to Frederick W. Mercer. Mr. Mercer will remove the residence on the site and lay out the property into building sites. The plans also call for the widening of Meridian St. The sale of the property is one of the largest real estate transactions in New London for several months.

A local builder has been awarded the contract for the construction of a second story on the new building at Ocean Beach for A. Ratchskay. The new story will be 40x125 feet, of frame construction, arranged for a motion picture theatre. The plans are by Architect Francis DeGrange.

A permit has been issued for a garage on Blackhall St., for J. C. Ernst. It will be 20x50 feet, one story high, of stone.

A local contractor has the contract to build a frame store at the corner of Lincoln and Pleasant Sts., for the National Economy Stores. Mr. Lubschansky also has the contract for the proposed changes to the store at 55 Truman St., for Frank Fillman.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 19 sales of real estate as compared to 17 sales for the corresponding week in 1922. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $34,650 and $77,150.

In New London there were 5 sales of real estate during the past week as compared to 7 sales for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $33,675 and $60,840.

PLAINFIELD

Miss Neisie Hartwell and Miss Edith Birtwhistle have returned from a trip to Marblehead, Mass. They made the trip by auto, using the new car recently purchased by Miss Hartwell.

Miss Sarah Spalding is reported in a serious condition, little hope being held out for her recovery. Miss Spalding has been ill for a long time, but for a week her condition has been decidedly worse.

Miss Eva Higginbottom has returned from a trip to Washington, D. C., where she attended the twenty-second convention of the American Guild of Banjoists, Mandolinists and Guitarists, held at the Raleigh hotel.

Mrs. Charles Croxley of Providence has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Moffitt, returning home on Thursday.

H. B. Chapman had peas up in his garden more than a week ago.

The Lincoln club is holding a special meeting on Monday evening at the Congregational vestry to consider important matters of public interest. The meeting will be called at 7.30, no supper being served, but there will be light refreshments served during the evening by the club. Music will be furnished by Joseph Shippee, violinist; S. V. Vellette, violinist; H. H. Holloway, mandolin; Harold R. Barstow, piano. Among other matters to come up is that of a building and loan association to be presented by Benjamin Dawson, and a report on the electric light situation, a report being made by a special committee, Dr. William E. Wilson, chairman. Plans will also be completed for ladies' night in May.

Walter D. Cleland and family motored to New Bedford Sunday, visiting friends in the city.

Robert L. Dawley has been ill the past week with a severe cold, being confined to his bed several days. He is recovering.

Over $100 was realized from the comic opera H. M. S. Pinafore, which was given before a large and enthusiastic audience in the Community house for the benefit of repairs and changes going on at the Congregational church. The opera was given by local talent, which added greatly to the interest. The principals rendered their solos excellently and the chorus work was of the best. The training of the characters was by James Royle and Charles D. Geer of Norwich. Although some had seen this opera given here a few years ago, they were glad to witness it again, and the effort was in line with what is taking place in the country, for the opera is being repeated in many places.

The characters were the following well known local people: The Rt. Honorable Sir Porter, K. C. B., Ray Greene; Capt. Corcoran of H. M. S. Pinafore, James Royle; Ralph Rackstraw, able seaman, Christopher Krauss; Dick Deadeye, able seaman, Philip Peterson; Bill Bobstay, boatswain, George Kay; Josephine, the captain's daughter, Miss Dorothy Tillinghast; Little Buttercup, a Portsmouth bumboat woman, Mrs. John Bradford; Hebe, Sir Porter's first cousin, Miss Helen Gallup.

Sir Joseph's relatives: Mrs. Cecil Butler, Mrs. Walter Lathrop, Mrs. John Kingsley, Mrs. Clifford Struthers, Misses Catherine Hutchinson, Vivian Cleland, Lillian Heap, Louise Jerome, Adelaide Prentiss, Helen Peterson, Marion Cleland, Florence Onderdonk, Isabel Button, Ruth Cleland, Dorothy Pike, Elizabeth Cornell, Mildred Junkins, Ione Barstow, Alice Sykes, Emma Kay.

Sailors: Earl Butler, Alfred Taylor, Alfred Royle, Irving Flagg, Curtis Phillips, Louise Gallup, Larry Baldwin, Russell Starkweather, G. Peterson, F. Lever, Milton Windsor, Walter Lathrop.

The standing committee of the Congregational church will entertain the choir and cast of Pinafore on Thursday evening, May 10, in the vestry. An interesting program is being prepared and refreshments will be served.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ALL READY FOR ELKS' SILVER ANNIVERSARY FAIR

Twenty-five years ago this May a mere handful of jolly fellows were instituted into the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. They gathered together regularly on meeting nights in a small but cosy meeting room on Water street.

This gathering was known as the Norwich lodge, B. P. O. E. No. 430. They dreamed and planned of a beautiful home for the future. Their dreams were fulfilled, however, as everyone in this vicinity notes when their attention is attracted to the large and spacious Elks' home on Main street.

Like the old timers planned and put their best efforts into everything they started, so have the present members done in bringing to Norwich the biggest affair of its kind ever held, which will be known as the Norwich lodge of Elks Silver Anniversary Fair, to be held in the home and on the grounds at the rear of the home on Main street, May 4, 5, 7, 8, 9.

The best of vaudeville has been secured, with all kinds of other novelties. There will be dancing in the Elks ball room every night of the fair.

A Reo sport model, Durant touring car, and a Nash Carriole will be given away free, as will also a Ford touring car be given as a door prize to some lucky person.

On May the 4th, the opening night, there will be a grand street parade at 8 o'clock. The local lodge has spared no expense to make this event something to be remembered for a long time to come. Invitations have been extended to out of town lodges which will come with their own bands on different nights.

The grounds at the rear of the home have been carefully smoothed over, novelty booths of all kinds have been erected as well as a large outdoor stage, on which there will be the vaudeville.

Gloria Swanson at the Strand.

With a well known star in a wonderful picture patrons of the Strand theatre were greatly pleased with Gloria Swanson in "Prodigal Daughters." It is a jazzy, swift moving story of a girl's rebellion against convention, with Gloria wearing more glorious gowns than ever. The story, in short, is as follows:

The two ultra-modern daughters of J. D. Forbes leave home when he attempts to curb them in their mad race for pleasure. The oldest, "Swiftie," establishes a Greenwich Village apartment where freedom is the word. The younger marries a jazz song writer who soon deserts her. "Swiftie," deprived of her father's income, takes a job in a department store, but is fired after refusing to go out with the manager. A round of misfortunes and her sister's plight eventually bring her home where she finds forgiveness and romance.

A Christie Comedy and News offered more entertainment.

"The Flirt" at the Strand Thursday.

Advocates of the clean screen will find the year's best example of a sparkling story without one objectionable feature in "The Flirt," which begins its local engagement at the Strand theatre on Thursday.

"The Flirt" is Booth Tarkington's vivid cross-section of American life, filmed as a Universal-Jewel production with the thought to "attain and maintain the highest moral and artistic standard of motion picture production," as expressed by Will H. Hays.

It is perhaps a coincidence that the thirteen members of the all-star cast who appear in "The Flirt" are among the most exemplary members of the Hollywood film colony in private life.

Eileen Percy, Helen Jerome Eddy, Nell Craig, Lydia Knott and Dorothea Wolbert, the five women of the exceptional cast, are all noted as screen players, and take active part in social and civic affairs in Hollywood and Universal City, where the production was filmed.

Splendid Farm Changes Ownership

Coit and Sholes have sold for Joseph and Daniel Polsky to Chas. I. Rathbun of this city, the fine farm situated on the highway from Yantic to Lebanon and best known as the Colonel Kingsley place. There are 89 acres of land and the Peck Hollow trout brook runs through the property. The house contains 12 rooms and there are two large barns and a number of other farm buildings. Two excellent springs supply pure water by gravity flow to all of the building. It is considered one of the most desirable farms in this section. The new owner will make improvements to the property and use it for his home.

Sale of Washington St. Property

James L. Case has sold for the heirs of John C. Morgan to Abraham Cramer the residence property located at No. 62 Washington street, consisting of a large 14 room brick house together with a tract of land fronting about 125 feet on Washington street and running throught to School street. There is a large barn on the School street front.

The property has been owned by the Morgan family for more than fifty years and is a valuable tract.

WILLINGTON

Ray Wilcox and Edward Lyon will move to the Hollow to the house sold by John Wroczkowski to Wilbert Ruby.

Police Court Cases

In the city court Monday morning Steven Lucas was charged with beating his wife and being intoxicated, and the case was heard in chambers. Lucas was sentenced to jail on a suspended matter for 15 days and on the new charge was given 15 days in jail and costs for both cases. As the commitment papers were being written out Lucas' family got busy and there was another session between the family and the officials of the court. It was finally decided to continue the matter for a time and Lucas agreed to pay the money over to his wife and behave in the future.

Two men charged with being drunk paid their bills of $13.50 and $14.50 each. A Central Village man paid $13.50 for a similar offense. A man charged with breach of the peace settled his bill for $5 and a young man up for the first time for being drunk paid over $13.50 for his freedom.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S THRIFT WINS BANNERS FOR THEIR SCHOOLS

On May 1st The Chelsea School club 100 per cent. Banners were awarded to the following thirteen schools:

Bozrah Center, Johnson and Leffingwell of the town of Bozrah; Ledyard Center and Drawbridge of the town of Ledyard, Wheeler and Williams of the town of North Stonington; Haskell of the town of Preston; Ekonk of the town of Sterling, and Frost, Gayhead, Peck and Raymond of the town of Canterbury.

These banners were awarded to schoolrooms in which each pupil has deposited in the school club one dollar or more during the past year, thereby receiving a regular Chelsea Savings bank-book.

Although the school year does not close until the middle of June the 100 per cent. Banners are awarded in May in order that the children may have the enjoyment of seeing their banner hanging in their school room before vacation. Up to May 1st the children of these 89 rural schools have deposited a total of $5,678.98 with 1,-397 scholars participating in the Chelsea School club. This is 62 per cent. of the total number of pupils enrolled in the schools. Of these 1,-397 pupils enrolled 870 have deposited $1 or more and are now the proud possessors of Chelsea Savings bank-books.

The banners are exceedingly handsome, being made of heavy blue felt with rich orange lettering, which reads "100 Per Cent Chelsea School Club, 1923."

These rewards for systematic saving may well be a source of great pride to the children who have won them by hard work and self-denial. They have saved regularly and conscientiously during the year, having deprived themselves of many things which they have wanted, realizing that the course of thriftiness brings the most lasting benefits. A large part of these savings have been earned by the children for which they should receive great credit. The success of these school clubs is due very largely to the interest the teachers and state supervisors have taken in encouraging savings and thrift in their schools. All the teachers have been untiring in their efforts to increase enthusiasm among the children and have assumed the additional work which it puts upon them without hesitation or reluctance. In many cases clubs have been installed at the solicitation of the teachers.

Recently the schools of the neighboring towns of Mansfield, Chaplin, Andover, Eastford and Coventry, through their state supervisor, H. Wilson Greer, have started Chelsea clubs. This makes a total of 118 operating Chelsea clubs with an enrollment of about 4,000 children.

School savings have increased tremendously throughout the whole United States during the past few years and particularly this last year. The first school to take up school savings was in Long Island City in 1885. In 1911 The American Bankers' association took hold of the movement and from then on it has increased by leaps and bounds.

As reported by The American Bankers' association the number of pupils participating in school saving systems in the United States on January 31, 1922 was 1,542,406 as compared with 1,295,607 on June 30, 1922 and 802,-000 the June before. The total savings during the present school year up to January 31st amounted to $4,-467,000, and the total balances in all pupils deposit accounts amounted to over $14,144,006. This is more than double the amount on deposit in these accounts last June. At the beginning of this year there were 401 cities and towns where school savings were practiced.

The average amount on deposit per child for the whole country during last year amounted to $4.31, while the average for this year in the Chelsea club was $4.06 with two more months of school.

The habit of thrift formed in early life by these young people cannot help but have a most beneficial effect on them personally and on the country as a whole.

DEL-HOFF HOTEL OPENING AFTER COMPLETE RENOVATIONS

The new Del-Hoff Hotel is to be formally opened Wednesday morning under the management of John G. and Arthur J. McNamara of this city. For the past several months the entire building has been completely renovated, all old fixtures removed and new ones of the latest style in hotel accommodation replace them. The interior walls have been redecorated and papered in harmonizing colors and all hallways are light and cheerful. The work of the contractors has been complete, covering every room in the hotel, always following out the plan of the management to make them bright and cheerful, all having the appearance of the home.

In remodeling the hotel the McNamara brothers have planned everything in colonial style, this plan showing the best advantage in the spacious lobby of the hotel. The front entrance has the colonial touch, emphasized by the small light over the archway and the semi-circular fan transom. Upon entering the lobby the first thing noticed is the typical colonial construction. The walls and the ceiling are finished in light cream color blending softly into the white on the sidewalls, while the baseboards are finished in mahogany color. The finish of the lobby is of the Georgian period, the electrical fixtures being of silver and gold. The floor which is composed of white and grey ceramic tile adds a touch of distinction to the entire room which harmonizes with the mahogany furniture.

The desk is situated at the rear of the lobby and is of mahogany and is connected with the switchboard from which day and night telephone service can be had from every room in the hotel. In the wing at the rear of the lobby is the writing room with long tables and comfortable chairs, all of mahogany in keeping with the remainder of the furniture in the lobby.

To the right of the entrance are the telephone booths for public use and close by is the elevator which operates between the lobby and all four floors giving day and night service.

The new staircase is in keeping with its surroundings and is composed of a balustrade on either side with balusters in color and the hand-rail, stairs and treads in beautiful natural mahogany finish. Two graceful colonial columns are found at either side of the stairs and successfully fulfill their purpose. Altogether the lobby is light and cheerful in appearance and is equipped with all comforts that a guest might desire.

The rooms are on the four upper floors, all of them being outside rooms where sunlight and plenty of fresh air may always be had. The walls and ceilings of the halls are finished in light brown paper of stucco effect, the woodwork being white, and the floors are covered with heavy red velvet insuring quietness and comfort for travel. The latest electrical fixtures insure the best of lighting facilities.

In the rooms the walls are finished in gray paper of stucco effect and woodwork in white. In furnishing the rooms the management has endeavored to make them as homelike as possible, this plan being carried out to a remarkable degree. Each room is equipped with a bed of dark mahogany shade, double or single according to the size of the room, with a single or a two-tone dresser to match. Other conveniences in every room are the comfortable chairs finished in leather, cigarette stands, metal waste baskets, latest electrical fixtures, and hot and cold running water. The mattresses are all of special manufacture and constructed with a view to comfort and durability.

In some of the more expensive rooms there is everything a guest should wish in the way of conveniences. Beautiful bedroom sets, writing tables, wicker chairs, and soft velvet carpeting complete the furnishings. In addition to the furnishings the more expensive rooms have private bath facilities. Beautifully finished in white tile the bath room has all conveniences including a porcelain wall bathtub with shower bath connections, hot and cold running water ready at all times.

In furnishing the hotel the management has taken care that every room is finished in first class manner, everything that insures the comfort of the guest being taken care of. Besides the private baths in the more expensive rooms each floor has a spacious public bathroom finish in white with all fixtures of porcelain.

The new Del-Hoff Hotel which in the past has been open to men only, will, under the management of the McNamara Brothers, be open to the public in general and if the compliments of those who have stayed at the hotel may be used as a guide Norwich is fortunate in having another hotel, modern in every line of construction.

The management extends an invitation to people in Norwich to come to the hotel to see for themselves the great improvements which have been made.

SHRINERS' CEREMONIAL IN NEW HAVEN SATURDAY

The complete programme for the New England ceremonial of Pyramid Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine to be held in New Haven next Saturday, has been issued by Illustrious Potentate Joseph P. Frisbie of Bridgeport for the temple and Irving H. Day of New Haven as general committee on arrangements.

It will probably be the largest gathering of Shriners ever held in southern New England. The following temples are to be represented: Palestine of Providence, Kismet of Brooklyn, Sphinx of Hartford, Mecca of Springfield and Salaam of Newark, N. J.

There will be a parade and drills by the various patrols. Each temple will bring a band. The parade will be reviewed by Governor Templeton, Congressman John Q. Tilson, Mayor David Fitzgerald, Imperial Potentate Conrad V. Dykeman of Kismet, Imperial Oriental Guide Clarence M. Dunbar of Palestine, and the visiting potentates of other temples. At 4 p. m. the bands will give a concert at the Harkness Quadrangle.

NORWICH RESERVOIRS ARE FULL TO OVERFLOWING

April rains have filled the Norwich reservoirs to overflowing so that the town starts the spring season with an abundant supply of water.

The rainfall for April reached a total of 5.35 inches, to which the rain of Saturday and Sunday contributed 2.35 inches. There were seven storms during the month which recorded figures at the water department's offices.

COMMUNITY INTERESTS BEFORE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The April membership letter of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce reviews action taken or plans proposed on several matters of important community interest as follows:

Thames River — The division engineer's report of the preliminary survey of District Engineer Peterson to the board of engineers for rivers and harbors regarding the Thames river development at Norwich is unfavorable.

We quote from the report: "It does not appear that the improvement would result in a sufficient increase in commerce, or saving on freight rates, to justify the probable cost to the government."

At the present time lumber and coal are the principal shipments by water to Norwich. On coal alone the saving of freight rates to our local industries from Allyn's Point to Norwich would be forty cents per ton on bituminous. A corresponding increase on all rail rates to Norwich should this community be classed on the inland city rate would be effected. Surely there is a saving on freight rates on this commodity.

The lighterage charge on lumber laden vessels that carry this commodity ranges from $300 to $600 per vessel. Could these vessels come direct to our docks by reason of a deeper channel the sum expended for lighterage charges would be saved to the lumber concerns and passed down by them to the consumer.

The Uncas Board Co. has recently taken over the Ironsides Paper Board Co. Already two paper machines are running and a third will soon be operating. Expansion of this plant is contemplated.

The concern will have a minimum daily shipping tonnage of 100 tons when the three machines operate. Greater daily tonnage will come with greater expansion as contemplated. Oil is used by this company for fuel. At present they cannot get oil-tankers up the river to their plant because of the draught of these vessels and the inadequate channel. Here again is a possible great saving to this company.

It is true that there exists a decreased tonnage regarding general merchandise such as is carried by the local boat line. This is partly due to the intermittent local boat-service, and to the comparative shallow channel of the river.

It is also true that the twelve foot channell of the Connecticut river to Hartford and intermediary points to Saybrook provides ample facilities for Connecticut river shipping as brought out at the hearing. But, we find upon investigation that special boats are provided by the railroad owning and controlling the particular transportation company doing the business on the Connecticut river to Hartford. Therefore there is no just comparison between conditions affecting the channels of these two rivers.

Your directors propose to leave no effort undone to secure the successful issue of this project. Accordingly a strong delegation will be sent to Washington to present before the of engineers for rivers and harbors during the early part of May.

It may not appear to the board of engineers that there is a saving on freight rates or a sufficient increase in commerce to justify the cost of the project but to our industries, our business concerns, and the general welfare and growth of our city the proposed development is not only justifiable but imperative.

Train Schedules—For reasons which the transportation committee or the directors had no knowledge and control the conference with the railroad officials regarding increased passenger service for Norwich was postponed.

The summer schedule or time table will be printed about the middle of June and a request has been made for this conference to be held in sufficient time to discuss the matter before the summer train schedules are printed.

Your officers want this conference to be held in Norwich (this was one of the reasons for postponement) so that a greater opportunity will be afforded our people to present their arguments for better passenger service.

An appeal is made to all our members to take an active interest in this matter when the hearing is held in Norwich. Every member that can possibly attend should do so. Too often the active support of our members is a negligible quantity upon such occasions.

The passenger service for Norwich is well nigh abominable. The effect of this service is very harmful to the general welfare of our community. The causes for the existing conditions is the lukewarm or indifferent attitude of the general public. Your officers and committees can do some things but they cannot do it all. The active support of every member is necessary. The urge to attend this meeting is strong and demands your personal attention. You will have due notice of the hearing. Be present.

Clean-Up Week—The annual spring clean-up week for Norwich, a work that has become universal throughout the country, will soon be authorized by the city officials. At a recent conference with some of the city officials and the directors, an earnest request was made for the fullest cooperation of the police department to see that the clean-up week this year was thoroughly done on all the premises.

Norwich Free Academy—It is to the credit and the enterprise of our school committee that plan is proposed that will properly take charge of our high school needs for a few years to come. The calling into conferences with the school board of an advisory committee of representative citizens was a commendable action on the part of our officials.

Membership Meeting — The April membership meeting of the chamber was unavoidably omitted. Arrangements were made but the unforeseen happened which caused your committee in charge of these meetings to decide that it was best not to hold one this month. Our meetings are popular with the members and the committee endeavors to have instructive and interesting subjects discussed. They will provide a good meeting programme for May.

Equitable Real Estate Assessments—The increasing burden of an inequitable tax rate cannot but bring to our citizens the absolute necessity for an honest tax rate, equitably assessed on all property holders. Norwich cannot continue much longer the present archaic system. The first step, founded on the experience of all cities where modern systems prevail, is the tax map. The tax map is now being prepared.

PRETENSES NOT REASONS FOR NON-CHURCH GOING

Commonly the excuses given are mere pretenses and not real reasons, declared Rev. Asa A. Foster in his sermon Sunday morning at the Church of the Good Shepherd when he spoke upon the theme Why Men Don't Attend Church. He spoke from the text Luke 14: 8, And they all with one accord began to make excuses.

In part he said:

The present day American church makes every appeal for attention that special interest can devise. The building, regarding architecture or convenience of social work; the service of worship, regarding intellectual appeal or the inspiration of music aims to please all possible attendants; social acquaintance, too, is tactfully cultivated. And yet so many men fail to attend church.

Commonly, the excuses given are a mere pretense rather than real reasons. "Not time" or "too tired" or "not need the church" are invalidated by the fact that other busy and tired men do attend and do recognize their need of ethical instruction and spiritual uplift.

Men are apt to be individualistic when their pleasures are concerned. Church attendance may be considered from the standpoint of the public welfare rather than that of individual pleasure or need.

No man would wish to live in a town without any church or any appeal to the moral life.

If the most of men would become active supporters of the church—as a few men are now—the community standard for clean thinking and approved conduct would be much advanced.

Men who are accustomed to exert worldly authority during the week may well humble themselves before the latar on Sunday. Men who are accustomed to demand commercial gain during six days may wisely give without expecting return on the seventh day.

If we deny the generous instinct we become selfish and sordid.

OFFICIALS PERPLEXED BY INTRICACIES OF MARINE PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Delicate and Prolonged International Exchange of Views is Probable—President Harding and Cabinet Are Studying the Situation—Intimations Have Been Made That the Administration Might Ask Congress to Amend the Law so as to Exclude Foreign Ships in American Ports From the Law as Laid Down by the Supreme Court—Decision Makes It Possible for American Craft to Run Excursions Outside the Three Mile Limit and Maintain Barrooms Until Ready to Return to Port.

Washington, May 1.—The liquor problem again became the paramount concern of the federal government today as a result of the decision of the supreme court drawing a prohibition dead line around the territory and territorial waters of the United States.

On the one side officials turned their attention searchingly to the question of what to do in the face of the court's ruling, that outside the three-mile dead line American ships can become under the present law as wet as they desire.

On the other hand there arose a new cause for perplexity and international disagreement over the edict of the court that no foreign ship can bring liquor inside the three mile limit despite the fact that some foreign nations require their vessels by law to have liquor aboard and to serve it to their crews wherever they may be.

Over these two features of the situation, President Harding and his cabinet put their heads together while wets and drys in congress were devising devious schemes to make the law over entirely at the next session.

There were many indications that developments involving every phase of the situation were in the immediate offing.

At the White House before the cabinet meeting, Chairman Lasker of the shipping board conferred with the president and indicated afterward that the policy of the chief executive toward resuming liquor serving on its vessels outside the prohibition dead line would be set forth shortly in a public statement. His observations led, too, to the impression that the shipping board fleet probably would stay dry as a matter of policy.

The treasury department, which is responsible for administration of the Volstead act, began the preparation of a statement which will lay down the principles on which the decision of the highest court will be applied to shipping at American ports of arrival and departure.

Attorney General Daugherty, whose celebrated "bone dry" opinion was partly upheld and partly overthrown by the court, studied the text of the decision and prepared a statement holding that the real effect was to strengthen the position taken by him in favor of drastic enforcement.

Among the foreign diplomats, and at the state department, there were evidences that a prolonged and perhaps delicate international exchange of views was in the making. Both the French and Italian governments require ships flying their flags to provide wine to their crews as a part of the regular ration, and the anomalous position that thus will be occupied by a French or Italian merchantman in an American port is fully expected here to give rise to vigorous representations by Paris and Rome, perhaps with the backing of London.

What the state department will say in reply to such representations admittedly is one of the most delicate questions involved in the whole problem as it now confronts the executive branch of the government. It is a question no state department official is willing to discuss for the present.

Intimations that the administration might ask congress to amend the law so as to exclude foreign ships in American ports from the sweeping prohibition laid down by the upreme court aroused an immediate protest from the dry battalions in the senate and house. There were predictions from their leaders that such a proposition not only would be snowed under, but that on the other hand a majority would vote to make the law even more stringent by prohibiting American ships from having liquor aboard outside the three-mile limit.

The more immediate consideration of the administration, however, relates to the course to be followed between now and the time congress meets again in December. It is expected that the statement under preparation by Secretary Mellon at the treasury will set forth in some detail the enforcement plans that are to go into effect as soon as the supreme court hands down its edict to the lower court in New York, where the cases decided yesterday originated. Mr. Mellon was engaged most of today in conferences with his subordinates who have to do with prohibition enforcement and he will meet them again tomorrow before he announces his conclusions.

It is evident that the treasury regards the question of stoppage of foreign ships at the three-mile limit if they have liquor aboard as a most intricate phase of the situation. It involves many troublesome possibilities, not the least of which is the sanction which the decision appears to give to American craft to run excursions outside the three-mile limit, obtain their liquor stocks there, and maintain floating barrooms until they are ready to return to port. On the face of the decision, some officials believe there would be no way of checking such a practice.

WILL BEGIN TO ENFORCE LAW IN THIRTY DAYS

Washington, May 1—Announcement that the government in thirty days will begin "vigorously" to enforce the law as interpreted by the supreme court to prohibit American and foreign ships from carrying liquor within the three mile limit was made tonight by Attorney General Daugherty.

Explaining that the supreme court mandate would become effective in thirty days, Mr. Daugherty in a formal statement, in which he discussed yesterday's decision at considerable length declared that "every agency at my command will be used to enforce the law without favor, partiality or discrimination."

PROCEEDINGS AT MORSE TRIAL IN WASHINGTON

Washington, May 1.—Major General Goethals, retired, who was the first general manager of the emergency fleet corporation, concluded today his testimony as a government witness in the Morse trial, but he will be recalled later by the defense. Two other witnesses, Samuel L. Fuller, a New York banker, who was assistant to General Goethals, and Eads Johnson, of this city, New York district officer for the fleet corporation during part of 1917, were examined, but much of the day was taken up with the identification of documents which the government will seek to introduce as evidence.

Frequent objections to questions and to evidence offered were made by counsel of both sides.

Justice Stafford interrupted the cross examination of General Goethals to admonish Attorney Rockwood of New York, of counsel for the defense, not to argue the case in questioning witnesses. On another time Mr. Rockwood charged that government counsel was attempting to present "hidsdsay evidence to the jury" by introducing official reports.

"As facts instead of questioning their authors as to the facts, Justice Stafford sustained a specific objection by Mr. Rockwood against the introduction of a report made by Johnson, to General Goethals, holding that it contained opinions, hopes, fears and suggestions of the author which were not facts. He directed government counsel to analyze the report and question the witnesses later as to the facts contained in it.

At the outset today counsel for the defense offered a written motion for leave to file a motion to dismiss the indictments against the defendants but Justice Stafford directed that the document be accompanied by a written brief.

It is understood that aside from the contention that one of the grand jurors returning the indictments was not a resident of the District of Columbia, the defense will aver that one of the grand jurors was an alien.

E. G. Higley of New York, who was general counsel for the United States Steamship Company, a Morse concern, and a director of the Groton Iron Works, identified a financial statement as to the assets of the Groton concern which he said he delivered to Mr. Fuller. The statement was prepared by Lennis and Young, certified public accounts of New York city, and Fuller testified later that, knowing the reputation of the firm, he had accepted the statement at its face value and had directed that a contract be awarded the company. The government alleges that in this statement the assets of the company were placed at a figure beyond their true value and that it was upon the basis of this statement that a contract wor twelve wooden hulls was awarded the Groton concern.

Besides identifying a number of letters and other documents Mr. Johnson testified that he officially examined the Morse Noank and Groton, Conn., plants and made reports on them. He was unable to recall details as to what he found, but said his reports were matters of official records.

He said also that Charles W. Morse had solicited ship contracts. His cross-examination on this point was under way when court adjourned.

DISAPPEARANCE OF PAPER FROM BUREAU OF ENGRAVING

Washington, May 1—Disappearance from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of a small quantity of special paper, partially converted into bonds of Federal Farm Land banks, has been reported to the Secret Service and an investigation is in progress to determine whether the paper has been stolen.

Secret Service officials said today they did not believe the government would lose as a result of the disappearance of the paper.

The amount of paper missing has not yet been determined and a thorough check of all paper stocks and partially printed or engraved paper in the bureau will be required to establish it.

Would Command All Seas.

London, May 1 (By the A. P.).—"Command of all seas," was the ideal set forth by the first lord of the British admiralty, Lieutenant Colonel Amery, in the house of commons today, in his defense of the government proposals to develop Singapore into a strong naval base. "We do not possess such a command," he continued. "No self-respecting power can afford indefinitely to be dependent on another power for its security, and even its existence."

REAR ADMIRAL WILLIAM SHEFFIELD COWLES DEAD

Hartford, Conn., May 1—Rear Admiral William Sheffield Cowles, U. S. N., retired, died at his home in Farmington shortly after 11 o'clock today in his 77th year. He had been in ill health for some time.

Rear Admiral Cowles was retired from active service in 1908 and in 1914 member of the staff of Governor Marcus H. Holcomb and served in that capacity during the entire war period as the governor's naval aide. He also was active in devising defense plans for the Connecticut River. During the period also he served as a member of the House of Representatives from Farmington. He was seized with a slight stroke of paralysis on April 5, 1920 while in New York and was at once brought to his home here.

Rear Admiral Cowles was born in this town on August, 1846 and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1867. He married a sister of the late President Theodore Roosevelt.

Rear Admiral Cowles after his graduation was promoted to ensign in 1868, became a master in 1870, a lieutenant-commander in 1892, commander in 1899, and a captain on Nov. 2, 1902. He received flag rank on April 23, 1908. His sea service had carried him to every part of the world, and his shore duty included these assignments: naval aide to the secretary of the navy in charge of the naval militia, 1891-92; naval attache at U. S. Embassy at London, 1893-97; assistant at the Bureau of Navigation in 1897 and naval aide to the president; Chief of the Bureau of Equipment in 1906 and retired in 1908.

In his state service Read Admiral Cowles enlisted in the Farmington Home Guard, was detailed to the Connecticut River patrol, later was on the staff of Gen. L. F. Burpee who commanded the Home Guard as member of the Military Emergency Board, and was chairman of the naval military board of the Council of Defense.

"BLIND POOL" PROMOTERS HAVE BEEN CONVICTED

New York, May 1—Doctor Leonard K. Hirshberg, Winthrop Smith and Cornelius J. Kelly were convicted by a federal jury late today of using the mails to defraud investors out of $1,000,000 by means of a "blind pool".

The jury, which deliberated only 45 minutes, recommended clemency for Kelly.

Dr. Hirshfield and Smith, who operated as Winthrop, Smith & Company, stock brokers, until the firm was thrown into bankruptcy several months ago, were held in bail of $15,000 each pending sentence May 8. Kelly's bail was set at $5,000.

Testimony at the trial showed that the brokers sent out glowing prospectuses inviting clients to invest blindly in a pool, the proceeds of which were to be used in investments netting high profits. The profits were not forthcoming and several investors claimed they were unable to get their money back.

DAUGHERTY TO PRESS INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS

Washington, May 1. — Attorney General Daugherty declared tonight that the injunction proceedings in Chicago against leaders of railroad shopmen who were on strike last year "must be carried to a final conclusion in order that universal strikes which interfere with the transportation system of the country shall be a thing of the past."

Mr. Daugherty said he had instructed Blackburn Esterline, assistant solicitor general in charge of the government's case, to proceed with the presentation of evidence despite the withdrawal today from the proceedings of counsel for the various defendants. The case, he declared, will not be permitted to go by default.

CROWD TO HEAR DEBS IN A MAY DAY SPEECH

Chicago, May 1—Police were forced to use their clubs to back a crush of members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America intent in storming the entrance of the auditorium theatre today to hear Eugene V. Debs in a May Day speech. No one was reported seriously injured.

A riot call brought three patrol wagons loaded with police reserves and found a throng estimated by the police at nearly 3,000 swarming about the theatre building, the doors having been forcibly closed after the house was filled to capacity. The policemen drew their clubs and forced back the throng.

BOYCOTT HAS UNSETTLED THE SUGAR MARKET

New York, May 1.—The agitation against high prices for sugar, with the continued talk of a boycott by consumers, and the uncertainty occasioned by the government legal proceedings, has had an unsettling effect on the market. Very few buyers were in evidence today and fall sales of Cuban sugar were reported at 6 1-4 cents cost and freight, which represented a decline of 3-8 of a cent as compared with the last previous sale, and about one-half a cent per pound as compared with the recent high record.

May Day Wage Raise For Building Crafts

New York, May 1—Seven thousand Union members of building crafts celebrated May Day in New York City by demanding and receiving a dollar-a-day increase in wages.

Two branches of the American federation of labor were involved.

The masons' helpers, 4,000 strong and members of the International Building & Hod Carriers' Union, struck without notice, according to the contractors. They reported for work, demanded an increase from $7 to $8 and, without going to work, awaited the contractors' decision.

A hasty conference of contractors on job affected agreed that refusal to meet the demand would hold up some of the most important building operations in the city. The $1 increase was granted, but in the from of a "bonus", the employer refusing to incorporate it in existing contracts.

An increase to marble workers was granted, in the form of a bonus, giving cutters and setters $10 a day, polishers and rubbers $9.50 and helpers $8.

Two other strikes were in progress, that of Ward Baking company employes, called this morning in protest against the company's institution of the open-shop throughout its plants in several cities, and the strike of the local I. W. W. Seamen's Union, called a week ago.

No violence was reported, although there were several peaceful holiday demonstrations.

BATTLE ROYAL AT "HOLY ROLLERS" MEETING

New Brunswick, N. J., May 1.—Four hundred "holy rollers" were imprisoned on the upper floor of their Pillar of Fire church at Bound Brook, near here at midnight, while the local police force with drawn guns held at bay a menacing mob which gathered after a riot which occurred while a meeting was in progress tonight.

The "holy rollers," men and women, locked themselves in the second story when a crowd of non-members estimated at 500 precipitated the riot. The services were stopped, six of them taking exception to a remark made by a church speaker lauding the Ku Klux Klan.

Three of the non-members were badly beaten and numerous combatants on both sides were less seriously hurt in the melee in which stones, chairs and sticks were hurled. The women church members fought at the side of their men until police arrived and the angry citizens went outside.

Some time ago the "holy rollers" who maintain a colony of about 500 members here, advertised tonight's meeting as an attempt to organize a unit of the Ku Klux Klan and invitations were issued to a selected number to go and Tilley said an unnamed but prominent officer of the organization would speak.

The leaders marched up the center aisle first as the speaker asserted, "every one hundred per cent. American should join the Klan."

The church was in an uproar in an instant, pieces of furniture were hurled and fists pled.

In a few minutes all the church furniture was demolished all the windows broken and the interior was a shambles. Police who did not arrive until the battle was under way, fought to separate the opponents, driving the raiders outside while the church members fled up stairs.

EXECUTION OF PAPPAS MAY BE DEFERRED

Boston, May 1.—Paul Pappas, convicted murderer, who protests his innocence, reprieved at death's door six weeks ago, was again in the shadow of the electric chair tonight, centralfigure in a situation without precedent in this state. Although the court has ordered his execution some time after midnight, and today turned down the latest of several motions in his behalf, it was understood that electrocution would be deferred at least until tomorrow. Then Governor Cox and his council will be asked to extend Pappas' life again that further efforts in his behalf by appeal to the supreme court may be made.

The unprecedented feature of the situation developed today when counsel for the condemned man brought out in open court that the indictment against Pappas had been not pressed Saturday by District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien insofar as it charged murder in the first degree.

POSTPONED ACTION ON CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

Tallahassee, Fla., May 1.—The Florida senate tonight decided to postpone final consideration of a measure to prohibit corporal punishment of prisoners in this state and in what generally was considered a test vote the advocates of banning the strap lost, 13 to 16.

HEAVY DECLINE IN ENLISTMENTS FOR NAVY

Washington, May 1.—Due, officers declare, to the wave of industrial prosperity now in progress, the weekly average of enlistments in the navy has dropped from 900 to 340 and applicants from 2,000 to 950. It is estimated that the navy is 12,000 men short of its authorized strength.

PROTEST AGAINST ALLIED OCCUPATION IN TURKEY

Constantinople, May 1.—A Protest against allied occupation in Turkey constituted the main feature of May day telegrams were sent today by the labor organizations to similar bodies throughout Europe asking for assistance in bringing about a termination of occupation.

THREE BODIES PICKED UP BY LIGHTHOUSE TENDER

Boston, May 1—The coast guard cutter Acushnet reported by radio today that she was taking three bodies, believed to be those of men lost when the steamer Seaconnet went down in Vineyard Sound Sunday morning, to New Bedford. The bodies were picked up in the sound by the lighthouse tender Anemone.

40 Persons Injured When Car Ran Away

New York, May 1—Forty passengers were injured during the rush hour late today when a Manhattan Bridge car ran away on the grade as it approached the Brooklyn end of the structure, leaped the track and crashed into a group of waiting vehicles at the bridge entrance.

The car, containing about seventy passengers, had raced six hundred feet down grade out of control and as it left the track and collision with the vehicles seemed imminent, women screamed in fear.

Its flight was checked abruptly as it dashed into a heavy motor truck and crashed against a trolley pole, disconnecting electric wires. This added to the peril. The impact hurled many to the floor in a heap, in a shower of splintered glass.

The police quickly stopped all traffic on the huge span until wrecking crews could pick up live wires.

Five ambulances were soon on the scene but before their arrival a temporary hospital was established on the ground where those not seriously hurt were given first aid.

RADIO USED IN SEARCH FOR KIDNAPPED BOY

Schenectady, N. Y., May 1.—Radio, money, publicity and the services of police, detectives and volunteers tonight were being used in search for Verner Alexanderson, six, only son of E. F. W. Alexanderson, chief engineer of the Radio Corporation of America, who was kidnapped from the yard of his home by an unidentified man yesterday afternoon.

The father, whose abilities have gone far to develop radio communication, tonight broadcast a personal appeal to radio enthusiasts throughout the country to assist Mrs. Alexanderson and himself in locating their young son. Pictures of the boy have been sent throughout the country, and the publicity department of the General Electric company, a firm which Mr. Alexanderson serves as consulting engineer, was forwarding to newspapers of every type and tongue, photographs, description and appeals for the return of the boy.

In addition Mr. Alexanderson has offered a reward of $1,000, which has been increased to $2,000 by the city of Schenectady, to persons who may furnish a clue which will lead to Verner's recovery.

Only one clue of the man followed today, gave promise tonight. Police were informed by a garage proprietor at Voorheville, near Gloversville, that a touring car driven by a man resembling the person who abducted Verner and contained a tall, blond-haired man and a boy stopped for gasoline last night and then went on. Detectives today traced the car to Utica and Rlen and lost the trail.

ATTEMPT AT JAIL BREAK BY CLARA PHILLIPS

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, May 1 (By the A. P.)—The American woman who is held here by the police as Clara Phillips, the California "hammer murderess," made an attempt to escape from jail Sunday night with the assistance of several young students. She managed to get into correspondence with the students, begging them to come for her and her sister at 2 o'clock Monday morning.

The police learned of the plot and immediately began an investigation. Fifteen students are under arrest charged with complicity in the plot.

The woman refuses to have photographs of herself taken, and declares that when she talks the American public will be startled by her story. She asserts she is the victim of circumstances, and keeps light-spirited. Today she asked to consult a lawyer and demanded that her sister be released, as there is no charge against her.

Jesse Carson, who came here with "Mrs. Phillips" is in the penitentiary. He describes himself as the son-in-law of the Mexican General Felipe Angeles, now dead, and asserts his innocence. Carson is in a nervous condition.

IRVING FISHER'S ADVICE TO FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

Ottawa, May 1—Professor Irving Fisher, noted economist of Yale University, testifying before the banking committee of the House of Commons today, declared that the Federal Reserve Board of the United States should keep its rediscount rate above the market rate for money.

The effect of such a policy which is similar to that followed by the bank that now exists in the American system, he said, had the Federal Board pursued the English plan in 1920, it could have checked the finahcial crisis of that year, he declared.

BANQUET AFTER ACQUITTAL OF HAVING SLAIN SON

Cape May Courthouse, N. J., May 1.—Israel Gifford of Woodbine, an 86 year old defendant, freed today of the charge of killing his son, William Gifford, was banqueted and feasted tonight by citizens of his home town. The son was found early Feb. 4 shot to death in a house at Woodbine, N. Y. Following the acquittal, a delegation headed by Mayor William Eisenberg prepared to escort Gifford to Woodbine, where impromptu plans called for the use of the town's largest hall for a banquet in honor of the acquittal.

HELD WITHOUT BONDS FOR DROWNING HIS WIFE

New Britain, May 1—John A. Carlson, charged with the murder of his wife, Gerda Nelson Carlson, on March 24, waived examination when presented in police court today and was bound over without bonds to the June term of the superior court. The police allege that Carlson tipped over an automobile in which he and his wife were riding on the shore of a small pond and held her head under water until she drowned.

RIOTOUS SCENES MARKED CLOSE OF MAY DAY IN PARIS

Scores of Persons Were Injured and One Policeman Seriously Wounded in the Heart of the Communist District—There Were Minor Disturbances in Versailles and St. Denis—In Essen Thousands of Men and Women Paraded Carrying Standards Demanding Justice and Urging an Agreement Among the Nations—New German Reparations Proposals Are to be Made Today.

Paris, May 1—(By the A. P.)—Rioting, in which scores of persons were injured and one policeman was possibly mortally wounded, marked the close this evening of the quietest May day Paris has seen in years.

The police, after having experienced a peaceful day this evening were called into action in the heart of the Communist district where disorder arose, and it was fully half an hour before they were able to beat back the mob and clear the thoroughfares.

Two other demonstrations, both, however, of less magnitude, occurred about the same time in Versailles, where a half dozen police who attempted to make arrests were met with showers of stones and finally had to retire from the scene.

There was still another disturbance in St. Denis, where in a general melee a policeman was badly beaten and [illegible] in connection with which a [illegible] was arrested.

Throughout the day the [illegible] of the French proletariat [illegible] at work and most of those who took a day of apparently did so in order to parade the streets.

Because of the big crowds [illegible] and some waiting [illegible] and shooting of the [illegible], but these demonstrations were without untoward incident.

Parades were forbidden in Paris, so most of the strikers spent the day hanging about the street corners in order to be on hand in case any excitement developed.

PROBABLY 40,000 PERSONS IN PARADE IN ESSEN

Hesen, May 1.—(By The A. P.)—Communist and socialist demonstrations were held throughout the Ruhr today, but without [illegible] disorder. Great [illegible] were planned [illegible] the communists said, as that [illegible] occupation of the Ruhr and [illegible] at Versailles, but there was [illegible] of this in the addresses or [illegible] banners.

Probably forty thousand [illegible] Essen, with standard bearers [illegible] banners some inscribed [illegible] words from the writings of the Russian Soviet premier Lenine and other similar authorities. Among the inscriptions were: "We want work for [illegible]" and "Vive Cachin." The French communist deputy, who [illegible] with conspiracy against the [illegible] a state because of his activities in the Ruhr.

The biggest demonstration was at Dortmund, where 60,000 were in line. The only part of the communists' program that was carried out was [illegible] Dortmund and Bochum, where 3,000 [illegible] hundreds of wheat from South [illegible] were to be formally received, failed to arrive. It was [illegible] however, that two ships [illegible] of wheat from the soviets had arrived [illegible] and would soon be delivered [illegible].

A NUMBER OF PERSONS WOUNDED IN MADRID

Madrid, May 1 (By the A. P.)—A number [illegible] were seriously and [illegible] wounded tonight when the [illegible] had to intervene and use their revolvers and swords against a band [illegible] May day celebrators who made [illegible] upon the few cafes which remained open.

A police inspector received a severe wound in the head from an iron chair [illegible] by one of the demonstrators. Some of the mob impeded motor car and street car traffic, compelling the drivers to abandon their vehicles and the passengers to alight from them.

SPEECHES DELIVERED BY SOCIALISTS IN BELGIUM

Brussels, May 1.—Although May day in Brussels passed quietly, there were parades in Antwerp and other industrial towns in which red flags were carried and meetings at which numerous speeches were delivered by socialists.

At Antwerp the street cars ceased operation for five minutes and the railroadmen decorated their engine cabs with flowers. No disorder has been reported from any section of the country. Considerable attention was directed to the demonstrations today because of the possibility of a general strike shortly in the government postal, telephone and telegraph services, the employes of which are demanding higher wages on account of the increased cost of living.

COMPLETE TRANQUILITY PREVAILED AT ROME

Rome, May 1 (By the A. P.).—Notwithstanding strenuous efforts on the part of agitators to induce workmen to cause trouble during the celebration of May day, the day passed [illegible] almost complete tranquility [illegible] as advices received by the government show.

There were only a few insignificant incidents of an untoward character reported. The gravest of these was at Milan, where two fascisti were killed in a quarel among the fascisti.

BOASTS OF THE MILITARY STRENGTH OF RUSSIA

Moscow, May 1 (By the A. P.)—"Russia is much stronger militarily, and in every other way, this May day than she was last May day," declared soviet War Minister Trotzki, addressing the troops after a review on the Moscow garrison today.

Apparently referring to the trials and convictions of the Russian church officials, he declared that England had tried to interfere in Russian affairs—to say who could and could not be judged—but that Russia could conduct her own affairs in her own way.

It was obvious in the review that young officers trained in communist military schools, are rapidly succeeding the old army officers as battalion and company commanders. In last May day's review the head of nearly every battalion could be distinguished by his step as having once been an officer in the czar's army. After the lines of regular troops marched several thousand semi-uniformed youths. These have volunteered for military training preparatory to being called for regular service.

NO COLLISIONS ON MAY DAY IN BAVARIA

Munich, Bavaria, May 1 (By the A. P.).—Despite an atmosphere of great tension between the socialist and Hitler's "facist" national socialists, the May day celebrations in Munich and elsewhere throughout Bavaria passed without materialization of the widely feared collisions.

The Bavarian government took unusual precautions to maintain order in Munich. Detachments of reichswehr were stationed about the streets and occupied the telegraph office. The state cabinet had sat throughout the night considering measures to avoid disorder.

USUAL PARADES AND SPEECHES IN SWEDEN

Stockholm, May 1 (By the A. P.).—In Stockholm, Gothenburg and other cities of Sweden there were the usual parades and speeches by labor leaders and socialist and communist politicians in celebration of May day. There was no disorder.

At the demonstration here there were only about 10,000 men and women. About 100 red banners were to be seen. There were 23 bands in the procession. It is reckoned that there were in the vicinity of 3,000 communists among the demonstrators.

Among those who spoke was M. Branting who told his hearers that the workmen's eight-hour day was seriously endangered by many [illegible] the law now being considered by parliament. The meeting passed a resolution protesting against France's policy in the Ruhr and sympathizing with the Ruhr workers.

NEW REPARATIONS PROPOSALS ARE TO BE MADE TODAY

Berlin, May 1.—(By The A. P.)—Chancellor Cuno and Foreign Minister Von Rosenberg were closeted with the coalesing leaders for four hours today and later discussed the forthcoming reparations proposals with the premiers of the federated states who are in Berlin at the central government's invitation.

None of the participants in today's conference would discuss the contents of the note which will be delivered to the entente governments and Washington Wednesday, although the impression is general that the German offer will indicate a sum of thirty billion gold marks, supported by guarantees pledged by the industrialists.

Neither official nor political circles are showing any inclination to indulge in an excess of optimism with respect to the fate awaiting the new proposals at Paris and elsewhere, while the Ruhr industrialists incline to the belief that even if the forthcoming offer is accepted as a basis of early negotiations they will still be confronted with a definite period of occupation. Industrial leaders who profess an intimate acquaintance with the French desire regarding a reparations adjustment assert that France, in the event she accepts the new German offer as a basis for negotiations, will strive to have Germany guarantee annuities in lieu of a fixed sum.

Official circles view the arrest of Dr. Krupp Von Bohlen at Essen, on the eve of the despatch of the German note, as needlessly augmenting the existing difficulties in the Ruhr.

PRESIDENT OF THE KRUPP WORKS IN PRISON

Essen, May 1 (By the A. P.)—In the jail at Werden, not far from the villa Hugel, the home of the famous Krupp family, Dr. Gustav Krupp von Bohlen and Halbach, president of the Krupp Works, tonight is a prisoner of the French occupation authorities. He was taken into custody today by the French on charges brought against him in connection with the riot at the Krupp plant here March 31, when fourteen Germans were killed and a large number wounded by the French troops.

Dr. von Bohlen has also completed in the jail three directors of the Krupp Works, Dr. Bruhn, chairman of the board, and Herr Oesterl and Herr Hartwig, who have been incarcerated since they were arrested on Easter morning, the day after the shooting. von Bohlen and his associates are charged not only with violation of decree 23, conviction under which will entail terms of imprisonment fourteen years to life, and the possibility of a death sentence, together with a fine of [illegible],000,000 marks, but also are accused of violation of the first decree General Degoutte issued when he entered the Ruhr, regarding the maintenance of order. This latter decree provides for imprisonment up to five years and a fine of 10,000,000 marks.

Colonel Peyronel, commander of the artillery of the 77th French division, will preside over the court-martial which is to try the prisoners. Captain Dwyer has been appointed chief prosecutor, while counsel for the defense will include Dr. Grimm, the German attorney who defended Fritz Thyssen, the industrialist at the Mannheim [illegible] trial; M. Moblaud a Swiss lawyer and Dr. Wolff of Berlin.

The French authorities announced that the trial [illegible] Werden at 9 o'clock [illegible] ing and that the case [illegible] and sentenced [illegible] night.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office
31 Church Street Telephone 1029

The May term of the Windham County Superior court opened Tuesday afternoon at 1.45 o'clock with Judge Alanson H. Webb on the bench. Of the three cases assigned at the short calendar session of Friday of last week, two were started and were heard together. They were that of Edna B. Sharpe vs. Isaac G. Larkin and Susanna W. Sharpe vs. Isaac G. Larkin, administrator. The plaintiffs were represented by Attorney William A. King, and Attorney Samuel B. Harvey was counsel for the defense. The plaintiffs in the case are the mother and sister of Elmer Sharpe who died at his home at Williams' Crossing in December 1921.

It is alleged by the plaintiffs that on August 1, 1920 a note for $400 had been given by the deceased and up to the time of his death neither the principal nor the interest had been paid. It was further stated that an agreement whereby the sister, Edna, was to receive $2 a week had been disregarded. On the witness stand Edna Sharpe stated that the period ran from December 1, 1920 until December 1921 during which time she had not received any money.

Mrs. Elmer Sharpe, the widow of the deceased, was questioned at length. She stated that she and Mr. Sharpe were married in November, 1908 and at that time she went to live with her husband, his mother and sister.

She claimed that the mother and sister were not charged for rent, provisions, fuel and whatever else they cared for and that when the mother had been ill for a period of five months and under the doctor's care, Elmer Sharpe paid the bills. In 1919 an addition was built on the house and the sum of $400 was borrowed by Elmer Sharpe from his sister, Edna, to pay for the building. The note was a demand note to be without interest. It was made out in 1920 and renewed in 1920. In 1920 the mother and sister moved into the new addition and have occupied it since.

Witness said that she kept her husband's accounts and had never heard of or seen any provision to pay $2 weekly to Edna Sharpe. Isaac Larkin of South Windham, the administrator of the estate was called to the stand. He stated that the estate stood ready to pay the note of $400.

He said that Elmer Sharpe was a cattle dealer by occupation. At this point court was adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Samuel Spector and his daughter-in-law Esther Spector figured in a family quarrell early Tuesday morning following an argument between the elder Spector and his son Morris about the payment of a fire insurance on the property on Quarry street. Mrs. Spector interrupted the argument between the father and her husband telling the latter not to bother about the insurance and as a result she received a volley of insulting names and abusive language from the father-in-law, it is said. Neighbors heard screams made by Mrs. Spector and the shouts of the two men. Mrs. Spector became so enraged at the language used by Samuel Spector that she struck him several blows on the head with a broom, it is said, after which he turned on her and she ran to the telephone and managed to notify the police.

An officer was despatched to the scene and he placed Samuel under arrest. In police court Tuesday morning, Samuel insisted on beating his breast and proclaiming himself a good man. Mrs. Spector displayed a scratched forearm.

Judge Foss gave Samuel Spector a severe warning and the case was continued for two months during which time another quarrel may mean jail.

Mrs. Esther Caselina Don Dero died Tuesday morning at 11:35 o'clock at her home, No. 360 Valley street, following a lingering illness. The deceased was born in Genoa, Italy and was the widow of the late Charles Don Dero. Mrs. Don Dero is survived by four children, Louis N. of this city, Charles J. of Hartford, Mrs. Ramsay Wallace of Los Angeles, Cal., and Miss Rosian M. Don Dero of Boston, Mass.; and five grandchildren, the Misses Gertrude and Lois Don Dero of this city, Miss Dorothy Wallace of Los Angeles and Miss Esther and Charles J. Don Dero of Hartford.

The remains of Charles W. Martin were removed from the receiving vault of the Willimantic cemetery Tuesday and buried took place in the Lebanon cemetery. A committal service was conducted at the grave at two o'clock by Rev. Edward Nield. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and VanZandt.

Charles H. Smith, the two day old son of Mary Smith, died Monday night at the home of his parents in the Stone Row. Avery and VanZandt were in charge of the arrangements.

Abe Davidson of Norwich who has had an option on the land on Main street owned by Hyman Israel of this city and Abraham R. Rheinstein of Lebanon, jointly and Joseph Giroux, on the south side of the street, purchased the land Tuesday and the papers of transfer have been filed at the office of the town clerk.

The deal is one which has been pending for some time and takes in a good sized tract of the former Sayles estate, with an entire frontage of 102 feet and a depth of from 150 to 160 feet running back to the land of the New Haven railroad. Mr. Davidson announced that he intends to stand pat on the proposition which he made here a few weeks ago when he planned to build a large building.

There are to be two stories in the front, with four modern stores on the ground floor and sixteen office suites above with a modern theatre with a seating capacity of 2,140 people on the ground floor.

It was rumored that a number of anti-daylight enthusiasts at the local manufacturing plants were circulating petitions against the adoption of that system by the city. Upon what grounds they base their objections cannot be learned. On ecan easily realize cermeets when daylight saving time is in force but it is understood that the operatives in the local mills would profit in sleeping hours by its adoption here.

With a new schedule of hours at the mills they now have to report to work one half hour earlier than usual. In other words if they formerly went to work at 7.30 o'clock they now go at 7 o'clock. On the other hand, if daylight saving time is proclaimed in the city, there is little doubt but that the plants will resume the former working hours, which would be 7.30 o'clock daylight time and as far as the employee is concerned it would mean going back on his old hours with the old number of sleeping hours for he would be going to bed one hour earlier without knowing it. As an added benefit he would be out of the mill when the sun is still high in the heavens.

James P. Cochrane of this city was arrested Tuesday morning charged with non-support of his child and he was taken to South Coventry where his case was heard before Justice of the Peace William B. Hawkins. Cochrane pleaded guilty and was ordered to file a bond of $200 for the support of his child at the rate of five dollars a week.

Justice of the Peace Curtis Dean gave decision in favor of the plaintiff to recover judgment of $26.34 and costs of $10.79 in the case of Max Rabinowitz of this city vs. Horace Root of Windham Center, heard Tuesday morning. Mr. Rood was present at the hearing and he acknowledged the bill which was for retail supplies.

Through his attorney Anatas Nanias of Canterbury has brought civil suit for damages against Trevor A. Rice of Chaplin to recover a bill of $100 for services rendered. An automobile owned by the defendant was attached but was later released when a bond was furnished. The case will be heard Wednesday, May 23.

The reception to Rev. A. S. Muirheard, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will be held Thursday evening of this week at the church vestry at 8 o'clock.

Grand Knight William J. Grady and Arthur P. Bergeron will be the delegates from San Jose Council, No. 14 of this city to the state convention of the Knights of Columbus held in Stamford May 7 and 8. John M. Ryan and Francis Moriarty will be the first and second alternates respectively.

The members of the Men's Club of the Methodist church and their wives and women friends entertained all all those who took part in the Old Folk's Concert at the First Methodist Episcopal Church Tuesday evening.

Members of the staff of the local branch of the Prudential Insurance Company and Assistant Superintendent T. F. Mullen were in Hartford Tuesday to meet the president of the company. They were John A. McKenna, Joseph Bernat, Conrad Dubeau, John Bowler and Joseph Allard.

Mrs. Dwight E. Abel of Prospect street recently entertained a Congregational church circle at her home. Three tables of auction was at play.

JEWETT CITY

Monday evening Very Rev. Michael McCabe Council No. 236, K. of C. celebrated the first anniversary of the founding of the council when the members enjoyed their first annual banquet. The members assembled in Forester's Hall and marched to Roux Hall where the festive spread awaited them. When they had taken their places around the table, Rev. J. J. McCabe said grace. After which Don Houghton of Norwich took a flashlight photograph of the assemblage. The following menu was served to 128 members under the direction of Sol Musgovero:

Grapefruit
Roast Turkey | Cranberry sauce
Mashed potato | Mashed turnip
Olives | Celery
Apple pie
Ice cream | Coffee

Grand Knight E. J. Carroll made the address of welcome to the visiting clergy and brother knights. Rev. J. J. McCabe efficiently acted as toastmaster for the evening. Music was furnished by Nicholas Speilman's K. of C. orchestra of Norwich with Edward Connelly of Norwich as song leader. Among the features of the evening were several selections rendered by a quartette rated as "a thousand pounds of harmony". The first tenor was Ed Connelly, second tenor, Will Wallace, baritone, William Brickley, and bass, Daniel Gagnon. Other quartettes proved equally entertaining Messrs. Speilman and Connelly of Norwich rendered several vocal selections and were repeatedly encored. Borough Warden Matthew Geary gave a few words of welcome. Rev. P. J. McGivney, a brother of a founder of the order of Bridgeport addressed the company, telling of his trips into Egypt and the Holy Land. Father McGivney has traveled extensively and the local council prides itself as being extremely fortunate to have as its guest of honor so learned a man and such an eloquent orator.

Supreme Director William J. Mulligan of Thompsonville spoke on Columbanism, its past, its present and its future. He touched on the accomplishments of the order and its present undertakings and laid particular stress on the opportunities which will present themselves in the future. After several songs by the entire company, the meeting was adjourned. The success of the affair will make it a memorable one to every person present and especially to the local council.

Guests of honor included Rev. P. J. McGivney of Bridgeport, Rev. William I. O'Brien of Baltic, Rev. R. P. Morrissey of Plainfield, Rev. J. J. Tyler, Jewett City, Supreme Director William J. "The Third Alarm" at the Breed.

Paying a stunning tribute to firemen in every city throughout the land, depicting a story of rare entertainment value replete with thrills and on little romance and good comedy, "The Third Alarm", hailed as one of the really big pictures of the year, will be shown at the Breed Theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

Conceived and created by Emory Johnson, who was responsible for the great police melodrama "In the Name of the Law,". "The Third Alarm" strikes a vital note in American life of today. It reveals for once and in vivid dramatic sequences, just what the fireman—the every-day, hard-working, devoted servant who risks his life in the performance of his daily duties, means to our civilization. It dramatizes the lives of the very men who protect us and the property of the tax-payers of this community. It shows their struggles, the hazards they confront, the perils they undergo and their devotion to duty that we may live in peace and contentment.

The story has to do with the experiences of a veteran fire-fighter named Dan McDowell. Dan was a famous hero in the ranks of the smoke-eaters. But his years of loyal service dimmed his eyes and weakened the iron grip that held the reins of the plunging horses, and he was cast into the discard. The old white horse, "Bullet" by name, also went the way of his master when the horse-drawn vehicles of the department were replaced by motors. McDowell became a ditch digger. "Bullet" was employed in work no less arduous.

The troubles of adversity heaped upon old McDowell but he kept a stiff upper lip and triumphed in the end. His rescue of his son, Johnnie, also a fire-fighter, and June Rutherford, the daughter of a famous surgeon, when the young couple were trapped in a burning building is beyond question one of the most thrilling episodes ever created for the screen.

"The Third Alarm" is not propaganda. It is entertainment of the most engrossing nature. It shines like a mighty blazing beacon of truth and gives the fire-fighters a square deal for once on the screen where, unfortunately, there has been a tendency to lampoon them in films of a comic nature.

In obtaining this master production by a master producer the management of the Breed theatre has booked one of the really important attractions of the year.

"The Flirt" an Excellent Example of What Makes Play Success—Strand Theatre Thursday.

Have you ever noticed that one photoplay holds you spellbound, while another, equally as artistic in photography and cast, leaves your mind groping, and you rise from your seat with a sense of something having been lacking? In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it is due simply to the fact that the story lacks that human touch that brings it within our sympathies.

"The Flirt," Booth Tarkington's delightful classic of American life, which comes to the Strand theatre on Thursday of this week, is a glowing example of the type story that holds the attention from start to finish, and a careful analysis proves it to be due to the fact that it is a cross-section of life as the average person knows it.

For the role of the father the casting director engaged the services of that sterling actor, George Nichols, whose work in "Human Hearts" won wide commendation. Others in the really all-star cast are Lydia Craig, Tom Whitlock and William Welsh.

Other subjects are on the same bill.

WESTERLY SLAUGHTERS ACADEMY IN LOOSELY PLAYED BALL GAME

The Academy baseball team made a pitiful showing against the Westerly team Tuesday afternoon at the Academy campus and, like sheep being led to the slaughter, they accepted their fate with only a feeble bleat. Lack of ability, slowness of thought and a sad case of stage fright were contributing causes to the local team's ignominous defeat. Westerly's 13 runs were due largely to errors, loose playing and dumb moves made by the Academy players, and only one or two of these runs were earned.

Outside of Walz, who pitched a fine game, Burke at first, Tombari at second and "Butch" Mileski in back of the plate, the team was absolutely hopeless. Balls that should have been fielded were misjudged, grounders that should have been easy were booted and on the whole the Academy's performance was simply disgusting. On the other hand, Westerly played a good game in the field and hit well, although many balls that should have been fielded went for hits.

Walz pitched a game good enough to win in most any ball game but his ragged support cost him the victory. Ellie Selgal pitched the last three innings, and likewise the team made error after error behind him. Stenhouse and Barber of Westerly were the shining lights and contributed largely to Westerly's overwhelming victory.

The game by innings:

First.

Mitchell knocked an easy one to Walz, who threw him out at first. Blake doubled into center and scored on Meikle's grounder. Barber was hit by Walz and Stenhouse flied out to Kilroy. Lenihan flied to Burke.

Second.

Smith went out at first. Bamford singled but was caught trying to steal to second. Mellon struck out.

McNamara flied out to Barber and McGowan went out, second to first, while Cohn also went out at first. Score 1-0.

Third.

Mitchell went out, McGowan to Burke. Blake beat his grounder to first. Meikle went out at first. Barber walked. Blake and Barber scored on Stenhouse's double. Lenihan walked and Stenhouse and Lenihan scored on Smith's single. Bamford walked and Mellon flied out to Hinrichs.

Tombari took three swings and then went back to the bench. Burke hit a high fly to Mitchell, who made a pretty catch. Hinrichs fanned. Score 5-0.

Fourth.

Mitchell beat one out to first. Blake went out while both Meikle and Barber were thrown out at first.

Kilroy singled into center field and was caught at second. Walz reached first on a liner but he also was forced at second. Mileski grounded but was caught trying to reach second. Score 5-0.

Fifth.

McGowan rolled a slow one to Mitchell and beat it out. Cohn hit into a double play, Mitchell to Mellon to Stenhouse. Tombari walked and Burke did the same thing. Hinrichs knocked one down to Blake, who juggled the ball and got Tombari out on third. There was much razzing as Davis made this decision, it being very close. Score 5-0.

Sixth.

Bamford banged out a triple against the fence and scored on Mellow's single. Mitchell fanned and Blake went out at first. Mellow scored on Meikle's grounder and Meikle scored on Barber's triple. Stenhouse then doubled into right and scored on Cohn. Lenihan struck out. Spalding replacing Kilroy reached first by beating a grounder. He stole second but was caught at third. Walz went out at first, then Mileski flied out. Score 10-0.

Seventh.

Smith fanned and Bamford beat his grounder to first. Mellon doubled, scoring Bamford. Mitchell walked and Blake went out at first. Mitchell scored on errors while Meikle flied out to Brewer replacing Hinrichs. Haslam, in place of Phil McNamara went out at first. Strouse, playing short, beat his grounder to first. Cohn fanned. Tombari walked. Steinman batting for Burke hit a fly ball to left field, of which Bamford made a pretty catch. Score 12-0.

Eighth.

Barber fanned but Mileski dropped the last one and Barber reached first safe. He stole second, then scored on Stenhouse's single. Stenhouse went out trying to steal second. Lenihan fanned. Smith reached first and Bamford fanned.

Selgal went out, Mellon to Stenhouse, and Spalding beat one to first. Walz flied out and Mileski went out at second. Score 13-0.

Ninth.

Mellon reached first but was caught trying to steal second. Mitchell hit a liner and Blake followed suit and Mitchell tried to score on it but was caught at the plate. Meikle grounded to short and reached first but Barber struck out.

Haslam fanned and Strouse was hit by a ball. Hollander in place of Cohen flied out to Barber and Tombari ended the game by striking out. Final score 13-0.

Gorham Leverette pitched in fine form holding the visitors to two hits until the eighth inning, when Collins' fumble paved the way for a run. BABE RUTH FINED FOR AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

New York, May 1.—Babe Ruth lost $590.51, about four days' pay, in city court today when Justice Wendel ordered the New York American league baseball club to take that much out of the bambino's monthly envelope in satisfaction of judgment granted David Davidson for damages to his automobile in a collision with Ruth's car.

Attached to the formal order was a statement by the Yankee management Babe's boss, that on May 1, he had $4,333.33 coming to him and a like amount on June 1, so Babe's monthly stipend was unexpertly computed at $4,333.33. Dopers-out of Babe's annual salary, however, who have guessed it at various way stations between $25,000 and $100,000 were not helped much.

If he gets $4,333.33 a month for the approximate six months of the baseball season his salary is $25,000 a year, and if he gets a check the first of every month, winter included, it is $50,000, but if the amount increases or diminishes then it's different.

DUMOVICH TOO STRONG FOR REDS AND CUBS WIN

Cincinnati, May 1.—Dumovich held Cincinnati helpless in all but one inning today and Chicago won, 3 to 1, going to second place in the National league race. Keck was a trifle unsteady, two of the Cubs' runs being due to bases on balls, while the third was earned in the ninth inning on consecutive singles by O'Farrell, Dumovich and Statz. TWILIGHT LEAGUE MEETING ON THURSDAY EVENING

The Norwich Twilight league will be organized Thursday evening at a meeting to be held at the chamber of commerce rooms on Shetucket street at 8 o'clock. The team managers, captains and players are expected to be present for practically all the organization details will be made tat this meeting.

On Tuesday evening two more teams asked to be admitted to the league bringing the total number of teams that desire admission to the league up to thirteen. With this number wanting to play twilight ball it has been suggested that two leagues be formed and the winner in each league stage a city championship series after the league season. The teams that entered Tuesday evening were the Harddigs and Jack Harrington's Old Corners. The Old Corners had a fast team last year and were one of the pioneer teams in the twilight games.

REDS FARM OUT HOCK TO OKLAHOMA

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 1.—The Cincinnati Nationals today announced the loaning of Edd Hock, fast utility outfielder to the Oklahoma City team in the Western league. Hock was with Atlanta in the Southern association last year but as recalled by the Reds.

The Chicago club, which is playing here, released Dernie De Viveros, a recruit infielder, to the Kalamazoo team of the Michigan-Ontario league.

Dodgers Purchase Allen

New York, May 1.—The Brooklyn National league club today announced the purchase of James Allen, a left handed pitcher, from the Rochester club of the International league.

PITTSBURGH TEAM NEARLY CRIPPLED IN AUTO SMASH

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—Eight members of the Pittsburgh National League baseball team and Sam Dreyfuss, secretary and son of Barney Dreyfuss, president of the club, narrowly escaped serious injury here late today when an automobile in which they were returning to their hotel from the ball park crashed into a truck and was demolished. Of the nine, only the veteran pitcher, Babe Adams and Jimmy Maddox, recruit catcher, were injured, both slightly.

EASTERN CONN. LEAGUE IS TO BE DISCONTINUED THIS SEASON

There will be no Eastern Connecticut baseball league this season, according to the decision of a meeting of the league held at Jewett City on Tuesday evening. The teams in the league last season have failed to show any enthusiasm over the league this year with the exception of three teams, Jewett City, Baltic and Taftville.

These three teams were the only ones represented at the meeting last night and while they were very enthusiastic over the league a lack of interest shown by the other teams in the league caused the meeting to vote to abandon any further effort to promote a league. Willimantic, New London and Plainfield were the three other teams in the league and the baseball situation in these towns is such that these teams do not favor a league.

Jewett City, Baltic and Taftville will play independent baseball and are looking for games for the season. Owing to the possibility of the league being continued these teams have neglected to book games and so are without games for the next few weeks.

NO RADICAL RECONSTRUCTION IN PRINCETON BOAT

Princeton, N. J., May 1.—Princeton's Orange crew, with one or two possible changes, will represent the university in the regatta on Lake Carnegie, Saturday, against the navy and Harvard, Coach Spaeth said today.

"I do not believe that the 'varsity eight showed the best of which it is capable on the Schuylkill Saturday," Spaeth said, "and I am going to give it that chance Saturday. I am going to experiment and I may make some slight change, but there will be no radical reconstruction."

FREEDMAN SUSPENDED BY N. Y. BOXING COMMISSION

New York, May 1.—Sailor Freedman, Chicago lightweight puglist, today was suspended by the New York state athletic commission "until criminal charges against him in the courts of Cook county, Illinois, are disposed of."

Among five other boxers suspended by the commission for misdemeanors was Joe Burden, who was charged with breaking a contract to box in the Knickerbocker club at Albany.

Freedman was matched to box Johnny Clinton in this city Thursday but cancelled the engagement claiming illness.

DEMPSEY TO GET 50 PER CENT. OF GATE

New York, May 1.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, world heavyweight champion, announced today that he had accepted a guarantee of 50 per cent. of the gross receipts for the proposed Dempsey-Tom Gibbons match at Shelby, Montana, July 4.

"The percentage guarantee is satisfactory," said Kearns, denying the report that Dempsey would receive a flat sum. "I may go to Chicago tomorrow to sign binding articles if the promoters are unable to come to New York."

TILDEN WORKS WITH YALE TRACK TEAM

PARCEL POST.

The postoffice department has been giving the people of the country the benefit of parcel post for a number of years. It has been undergoing steady development and the favorable terms and service have resulted in a remarkable growth. It is a part of the postal service that is now being run at a loss, while it is at the same time calling for larger postoffices and more facilities for handling the great volume of matter.

It is quite natural therefore that there should be steps taken to bring about as great efficiency as possible in connection with parcel post. It is a branch of the department that calls for such changes as will make it possible to handle the business more economically and expeditiously.

After a study of the situation, or while an investigation is underway, it is not surprising that such a reorganization of the plan of handling of parcel post packages should be suggested as would put the parcel post under an arrangement similar to the express companies. Instead of hauling all the packages to the postoffices the plan has been proposed by Second Assistant Postmaster General Henderson that warehouses be obtained adjacent to railroad stations for the handling of all parcel post packages larger than a cigar box and containing matter not perishable.

Two and a half billion packages a year requires room, and certainly it doesn't require the expensive postoffice space and ought not to be allowed to interfere with the handling of other mail.

Parcel post has justified its establishment. There can be no thought of curtailing it, but means for handling it upon a proper basis cannot be delayed much longer. Reorganization now would be much easier than in subsequent years.

SUGAR.

While all the efforts are being made to bring about a reduction in the price of sugar there promises to be no more effective step taken than that which is being inaugurated in large centers for a reduction in the consumption of the sweet stuff. That we eat more sugar than we need or that is good for us in many instances is undoubtedly true. We can get along with much less and experience no detrimental effects. In fact such a curtailment has the possibilities of being beneficial to health as well as to pocketbook. It certainly would quickly offset the unfounded claim that there is likely to be a shortage for if there isn't a sturdy demand for sugar its price is going to fall to a point more in keeping with the demand and the actual situation.

While the steps of various kinds are being taken for the purpose of relieving the situation it is interesting to note the efforts that the tariff opponents are making to fasten the responsibility for the high price upon the tariff. The tariff means about a cent and three-quarters on a pound and certainly those who buy sugar knows that they are paying much more than that additional for their sugar.

If it had been the tariff that was at fault the rise would have been experienced immediately after the tariff went into effect, and if it was the tariff it would be expected that this country would pay the amount of the tariff above the price that is being demanded for sugar in free trade countries.

When the assertion is made that the price of sugar in free trade in England is higher than the price of the commodity in this country it rather knocks the prope out from under the claim that our price of sugar is due to the imposition of the tariff. Those who cling to the tariff cry, however, are hard put to explain why the addition of a cent and three-quarters to the old price of sugar should boost it up three or four times the amount of the tariff. Tariff talk, of course, pleases the speculators.

FIGHTING DOPE.

Making a fight against habit-forming drugs calls for more than can be done by any one nation. It is in fact a fight into which all nations should be eager to enter for the purpose of restricting opium production and use to strictly scientific and medical purposes. With all nations cooperating along such lines that substantial opposition that is called for might be expected, but with certain countries endeavoring to stop it while others are lending encouragement to its production and sale, and indirectly to the smuggling of it into those countries which are fighting it, the opposition must continue to make slow progress.

It is gratifying to note that the Pan-American conference, at the suggestion of the United States delegation has adopted a resolution favoring ratification by all nations represented at the Hague conference of 1913-14 of the establishment of a vigilant watch over international traffic in opium and other habit-forming drugs.

Every new instance that is established is beneficial. The league of nations has been busy in an effort to better the worldwide conditions concerning the use of opium. It wants production and use restricted to scientific and medical purposes, but through the influence of India the best stand that could be gotten was for restriction to legitimate uses, indefinite though that term may be.

It is through the determined fight that the goal is reached. The action at Santiago, Chile, indicates that sentiment is growing against narcotics. With the spread of such sentiment and the waging of greater efforts to curtail production, use and illegal traffic headway is being made, although it may not be as rapid as those who are cognizant of the demoralizing influence of dope would like it.

With the nations carefully guarding international trade in such drugs and striving for the protection of others as well as themselves the helpful influence of cooperative effort is bound to be demonstrated.

THE DRY LAW ON WATER.

The United States supreme court doesn't undertake to make law, repair their defects or curb their effects, provided they are within the constitutional limits. Its task is to determine what the laws mean and to interpret them. That is what it has done in connection with the prohibition amendment and its effect upon the transportation of liquor by ships and the sale of the same thereon.

The law as set forth by the court definitely determines what the situation is relative to our territorial limit concerning the operation of the dry law. We have been proceeding under different interpretations heretofore. American ships have been regarded as American territory wherever they may be and the sale of liquor on them or the transportation of liquor by them has been restricted. Likewise because the same view is held regarding foreign ships, they have been permitted to bring liquor for use thereon to ports of this country, although under seal within the three-mile limit, but that is held to be a violation of the law.

Immediately it is realized that the enforcement of the law in such a way as to stop this is to invite international complications. It removes the discrimination that has existed under the plan being followed, but it raises new problems.

The court has not been trying to adjust matters but to set forth the law. What complications develop are because the prohibition law has interfered with laws that existed and which are international. It means that there must be new legislation to change the situation or negotiations with foreign counries that are certain to call for careful work. It undoubtedly means that new changes will be urged in the dry law to overcome situations which have been created by the law as interpreted.

THE CROSS COUNTRY FLIGHT.

More interest is bound to be manifested in the effort of the army officers, Lieutenants MacReady and Kelly, to cross the country in an airplane without stopping, than was shown in the recent successful effort to establish a world record for endurance flight.

This effort will not be their first attempt. They have tried it before in the same machine and but for a minor defect, although one sufficient to cause them to land, they would probably now be sharing the honors which they hope to secure in their coming undertaking.

The distinction of being the first to cross the country in the air without stopping is no slight one. They are anxious that it should be gained by representatives of the army. It has been demonstrated that it is possible for aviators to stay in the air for a time corresponding to what will be required to go from New York to San Diego. That means that covering a fixed course it has been accomplished, the aviators have displayed the requisite skill and the machine has been found capable of continuous operation for that period of time. Crossing the country, picking out the way, encountering various conditions and knowing that a landing place is not always available makes the cross country flight far different from hovering over an aviation field, carefully marked and lighted.

Such a flight as is planned is going to be accomplished. Whether Lieutenants MacReady and Kelly will be the first to do it hangs in the balance. It will not surprise the country if they are successful.

AT APRICOT LAKE

Dear Hortense: How much happier this world would be if people would think a little about others instead of being so selfishly concentrated on themselves.

There are, to tell the truth, only three young men at the hotel who are in the least interesting and the poor things have absolutely no chance to breathe. The women act as though those of us who live rags though those of us who live rags apart in cottages had no right to exist so far as acquaintances are concerned. I met this Mr. Booke, his handsome friend, Harley Haven, and Dr. Drede at the Friday night dance and naturally asked them to call, telling them that perhaps they would enjoy the peace and quiet of our comfortable veranda instead of the commonplace hotel porch with its rows of rocking chairs. Crystal Etherwine overheard me and her smile was most disagreeable.

"That would be lovely," she broke in archly. "You don't know how tired I get of the routine here. I'll pilot you down to Geraldine's cottage any day, Dr. Drede."

She brought him down the very next day, assured me I had saved their lives and then prettily commanded him to sit beside her in the most comfortable porch swing and began to read his character from his hand. I must say for a sensible man he succumbed to old stuff like that with surprising ease. Dr. Drede just drank up the foolish flattery Crystal poured out.

I had some fruit punch and chocolate cake on hand to serve in case any one dropped in and I did want Dr. Drede to feel that I was hospitable and when I wheeled out the wicker tea cart Crystal was ecstatic. "Geraldine is such a good cook," she purred. "She just loves to putter around the kitchen. I wish I were that way, but it is so hard on the complexion, makes one so red and shiny."

I knew right away I must have forgotten to powder my nose as usual and looking down sideways I could catch a red glow from my countenance. Of course the doctor looked speculatively at me and then back at Crystal, who had on such a layer of powder that an arc light could not have shone through. When he murmured something to her about roses and lilies in an infatuated way I wanted to snatch back the cake our cook had made that morning, but it was too late. They ate half of it and I was so busy running back and forth for napkins and more punch and to replenish the cake plate that I did not have six words with Dr. Drede. The more I see of him the more I conclude he is a conceited, weakminded sort of creature and how Crystal Etherwine can be so demented as to fancy him I fail to see.

Harley Haven and Mr. Booke came by late that afternon and I waved to them from the steps. "If you're looking for my house," I called gayly, "you are at the right place. Do come in."

They hesitated a moment, but I held the screen door open, so they came up the walk and sat down.

"Just make yourselves comfortable in the swings," I told them. "Here are all the magazines and oodles of cigarettes and nothing to disturb you. I know just how tiresome it becomes being thrown with so many uncongenial people as you are down there at the hotel and given no time to call your soul your own!"

"Everybody has been most kind to us down there," said Mr. Haven heroically. I had seen him at the dance just about mobbed by those girls, and I knew what he really felt as he glanced around our roomy, vinehung porch. He really was remarkably handsome and had such a superior manner.

"We—er—had promised to play tennis before supper with some of the folks down there," Mr. Booke said a trifle uneasily, but I just laughed. "Serve them right," I said daringly, "to have to wait or miss their game—and don't you worry! You are too conscientious, Mr. Booke, about engagements that are, you might say, forced upon you. I know, though you of course can't say so, what a relief it must be to get away a bit!"

Just then three or four of the girls came laughing down the path and with a little shriek dashed up to the screening. "There you are!" they cried. "Do come on!" And with some scrambled words of farewell those two men got up and dashed away with them with apparent pleasure.

That tennis court is hotter than Sahara and I hope they get a sunburn that will send them home. At any rate, I shall do nothing more of a kindly nature to help them out. It just isn't appreciated! Yours always,

GERALDINE.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

"If you really feel you've got it in you, go ahead and write plays, and keep it up despite disappointments," is the advice to Jerome K. Jerome to the ambitious young writer. Jerome, who enters upon his 65th year today, probably has suffered as many disappointments as any modern author, but he bears no grouch against publishers or public because, as he says, it is the work itself in which he has always been most interested. The celebrated author and playwright started life as a clerk, and latter tried his hand at teaching school. Then he turned to the stage and from that to journalism. His first book was "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," which, with "Three Men in a Boat," was his most successful work. Of late years a number of notable plays have come from his pen, one of the most successful of which was "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

Wives of Famous Men

Octavia, Wife of Emperor Nero.

A most unhappy life, a tragic death—that is the sum of the story of Octavia, pagan empress of a more pagan emperor, Nero of Rome. At the time of the marriage Nero was but 15 years old, the girl probably less. Neither love nor consideration of the lives of the pair were involved in the union. It was an affair of politics and state.

Octavia, according to the historians, was a pure and virtuous maiden, beautiful and accomplished in her housewifely duties, in spite of her high station. It was her misfortune, however, in addition to other things, to continue childless for some years after her marriage. It was nothing short of criminal in those days for a woman, particularly a woman of loyalty, to be childless. One of her duties as empress was to provide the emperor with an heir. The domestic situation in Nero's household was an evil one at best, but Octavia's childless state made it infinitely worse.

Taking advantage of this condition, Poppaea, a lady of the Roman court and a favorite of Nero, who had the throne firmly fixed in her desire, began to plot against the innocent and unhappy empress. Before very long she had worked so upon Nero's imagination that he divorced Octavia and married Poppaea. Ultimately, by a carefully worked out fabric of lies and deceit, Poppaea accomplished the death of her rival, and Octavia, who had brought as her dowry an entire empire, was put to death, punished for crimes she had never committed, the victim of intrigues of which she knew nothing.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Utah's Southeast Corner.

"News of an Indian 'war' in Utah may come as something of a shock to those who think there no longer is an American frontier," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society, which goes on to describe the southeastern corner of Utah, where renegade Ute Indians have been resisting the authorities.

"It is logical enough that solitude-loving Indians, breaking with civilization, should choose the desolate, uninhabited portions of this almost unknown region as a scene for their adventure. The few men who have traversed and written about the outlying sections of San Juan county—which, incidentally is larger than the state of New Jersey—estimate that probably only a few hundred white men really know its remote sections, even superficially.

"This is a part of the United States which can perhaps be understood by outsiders only if they have gazed off over the depths and crags of the Grand Canyon and tried to imagine what lies beyond. San Juan county does not lie immediately north of the canyon; it is in a broad way a kindred land to that moated region—set off from the beaten path, largely a land of rock and canyons and desolation.

"The district is marked out by its own canyons. To the west lies the north-and-south gorge of the Colorado river, not yet the tremendous gash that it becomes farther south and west in Arizona, but still a huge cleft in the earth that can be crossed only at a few widely separated points. To the south lies the canyon of the San Juan river, minor beside the Grand Canyon, but a deep, difficult chasm for all that. To the north the Grand river, important tributary of the Colorado, runs in a deep channel, making the third canyon boundary to this isolated county. The west line of the state of Colorado marks the fourth boundary.

"The northern portion of San Juan county is in reasonably easy reach of a railroad, and the and in the central portion are two of the three principal towns of this vast division. Neither has a population of 1,000. Not far from the southeastern corner of the county and the state, a hundred miles from a railroad, is Blanding, around which the recent Ute uprising took place.

"The country south and west of there is a great expanse of red rock, carved into innumerable canyons, buttes and fantastic promontories. Where there is soil, cedars and sage brush grow. In some of the valleys there is grass and water, but much of the country is a rocky wilderness in which there is little animal life. Districts hundreds of square miles in extent are wholly without settlements, and some of the canyons are believed never to have been explored by white men.

"Ute and Navajo Indians ranged over this country in the early days, but even they found much of the region inhospitable and had their permanent headquarters in more favored valley regions east and south and west.

"In San Juan county are the most famous of the natural bridges of Utah which have been made into national monuments, and which deserve to be classed among the natural wonders of the world. The isolation of this portion of Utah is emphasized strongly by the fact that the first inkling of the existence of these great bridges did not reach white men until 1895, and the first of them were visited by whites as late as 1903.

"Because of the extreme difficulty of reaching the bridges, relatively few people have visited them even yet."

Stories That Recall Others

Her Choice

A little girl went to the library very much elated over her first few weeks at school. She especially enjoyed the little dance games and said to the interested listener that two boys had asked her to dance that morning.

"Indeed," was the reply, "and which one did you take?"

"Oh, I took the cleanest one," was the quick response.

The Latest Howler

The lesson was from "The Prodigal Son."

"But amid all the rejoicing," he said, "there was one to whom the preparation of the feast brought no joy, to whom the prodigal's return gave no pleasure, but only bitterness; one who did not approve of the feast they held and who had no wish to attend it. Now, can any one of you tell me who this was?"

There was a breathless silence. Then from a dozen sympathetic scholars came the chorus:

"Please, sir, it was the fatted calf."

THAT was years ago when he packed a terrible grouch, a mighty irritable stomach and a liver that refused to do the things that all good live.s should. No wonder his friends called him an "old pill" and stayed away.

GAINED 35 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC

"I have gained thirty-five pounds by taking the Tanlac treatment, and never felt better in all the sixty-two years of my life. Four years ago I got where I couldn't eat meat or scarcely anything else. Indigestion and bloating caused me agonizing pains and often got so terrible I couldn't even go to bed, much less get any rest. I was lame from rheumatism, and so weak I could scarcely move around. For two years I wasn't able to do a lap of work. I thought I was a goner and supposed I just had to await my time.

"But Tanlac has made me as strong and healthy as I ever was, and I work every day now. It has certainly been a godsend to me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

SECOND DEGREE MURDER BILL AGAINST JOHN WILBUR OF SALEM

A true bill for second degree murder was found by the grand jury in the criminal superior court at New London Tuesday against John C. W. Wilbur of Salem, who shot and killed Frank Early, a woodchopper, in Wilbur's shack in Salem last January.

Wilbur, according to the story he told after he had tramped through the snow several miles to a neighbor's house, shot Early in the early part of the evening, slept that night with the dead body in the house, and set out the next morning to report his deed so that the body could be taken away.

The Wilbur case was the first taken up when the May term of the court was opened Tuesday morning with Judge George E. Hinman presiding. Rev. J. R. Danforth offered prayer.

There were 15 prisoners in the pen, among them being three charged with murder. Besides Wilbur, these were Grace M. McSheffery of Manchester, N. H., 18 years old, and John J. Guinan of Philadelphia, a sailor at the submarine base, accused of the murder of the former's day-old baby at a rooming house in Bank street, New London, last February.

When court opened the grand jury was sworn in by Clerk George E. Parsons and was instructed by Judge Hinman as to their duties before they were given the Wilbur case.

Late in the afternoon they reported to the court that they had been unable to find a true bill of first degree murder but returned a bill of murder in the second degree.

Just before court adjourned for the day Wilbur was put to plea and pleaded "not guilty," electing to be tried by a jury. He is being held in the New London jail to await trial.

The grand jury still has the McSheffrey and Guinan cases upon which to return bills.

Sentences Given.

A number of the accused were put to plea during the day and two were sentenced.

Edward Wilson, accused of theft of fowl in Montville, was given 15 days in jail, and Joseph Dumas was given a year in jail for burglary at a Griswold school house where he got about $7 from the school children's thrift bank.

Fred Roderick, who came from a small town on Cape Cod and was accused of statutory burglary in Norwich, had a nolle entered in his case as the court deemed the evidence insufficient.

The court will come in at 9 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning for the grand jury to go on with the McSheffrey case.

The case against Dr. John N. Dimon was called Tuesday, but temporarily put over, due to absence of counsel, and similar action was taken in the case of Benjamin Ellis, charged with poisoning a horse. The case against Ernst Schleifer, upon recommendation of State Attorney Hull, was continued, as was the case against Henry Wilmot, charged with statutory burglary, pending examination by Dr. Wilcox of the Norwich State Hospital.

The evening session opened at seven o'clock in charge of Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Universalist church, following which Wallis I. COUNTY FARM BUREAU WORKING FOR BETTER COWS

Four carloads of dairy cows have recently been brought into Connecticut from western states, and an equal number will probably be purchased soon from the same sources. None of these cows came to New London county, but the farm bureau is outlining a campaign for importation of high class western stock.

New London county dairy farmers purchase about 3,000 dairy cows each year and the farm bureau hopes to influence the importation of dairy cattle to insure that only profitable cows are brought in. As dairying is by far the leading agricultural industry of the county, the quality of its dairy cattle is considered of primary importance.

Only about half of the cows used on dairy farms in the county are home reared. The purchase of cows is one of the big dairy problems. Recently, at the request of the four bureau organizations of Connecticut, A. R. Merrill, dairy specialist at Connecticut Agricultural college visited several western states in an effort to locate desirable dairy stock. As a result of his visit, the states of New York, Wisconsin and Michigan will be depended upon largely in the New London county farm bureau's campaign for bringing better quality cattle into the county.

The farm bureau expects to make a canvass of the county soon to determine just how many cows will be needed this year. In communities where there is sufficient demand it will be urged that one or more farmers be sent to one of the western states to make purchases. They will have the services, where desired, of a dairy specialist from the agricultural college to help make selections. Particularly in Wisconsin and Michigan, it is said, good cows can be bought at reasonable prices. Only tuberculin tested cows will be purchased under the farm bureau plan.

The movement for better cows is in large part due to a dairy survey recently taken on 500 New London county farms, which showed many unprofitable cows. It is estimated that fully half the cows in the county are not profitable to their owners.

G. A. R. VETERANS ENJOYED ENCAMPMENT IN NORWICH

The final meeting of the committee in charge of G. A. R. encampment meeting, which was held recently in Norwich, was held in the chamber of commerce office Tuesday afternoon. The committee reported that the affair was a successful one and the visiting delegates were highly pleased in the manner they were treated by sight seeing tours through the city and souvenirs given them, including ink wells and a picture of Norwich.

It was voted to have the secretary write a letter of thanks and appreciations to those who gave their autos for the welfare of the visiting delegates. Orrin M Price thanked the committee for the manner in which the program had been arranged. James McKee, senior vice president of the department, also thanked the committee, whose cooperation helped so much towards the success of the encampment.

BELIEVE MAN STOLE AUTOMOBILES IN NORWICH

Thefts of Ford cars from this city, it is believed by the police, will now drop to a minus figure following news from New York that William Khamer is under arrest there for theft of automobiles. It is reported that he has confessed to the arrest of over 20 cars, although it is not known whether cars taken in Norwich are included in the list.

Khamer is the man who came here late in February and sold an almost new Ford sedan to a Norwich man for about $225. He was arrested by State Policeman Sterling on suspicion that the car was stolen property but he skipped his bond of $100 and has not been seen here since.

Khamer is credited with the theft of several Ford cars from Norwich. His specialty seemed to be Ford sedans or coupes. The car he sold to the Norwich man is now held by the state police department at Hartford.

MAKES $10,153.65 FOR SACRED HEART CHURCH

Reports made Tuesday from the teams engaged in the Sacred Heart church drive for $40,000 for a rebuilding fund sent the total to the fine figure of $10,153.65 in three days.

The workers in the three parishes in the city and town have still much ground to cover, but they are going at it with vigor and the result of their work was seen Tuesday when the reports were made at night to General Chairman P. T. Connell.

The total for Tuesday from Sacred Heart parish, Norwich Town, was $304, from St. Mary's parish $1,546.65, and from St. Patrick's parish $1,600, a total for the day of $3,450.65. With the previous figure of $6,703, this brought the total to $10,153,65.

Miss Abby Sheehan, who is on Mrs. Chester Wright's team, has been assigned to canvass Ward street.

MANY MAKE APPLICATION FOR POLICE SERGENTCY

A nomination by the police commissioners to fill the police sergeant vacancy caused by the death of Sergeant John H. Kane on the night of Friday, April 6, through an electric shock, is expected to be made by the police commissioners at the common council meeting next Monday evening. It is understood that there is a sharp contest on between half a dozen of the force, with the backing of their supporters, in order to win the nomination for the coveted berth, which means a promotion from the ranks for the man chosen.

Several meetings have already been held by the police commissioners, Alderman Henry Gebrath, Councilmen Frank M. Green and Frank H. Quinley, who have had names before them for discussion, but, it is understood, that, so far, no decision has been reached.

Asked how many of the officers had applied, one of the commissioners facetiously answered, "all but one."

However, it is understood that actual applications may be narrowed down to six or eight, among whom are named Myron Morgan, Timothy Driscoll, Edmund Maloney, John Casey, Charles Smith, Michael Carroll, Elmer Allen and Thomas Murphy.

No intimation has come from the police commissioners as to whom they favor.

As the men rank in seniority on the force there are several at the top who are so near the retirement age that they will naturally be recognized as out of the running. The first twenty-five names on the list stand in the following order:

The need of filling a vacancy for police sergeant has revived recollections of the fact that the city charter actually provides for three sergeants on the force although there has never been more than two.

Several years ago, under an administration when the democrats were in control of the city government, they had the legislature pass an amendment to the city charter by which three police sergeants could be appointed. When it came to the question of who should be made third sergeant, who, under the circumstances, would be none other than a democrat, such a fierce contest arose, said a prominent democrat Tuesday, that an impasse was reached where no choice could be made and no third sergeant was appointed.

Since then the appointment of a third sergeant has remained a dead letter. So far as has been reported the matter of a third sergeant is not to be an issue at this time.

TOTAL STATE BUDGET WILL BE $28,579,811

The final budget bill was reported in the legislature at Hartford Tuesday by Chairman Ernest B. Rogers of the appropriations committee and shows a total of $5,481,992. Added to the first budget bill, adopted last week by both houses, the grand total of maintenance appropriations recommended for state expenses of the next two years is $28,- 579,811. The budget adopted at the 1921 session aggregated $20,020,392 and deficiency appropriations of $575,500 were made in the early part of the present session.

Expansions Cause Increase.

Not taking into account proposed expansion of some departments and institutions, the state board of finance recommended maintenance appropriations of $27,869,538. At the opening of the session proposals to add 30 men to the state police force, to increase the compensation of various state officials and to enlarge the Norwich state hospital for the insane and the Mansfield state training school and hospital, and the decision of the legislature to put two more judges on the superior court bench, are chiefly responsible for the excess of final estimates over those of the state board of finance. Moreover, an appropriation of $200,000 for the elimination of dangerous conditions on state highways was put into the budget rather than into a special bill.

Court Expenses Show Increase.

For judicial and court expenses $2,- 040,380 is provided in the budget for two years, an increase of about a quarter million dollars over the amount provided for that purpose in the 1921 budget. The military department budget was reduced $26,680 from the recommendations of the board of finance, leaving a total of $596,600. The motor vehicle department was increased $77,271 to provide for additional clerical assistance to handle the great increase in registrations and incidental business in the department. The total provided for the department is $918,671. A summary of the other appropriations in the budget follows:

State forester and fire wardens, $70,000; Connecticut Agricultural college, $567,500; highway department $1,801,500; public utilities commission, $127,000; state police department, $703,341; state park and forest commission, $150,000; state department of health, $355,000; Mansfield State Training school and hospital, $695,000; State Farm for Women, $262,000; Mystic Oral School for the Deaf, $125,000; comptroller, for public school expense of children living in state property, $15,000; bank commissioner, extra allowance for bank examiners on account of proposal to examine private banks, $15,000; comptroller, for highway insurance, $50,000; petty cash for institutions and departments, $50,000.

Enlargement at Mansfield.

Anticipating that new construction at the Mansfield State Training School and Hospital authorized by the present session will be completed in time to be used the last six months of the fiscal period, the budget of that institution was increased $75,000 for the support of the additional inmates.

The appropriation provided for the state park and forest commission represents a cut of $50,000 from a recommendation of $300,000 made by the finance board.

The total of the first budget, favorably reported by House Chairman Keith of the appropriations committee on April 11, was $20,097,- 819. The combined total is probably the largest for a budget in the history of the state, but the percentage of increase for the two-year period is not as high as in previous sessions. It is held to be proportionate with the normal growth of the state.

$9,000 For Norwich Armory.

Another bill will provide appropriations for state armory repairs as follows: Hartford, $20,000; New Britain, $10,000; Norwalk, $7,000; New London, $10,000; Norwich, $9,- 000; New Haven, $20,000.

Niantic Cut $88,500.

For alterations and improvements at the state military camp at Niantic, for which $100,000 was originally asked, and $65,000 recommended by the committee on military affairs, the appropriations committee will recommend $11,500 to be used chiefly for sanitary work.

Ten thousand dollars will be provided for transportation and equipment of [illegible] National Guard air squadron in Connecticut, the appropriation being contingent on the war department furnishing the material. This headquarters will be in Hartford or land put at the disposal of the state by the city.

Tuesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Delia Messier was held from her home in Wauregan with funeral services attended by a large congregation of relatives and friends at the Sacred Heart church. Rev. J. C. Mathieu, the pastor, was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were William Brousseau, William Peon, John Gowen and James Ward. Honorary bearers were Mrs. Salem Maynard, Mrs. Louis Keromack, Mrs. O. Duval, Mrs. J. Couture. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

While driving along on a load of wood which he was hauling to his home at Hopkins Mills from a point on the highway between Pierce's four corners and East Killingly Albert E. Curtis was stricken with heart disease and died almost instantly, falling over on his back on top of the load of wood. His son, Edwin, who had accompanied him into the woods, called loudly for aid and Ralph Pierce responded.

The young men managed to get the body down from the load and arranged for its removal to Mr. Curtis' home. The medical examiner gave heart disease as the cause of death.

Mr. Curtis was born in the town of Foster 74 years ago and had lived there all his life. For a long term of years he was engaged as a storekeeper, but had spent many other years at farming. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Luther Cole, of North Sterling, his son, Edwin, at home, and a sister, Mrs. E. Packard, of Foster.

Mr. Curtis' brother, Philip, died about five weeks ago.

In the town court Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed a fine upon Merrill Jacques of East Killingly for violating the provisions against fishing in the Hygeia reservoir near East Killingly. This was the first prosecution of the season for violation of the fishing laws. Mr. Jacques' appearance in court followed his being found fishing in the reservoir back of the dam by Deputy Game Warden F. E. Kies. The warden did not find Mr. Jacques in possession of any fish. However, the reservoir is listed as among the restricted waters of the state, being the borough's source of supply for drinking and other purposes. Another charge that might have been preferred against Mr. Jacques was fishing in a pond prior to May 1, but this charge was not pressed. Another man who was nearby when Mr. Jacques was ordered into court was not molested for he was not engaged in fishing.

The body of William Henry Chace, who died in Arlington, R. I., the past winter and has since been entombed was brought to Danielson for burial in Westfield cemetery. At the grave the Masonic committal service was conducted by Attorney E. L. Darbie of Moriah lodge of which Mr. Chace was one of the oldest members, having become a Mason in Danielson in 1875. He also was a member of Marren chapter and Montgomery council of Danielson.

Mr. Chace was born near East Killingly 83 years ago and for many years was a resident of this town. He was for years a stage coachman driver over the route conducted between Danielson and Providence by Stone and Richards.

In later years Mr. Chace was in the employ of the Providence Gas company. About 15 years ago he came out to the nearby town of Foster, R. I., and lived there for about a dozen years, returning to Providence three years ago.

Twenty-eight years ago Mr. Chace was married to Mrs. Emily Gleason, a sister of the late Stephen Cole, well known in Danielson and in Putnam, where he was proprietor of a hotel.

Large crowds attended the carnival again on Tuesday evening, many of those in attendance coming from nearby towns. All of the features received attention from the crowd, the ferris wheel, the whip and the miniature mechanical city holding a special appeal for a great many.

It seems definitely established that Danielson is going to let daylight saving strictly alone this year. Some of the manufacturing concerns have long since announced that they will cling to their standard time schedules and that decision carries a lot of weight with business and other interests. There is no great demand here as far as can be ascertained for a change to daylight saving, notwithstanding that some nearby territory is now figuring the days on that basis.

Danielson has a new industry—the manufacture of cigars. This business is being established by C. H. Michaels, owner and proprietor of the Danielson inn and at the present time three cigar makers are employed. Mr. Michaels hopes to increase his force to ten men in the near future.

Cigar making is a new industry for Danielson but it is hoped to develop it so that it will be of considerable importance in the business life of the community.

A large attendance is expected at the Congregational parish house next week when the annual convention of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. is held here. The delegates, both men and women, will be served a supper, Mrs. F. E. Cunneen being head of the committee has in charge the arrangements for the supper. There will be addresses as well as reading of annual reports, which this year promise to be very interesting and will review in detail what has been done throughout the county since last spring.

Several from Killingly and towns hereabouts will be at Putnam Wednesday of next week as candidates for naturalization. This is the first opportunity of the present year for aliens to be admitted to citizenship in Windham county.

Observers who have kept careful record of weather in this territory over a long period of years assert that this is one of the latest springs in a score of years and that it is about three weeks behind the average season. Very few flowering plants are in bloom and the trees are leafless as yet. Only grass seems to be making a real start.

Local contractors are interested in the opening of bids today (Tuesday) for the big job of making extensions and repairs at the Windham County Home for Children. About $25,000 will be expended by the county commissioners.

There was sufficient grumbling among mill operatives in Putnam Tuesday to indicate that the adoption of the daylight saving schedule of working time this week in various textile plants is not to the liking of a great many of the workers. Scores of them are frankly displeased with the arrangement, put into effect at least in some mills without consultation with the operatives as to the preference in the premises. So widespread did the displeasure of the new time working arrangement appear to be on Tuesday that it would not be at all surprising if a mass meeting of mill workers is called, as has been suggested, to take such formal action as may be deemed necessary to call the attention of mill directors to the operatives viewpoint and petition for a return to the standard time schedule in force prior to this week. Whether it is held that the mills are continuing to operate on standard time, but starting operations an hour earlier each morning, or whether the new arrangements is admittedly a daylight saving proposition the operatives care little. What many of them want is restoration of the old arrangement.

A representative of one mill that is now operating an hour earlier each morning said Tuesday that his concern's chief interest in the matter was to be in line with railroad time, that there might be no inconvenience in shipping or hauling arrangements, for the freight office is now opening an hour earlier each morning and closing an hour earlier.

Two main objects to the new working schedule are made by the operatives. The first of these is that it means too early rising in the morning, the second that in many homes where there are children housewives have got to get six meals each day to serve the members of the homes that work in the mills and the children who go to school or are employed where the old time arrangement prevails.

So acute has become the feeling that some universal arrangements as to time should prevail in Putnam that the matter came before the monthly meeting of the common council Tuesday evening.

If is is possible for interests who would promote Putnams welfare and growth to obtain financing to the extent of $750,000 to $1,000,000, or even 80 per cent. of these amounts, this city may yet witness the transfer here from Taunton of the yarn making equipment and organization of the Manhasset Manufacturing company. An effort to do that very thing is now being made and if it is successful the money raised will be used to build homes in which to house the nearly 1,000 people who would come here through the making of the change. Success of this plan would mean a tremendous boost for Putnam and increase its population by approximately 10 per cent.

Approximately 70 attended the banquet of the Putnam chamber of commerce held at the Putnam inn Tuesday evening, the event being one of special interest and valuable as a means of bringing together so many representatives of the city's manufacturing and commercial and professional interests. The principal address of the evening was by Richard S. Watrous, general secretary of the Providence chamber of commerce. Secretary Albert S. Reiston of the Putnam chamber of commerce also addressed the gathering relative to The Accomplishments of the Putnam chamber of commerce. Mayor Victor Chapdelaine was an honor guest at the banquet.

S. W. Ellis, formerly county agent with headquarters in this city and now state leader is to be a speaker and another address will be delivered by H. J. Baker, former state leader, when the quarterly meeting of the Windham County Guernsey association is held in Willimantic on Monday evening of next week. There will be as a feature of the meeting a butter and cream scoring contest for all who wish to take part and suitable prises will be awarded to the winners.

District Deputy R. W. Jacobson will be in attendance at a meeting of Quinebaug lodge of Masons Thursday evening of this week, when the third degree is to be conferred upon candidates. A collation is to be served by members of the Eastern Star.

Hector Lucier, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Lucier of this city, is to sail later this month for Guatemala, where he is to fill a position as paymaster for the United Fruit company.

The directors of the Windham County Farmers' association is to hold a meeting in Grange hall at Brooklyn at her home in North Grosvenordale this (Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Anna Lena Johnson, 85, is dead Mrs. Johnson, a native of Sweden, had been a resident of the village in which she died for about a quarter of a century.

State Officer A. W. Williams of the Danielson barracks came here Tuesday to issue operators' licenses to applicants, of which there seems to be a never ending number desiring to qualify as drivers of motor vehicles.

At a number of summer residences in Pomfret, Woodstock and Thompson preparations are being made to open them for the season.

Delegates from all the Knights of Columbus councils in Windham county will be at Stamford the early part of next week for the annual state convention of the organization.

A considerable number from this city went to Woodstock Tuesday to atttend the auction sale conducted by Witter Brothers of Danielson at the Wendell B. Phillips farm. Melancthon Riddick is administrator of this estate.

Prisoners held at the county jail in Brooklyn or out under bond to answer to criminal charges will be presented in the superior court at Willimantic at the May term, opening today.

Read carefully the terms of this offer so that you may have the fullest opportunity to share in its benefits. The conditions are so simple and fair that every housewife in the United States can take part in this National Recipe Festival!

There Is No Other Food Like Grape-Nuts

WHILE practically every man, woman and child in the English-speaking world knows Grape-Nuts as a delicious, nourishing and wholesome cereal, and while it is common knowledge that Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food, many housewives do not know of the appetizing and economical dishes that can be prepared with Grape-Nuts. It lends itself, we believe, to more uses than any other cereal. The convenience and economy of Grape-Nuts, and the flavor, zest and wholesomeness which it imparts to other food, make it invaluable in every home.

Frequently we receive interesting letters from women throughout the country, telling about the attractive dishes they make with Grape-Nuts—delicious puddings, salads, dressings for fowls, etc. No doubt there are thousands of women who are finding varied uses for Grape-Nuts in their home cooking, and even more thousands who will be glad to learn of those varied uses; for while we all cling to old favorite dishes, we also welcome and enjoy a change.

So that is the thought back of our offer of more than $7500.00 in cash for new ways of using Grape-Nuts. To those women who are already using Grape-Nuts in various ways, other than as a breakfast cereal or in the recipes given here, and to those women who would like to try their hand at developing some new way to use Grape-Nuts, we offer to buy at $50.00 each not less than 101 new Grape-Nuts Recipes. We plan to include these new Recipes in a beautifully illustrated cook book.

What Is Grape-Nuts?

Grape-Nuts is a highly nutritious food in the form of crisp, golden granules. It contains the full nutriment of wheat and barley, including vitamin-B and mineral elements required for building sturdy health. These elements are often lacking in the ordinary diet, chiefly through "over-refinement" in the preparation of food.

No other food is so thoroughly baked as Grape-Nuts. More than 20 hours are consumed in the baking process which makes Grape-Nuts easy to digest, and also develops a natural sweetness from the grains themselves.

The form and crispness of Grape-Nuts invite thorough mastication—a decided advantage because this not only provides proper exercise for the teeth, but makes for good digestion.

Every housewife in the Land should take advantage of this extraordinary opportunity to earn the tidy sum of $50.00 by a little pleasant and educational effort in her own home. Also the fair and equal chance to secure one of the liberal awards to be made by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Moreover, there's the greater knowledge of the value of Grape-Nuts, not only as a delicious breakfast cereal, but in the preparation of a variety of appetizing dishes that add to the health and pleasure of the whole family.

NAMES WATERBURY MAN FOR PLACE ON BENCH OF SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, May 1—The last of Governor Templeton's appointments, requiring confirmation by the general assembly, went to the senate today, which according to the statutes, was the final day of grace. The governor still has many minor appointments to make which do not, however, require confirmation. Judge Peasley was named for an 8-year term beginning December 22, 1924. The appointment was tabled for the senate calendar.

The governor also sent to the senate his nomination of an entirely new state board of mediation and arbitration. His selections are: Ex-Mayor Frank A. Hagarty of Hartford, Patrick F. McDonough of New Britain and Patrick F. O'Meara of New Haven.

SENATE.

On the motion of Senator Wilder the house reconsidered its action on the governor's nomination of Arthur F. The committee on claims reported favorably on the claim of James E. Green of Mansfield for loss of livestock on account of the contamination of a stream in that town, and the comptroller was ordered to draw his order on the treasurer for $1,200 in favor of Mr. Green to compensate him for his loss. The report was accepted and the money appropriated.

It was voted.

It provides that bridges which are out of repair or which are in need of being strengthened shall be reconstructed by the state highway department on an order from the public utilities commission and that the railroad company shall reimburse the state for one-half the cost. An aggrieved person whose application for a license has been denied or his license revoked may take an appeal to the superior court. The act shall not apply to an executive officer of a company or a traveling salaried employe or to fraternal benefit societies. The violation of the statute shall be punishable by a fine of $500. COMPETITORS' NIGHT AT WILLIMANTIC ROTARY CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, May 1.—Competitors' night held Tuesday evening at a local hotel will be recorded as one of the biggest events of the Willimantic Rotary club. The affair was excellently carried out in every detail, each member having as his guest a man in a similar line of business. Those present partook of a delicious dinner after which a short business meeting was held in charge of President James P. Mustard.

A communication was read from the New London Rotary club expressing that club's willingness to attend the proposed outing at the Connecticut college at Storrs to be held sometime before July 28.

A report from District Governor Don Adams stated that during the month of March the Willimantic club had stood third in point of attendance at a 100 per cent. meeting held on March 13th. Fred P. Jordan, chairman of the boys' work committee, reported that the program for boys' week, which is this week, is nearly completed and includes the following: Announcements made at the churches last Sunday; speakers at the various schools during the week; big parade on Saturday for boys from the sixth grade of the grammar school up, the parade to include bands and drum corps. On Saturday morning at 9.30 boys between the ages of ten and sixteen are invited to attend a motion picture show. Following the parade in the afternoon sporting events including two boys' baseball games will take place at Recreational park and prizes will be awarded to the winners of the events. It is also arranged to have refreshments served at the park.

Jeremiah McCarty will be marshal of the parade.

Raymond A. Parker was song leader for the evening and a few songs were rendered by a selected double quartette. Much mirth was created when all the baldheaded members present were ordered to join in the singing of a song. They were headed by "Baldy" John S. Ahern, chairman of the entertainment committee. Mr. Ahern then announced that he would test the powers of the club's hot air artists and he called on the following to blow up and burst toy baloons; Aime J. Martineau, Morris S. Leonard, Jerry E. Sullivan and William A. Dawson. To everyone's surprise the first baloon to burst was that in the hands of Jerry Sullivan.

The big treat came when the two speakers were introduced. They were Revs. Harry S. McCrady, O. S. Beaumeister. Rev. Mr. McCready spoke briefly but forcibly and most inspiringly on "Boys." The theme of his talk was that men should not look upon boys and dress them as their inferiors, but rather to consider them as comrades and men of tomorrow. He dwelt to some extent on the establishment of a more equal comradeship between the man and the boy. He believes that every man should be interested in boys. Rev. Mr. McCready concluded by saying that boy's work is a great task and an overwhelming privilege which is placed before every member of Rotary and al[l] men.

Rev. O. S. Beaumeister of St. [J]oseph's church, this city, was next introduced. His subject was Co[m]munity. At the conclusion of his address the speaker said he wished to thank Morris S. Leonard for h[is] erous assistance in arranging [the] ing trip for St. Joseph's boys [to] vote of thanks.

Both speakers were given [a] vote of thanks.

The meeting was adjourned at [9] o'clock and the members went [to] cal moving picture house where [the] ...ram by courtesy of John ...

PRISONERS PLEAD NOT GUILTY IN CRIMINAL SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, May 1.—It is expected that the grand jury in the superior court will be engaged the three days of this week in consideration of the two murder cases it has to deal with. The court cases came in this forenoon and after the noon recess several prisoners were put to plea. Those arraigned and the responses to the clerk's reading of the complaints against them were as follows. Joseph Caugher, a New London printer and Mrs. Fred Buddington of Norwich, charged with adultery in living together as husband and wife, not guilty; Napoleon Michette and Laura Le Rue, of Norwich, adultery, not guilty; John O'Brien, indecent assault, not guilty; Fred Roderick, statutory burglary, not guilty. The case against Ernest Schleifer, charged with sabotage, was continued as was the case against Benjamin Ellal, charged with poisoning a horse. The cases against Henry Wilmot was also continued that he may be examined to establish his sanity.

The case against Dr. John N. Dixon of New London charged with manslaughter in causing the death of one Partlow of Groton, was called, but his counsel, Marion R. Davis, was not present and the case was continued.

The case the grand jury considered today was that against John C. W. Wilbur, a Salem farmer, charged with the murder of Frank Early, a farm hand and lumberjack, last January.

The case of the state against Grace McSheffrey, charged with the murder of her infant at the Fournier house in this city, will go to the grand jury next. John J. Guinan, a sailor at the submarine base, is concerned with the McSheffrey girl. She has absolved him, it is understood, as being the father of the baby. The girl does not appreciate the position she is in nor to realize the sentence that may come to her.

The grand jury is made up as follows: Edmund W. Perkins, Napoleon R. Lewis, George E. Fellows and Charles D. Noyes of Norwich; Clark B. Whaley and F. W. Battey of Groton; Almarin T. Hale and Joseph Kopp of New London; Albert R. Stillman, and Nathaniel P. Noyes of Stonington. James L. Phillips of Montville; Llewellyn R. Smith, Lebanon; Billings S. Crandall, Ledyard; Fred L. Gross, Waterford; Julius T. Rogers, East Lyme. Judge Hinman is on the bench. It is not likely that jury trials will begin until next Tuesday as business will not be ready for them till then and the state's attorney will not call them in till the trials are ready to proceed with.

Private William Chapman of the 100th Company, C. A. C. stationed at Fort Wright, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital for injuries he sustained in New London this afternoon. It is possible that Chapman is internally injured but that fact will not be determined for several days.

Cmapman, together with other soldiers was engaged in transferring boxes of ammunition from a lighter to a freight car, which was on a siding south of the union station. In carrying a box, which weighed about 200 pounds, across a section of planking leading from the boat to the freight car, the plank slipped, causing Chapman and the other soldiers to release their hold on the box, which dropped across Chapman's abdomen. He was given medical assistance, but as he was in so much pain and it was not able to determine the extent of his injuries Chapman was transferred to the hospital.

An automobile, owned by Attorney Thomas Troland of No. 151 Lincoln avenue, and operated by Mrs. Troland, was struck by a Connecticut Company trolley car this afternoon on State street. The automobile was slightly damaged.

Captain Everett B. Thomas has obtained the position of pilot on the ferryboat Mohican, now being operated by the town of Groton, a position made vacant by the recent resignation of Captain George H. Crandall, for several years master of the steamboat and prior to that time master of the steamer Restless of the Fishers Island Navigation Company. Captain Thomas was formerly assistant inspector of steam vessels and is well known locally. Capt. Crandall has secured a position as master of one of the tug boats of the Tramps Towboat Company.

The funeral of Joaquin Cabral occurred this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's [illegible] and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. [illegible] Weischlaeger. Pallbearers were Richard Almeda, N. Barbera, A. Perry, James McKeever, [illegible] and H. Barnes. The flower bearers were Anthony Martin and Jesse Perry. Interment was in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery.

The action of the city council last evening [illegible] to cause Officer [illegible] to patrol [illegible] of the city on the [illegible] of the police force was the subject of much discussion on the streets today. It was learned that the [illegible] has been [illegible] for some time and [illegible] has been [illegible] to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WESTERLY

That the efforts of the Westerly Board of Trade for a deeper Pawcatuck river channel has begun to show tangible results is made evident by the departure of Surveyors Ralph M. Hazard and John P. Carr and Carl A. Nordquist, all of Providence, together with Surveyors H. W. Kenyon and S. S. Whitcomb of New London, on last Saturday for South Norwalk, the scene of projected harbor improvements. The Providence party arrived here April 15th with instruments and from that time began the work of the river survey from the Broad street bridge to Rhodes Folly beacon in Little Narragansett bay.

The New London party arrived April 20th with motorboat and automobile. It was found that in numerous places sandbars had formed and stones and bowlders had worked out into the channel, greatly reducing the navigable depth, especially when compared with present charts.

Although the Board of Trade had urged a $250,000 appropriation for improvements to bring the channel depth to 12 feet, the river and harbor bill as passed by the last congress makes the sum of $32,000 available on July 1st for maintenance, and this amount is very acceptable and will go far toward making an approximate 10-foot channel. Activities of the Westerly Board of Trade for a 10-foot channel began on Dec. 3, 117, when steps were taken to seek an immediate improvement of navigation conditions. Committee investigations showed that while the charted waterway from Stonington to Westerly showed a depth of 10 feet at that time, the greatest possible draw of vessels coming in was less than nine feet at high water mark, and the shoaling has continued to the present time.

A special committee on correspondence was named by the trade board in 1921 which took up the matter with federal government engineers and congressional delegations. Hearings were held under the direction of the river and harbor committee of the Westerly board, Charles J. Butler, chairman, Oliver C. Andrews, Frank N. Wilcox, Everett Barns and William Clark, with the result that the federal engineers were supplied with data to be used in reports which were to be made to congress. Success attended their efforts and need shown for maintenance sum obtained, even if the larger sum and deeper channel was not realized.

The day previous to the surveyors' departure "cease up," intimate and personal contact with river depth was obtained as Surveyor H. W. Kenyon fell overboard, with no more serious results than a thorough soaking, with the attendant necessity of a trip to Loudery's inn for a change to dry clothing.

Apparently not satisfied with river soundings as made by river surveyors, the upper reaches of the Pawcatuck river were tested Monday noon by Mrs. Cathers Waters, who is employed in the Dubrelle & Galin restaurant, although the river exploitation was entirely involuntary on Mrs. Waters' part. As she was descending the wooden stairway at the rear of the Briggs building, Main street, where the restaurant is located, the stairs gave way suddenly and she was precipitated into about four feet of water. Councilman and Police Commissioner Louis Rossi, who was in the restaurant at the time, secured a step ladder and with the assistance of George McBride, a former well known baseball player, employed in the restaurant, Mrs. Waters climbed to safety. It was said that the non-fatal termination would not permit to be chronicled an addition to the well known words, 'dust to dust, ashes to ashes"—Waters to water. Mrs. Waters was taken to her home on School street uninjured.

A gathering of Masons representative of Washington and Kent counties, Rhode Island, was held Monday evening at Wickford in Odd Fellow block, the home of Washington lodge, No. 5, F. and A. M., which lodge was instituted at the home of Rowse Babcock in Westerly, Feb. 19, 1789. In furtherance of the wish of Most Worshipful Grand Master of Masons in Rhode Island Norris G. Abbott for a more active association of the lodges in the various districts, Rt. W. Sixth District Deputy Howard K. DeWolf called a communication of the lodges with the master and two members chosen by lot to act in their various offices for the exemplification of the entered apprentice degree.

As Wickford was to be the host, Worshipful Master J. W. Greene occupied the east. All the masters of the lodges in the district were present as follows: W. E. R. Butts, King Solomon's lodge, No. 11, East Greenwich; W. A. H. Coe, Franklin lodge, No. 20, Westerly; W. Robert P. Day, Charity lodge, No. 23, Hope Valley; W. P. A. Smith, Hope lodge, No. 25, Wakefield. Stations were filled as follows: W. M., J. W. Greene, Washington, No. 5, Wickford; S. W., J. N. Crandall, Hope, No. 25, Wakefield; J. W., H. R. Curtis, King Solomon, No. 11, East Greenwich; Chap., A. E. Barber, Franklin, No. 20, Westerly; Sec., J. P. B. Pierce, Washington, No. 5, Wickford; S. D., J. D. Nall, Hope, No. 25, Wakefield; S. D., Elba O. Young, Washington, No. 5, Wickford; S. S., L. R. Greene, Franklin, No. 20, Westerly; J. S., G. W. Wainwright, Charity, No. 23, Hope Valley; Sen. Carl D. Roun, King Solomon, No. 11, East Greenwich; Mar., W. Wilmot, Washington, No. 5, Wickford; I., Robert A. Gray, Washington, No. 5, Wickford.

At the close of a most impressive evening before a filled lodge room remarks were made by R. W. DeWolf and Grand Lecturer Sylvester M. Budlong and the active members. A collation consisting of chicken salad, rolls, ice cream, cake and coffee was served at the close. Delegations of members from th various lodges filled the lodge rooms to capacity.

With the foundation walls and partitions of the new Washington Trust company block at the corner of Broad and Main streets nearly completed to the first floor level, many of the steel floor girders are in place. Workmen were engaged Tuesday in bricking in the walls to the elevator pit near the center of the east wall of the structure. Commendable progress has been made with the excavation works and foundations when there is taken into consideration the generally unfavorable conditions of the past winter weather.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED.

New York, May 1.—Professional speculators for the decline continued in control of today's stock market, repeating their manoeuver of yesterday by staging another last hour raid which carried a number of the popular industrials 1-2 to 2 points below yesterday's final figures. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer was depressed 7 points and Stromberg Carburetor, 4 1-2. Rails offered good resistance to selling pressure, the averages showing a slight gain in the day.

Closing out of weakened marginal accounts and liquidation by frightened investors was largely responsible for the heaviness at the opening. Some experimental short selling also took place in the early dealings but the general list offered fairly good resistance to selling pressure, Kelly-Springfield selling more than 3 points above yesterday's close in the first hour and Baldwin, Studebaker and other favorites gaining a point or so. Trading became dull on the rally, however, and the shorts again extended their lines and succeeded in touching off more stop-loss orders.

Prices zigzagged back and forth until just before the close when the shorts greatly increased their offerings. Studebaker which had sold as high as 120 7-8 was the individual target and was forced down to 117 1-2, where it was off 2 1-4 points on the day. Other motors and motor accessories yielded in sympathy, Chandler, Bosch Magneto and Hupp each dropping about 2 points and Reynolds Spring, 1 1-2.

Another flock of new low records for the year were established during the session, some of the most important being U. S. Steel at 102 7-8, American Express at 118, Austin Nichols at 25, General Electric at 173, General Asphalt at 40 1-2, Davison Chemical at 27 and New York Central at 91 3-4, closing prices generally being around the lowest of the day.

Good investment buying of selected stocks was reported at the lower levels. Some of the active issues to close above yesterday's final figures were Kelly-Springfield, American Car, Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific, Pacific Oil, Pan-American, The Virginia Carolina Chemical issues and International Paper.

Call money opened at 5 3-4 per cent., and eased off to 5 1-2 and thence to 5, where it closed. The time money market was virtually deadlocked with brokers bidding 5 and 5 1-4 per cent., depending upon maturity, and bankers asking 5 1-4 and 5 1-2. Prime names on Commercial Paper discount at 5 and 5 1-4 per cent. with more paper moving at the higher rate.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was relatively light because of the holiday abroad. Rates were irregular. Demand Sterling advanced 3-3 a cent to $4.63 3-4 and French francs eased slightly to 6.73 cents. Danish kroner responded to an increase in the official Danish bank rate from 5 to 6 per cent. with a gain of 27 points to 18.85 cents. Norwegian kroner dropped 30 points to 17.00 cents, a new low record for the year.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, May 1.—In a sudden upset of values today, wheat prices tumbled harder than on any previous occasion, for a month back. Stock market weakness had a decidedly unsettling influence, and so too did an estimate that the 1923 yield of winter wheat would be much in excess of the amount looked for of late. The close was unsetled 1 3-8 to 2 3-8 net lower with May 1.20 1-4 to 1.20 3-8 and July 1.20 1-8 to 1.20 1-4. Corn finished at 5-8c decline to 1-4c advance; oats a shade to 1-2@5-8 off, and provisions at 5 to 15c decline.

At first the wheat market had an upward tendency owing to the readiness with which deliveries on May contracts here passed into the hands of exporters, and also because of adverse weather in the spring crop belt. After moderate gains in price had been scored, however, sentiment underwent a radical change, the initial depressing impulse coming from a statement issued by a leading authority indicating that the winter crop this year would total 576,000,000 bushels, an aggregate only 10,000,000 bushels below what was harvested in 1922. Besides deliveries at Winnipeg today were said to be the largest on record for May 1.

Heavy selling which developed in the wheat market here was greatly accelerated by severe breaks meanwhile in stock quotations. It soon became apparent that the wheat market was full of orders by which losses were intended to be stopped by selling when assigned limits had been reached, but the declines were so rapid that many such orders failed to be executed at the figures named. Rains in the southwest benefitting winter wheat counted as an additional bearish factor, but profit-taking operations rallied the market somewhat at the last.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat, corn, however, being steadied to a considerable extent by purchasing on the part of a big elevator interest.

Provisions were weakened by the setback in grain prices.

Organized Fair Play

JUST as thousands of slender threads are woven into a single fabric of enduring strength and beauty, so are the employees of this organization united for a single purpose—to produce woolen and worsted fabrics of enduring value for the world's millions.

The American Woolen Company is a recognized leader in the woolen industry of the world because it has, through efficient organization, been useful to the people and to the industry it represents.

And that efficiency was rendered possible through co-operation and fair play. Fairness to employees and to the people who buy and use its goods is the driving force behind the "seven league looms" of the American Woolen Company.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

The little sparrow on the porch
Beneath the hanging eaves
Had made herself a little nest
With bits of string and leaves.
And when the nest was nicely made
Five little eggs in it she laid.

"My, but you're in a dreadful hurry,"

"Make us look as well as you can" said Uncle Lucky.

said little Mrs. Sparrow as Little Jack Rabbit hopped through the gate of Uncle Lucky's little white house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot street, Rabbitville, U. S. A.

"Well, you'd be in a hurry, too, if you'd been through what I have," answered the little bunny, but I won't repeat what had happened for I told you all about it in the last story.

"Goodness me!" said the gentleman rabbit bunny after hearing what a narrow escape his little bunny nephew had had from Old Man Weasel, Danny Fox and Mr. Wicked Wolf, "Will troubles never end?" And then, he rubbed his sore toe—the one that had the rheumatism, you know, and wound his gold watch and chain, although it didn't need to be wound until thirteen o'clock.

"Never mind," answered the little bunny, "for here I am safe and sound and I don't care what becomes of Mr. Wicked Wolf."

"Let's take the Yuckymobile and go for a ride," said Uncle Lucky, "we might as well get some good fresh air," so out they hopped to the garage and pretty soon, not so very long, they were riding away as happy as the day is long.

Well, by and by, they met their friend, Photographer Crane. He had his long-legged camera with him and, as soon as he saw the two little rabbits, he said:

"Oh, let me take your picture,
This lovely balmy day,
You'll both look very handsome
In your Luckymobile, gay."

"Go ahead!" said the old gentleman rabbit, taking his blue silk polkadot handkerchief out of his pocket and wiping off his old wedding stovepipe hat. "Make us look as well as you can for a ten dollar lettuce leaf yellowback!"

"Now, be quiet; don't you move;
Smile a little more.
Think of all the happy times
That have gone before."

"Goodness me!" said Uncle Lucky, "I must have a bad memory. I was hoping maybe tomorrow something nice would happen." And then, he began to smile and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Re. W. D. Woodward spoke to the children at the Sunday morning service in the Methodist Episcopal church from Philippians 3: 2; the theme, Beware of Dogs. This preceded his sermon from Corinthians 15: 55-56, The Six Kinds of Death Named in the Bible. It has been arranged to invite Rev. A. Earl Kernahan, evangelist, of Boston, to hold services at this church some time in July or August for one week.

At the Epworth league service on Sunday evening Mrs. Nelson Parker was the leader, with the topic Leadership for Service.

The annual meeting of the Gales Ferry Cemetery association will be held on Saturday afternoon, May 12, at 2 o'clock in the church vestry. The sale of pews of the church will follow this meeting.

The Ladies' Aid society of Long Cove held an all-day session at the home of Mrs. Emil Gundesky on Wednesday, when a bedquilt was completed.

Mrs. Delphine Fish returned last week from a visit of two weeks with her sister and family, Mrs. Horace H. Sears, at Hastings on the Hudson.

Miss Lena Lewis, who has been in Jewett City for some weeks, following her arrival from New York, has opened the home of her mother, Mrs. William Lewis, at Allyn's Point.

Miss Marjorie Gates was dismissed from Lawrence hospital, New London, on Monday, where she underwent an operation for the removal of tonsils and adenoids, and has returned to the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Harmon L. Perkins, in the village, previous to going to her own home at Long Cove.

Mrs. Billings F. S. Crandall of Stoddard's Wharf, Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop and Miss Alice Satterlee, members of the Anna Warner Bailey chapter, D. A. R., of Groton and Stonington, attended a meeting of that chapter in Westerly Thursday afternoon.

BALTIC

After the rain clouds of Saturday had rolled away, Baltic, the home of Courpt Sprague No. 90, Foresters of America, loomed up as an attractive place. As many places had gone on daylight saving time Foresters from various parts of Connecticut began pouring into this little village about early hour, and kept arriving both by autos and trolleys so that by 1.30, standard time, the town seemed to be made up of nothing but Foresters.

Promptly at 1.45, the marshal of the parade, Leodore LaCroix, mounted on a steed of coal black, started the line of march, being followed by the American flag bearers, and Mr. Brunnell's band of 30 pieces rendering the airs most appropriate for the event. Next in line came the supreme chief ranger and the grand court officers of the state, namely George P. Sullivan, ex-mayor of Derby, Robert L. Lodge, of Meriden, Thomas O'Loughlin of Naugatuck, and Henry A. Congdon of Norwich. These were followed by Deputy Grand Chief Ranger Frank J. Murtha and Past Chief Ranger Dennis J. Hines. After these came Court Sprague, then the degree team of Court City of Norwich, whose appearance dressed in their full regalia, certainly did attract the attention of everybody on the route of march. After the degree team Court City of Norwich came Wequonnoc of Taftville, St. Marie of Willimantic, Liberty of Voluntown, Griswold of Jewett City, General Lafayette of Moosup and the autos bearing those too old to march. The beauty of the parade was that all officers wore their regalias and the others their badges.

Leaving St. Jean's hall teh line proceeded up High street, down through Main street, up River, back through Main street, across Railroad street and back down High street to St. Jean's hall.

Court Sprague and the visiting courts then had the great pleasure of listening to an address, well chosen and well selected for the day, by one of the best orators of the organization and of the state, Supreme Chief Ranger George J. Sullivan, ex-mayor of Derby. His address was chiefly directed on what the order has done, is doing, and intends to do in the future, and his words will long be remembered by those who heard him. Brief addresses were given by the grand chief ranger, Robert L. Lodge, and Grand Secretary Thomas O'Loughlin.

The degree team of Court City of Norwich then was given the floor and they certainly deserve great credit for the fine work they displayed in putting on so fine a degree, a degree that was clean, clear, and honorable to the class of candidates who had the good fortune to take it. This work, which fully covers the great ideals of the order, namely, Liberty, Benevolence, Unity and Concord took up the full time of one hour.

Two-minute talks were given by the chief rangers of the various courts present and the afternoon was brought to a fitting close by Court Sprague serving refreshments. Court Sprague was greatly complimented by all for the doings of the day and all as they left to return to their homes wished the court many years of success, prosperity and happy returns of the day.

It left a great impression on the minds of all since it shows that the order here in Connecticut is rising and extending its arms to all who are fit to become members.

Mr. and Mrs. Henri Bibeau of Willimantic road celebrated the 25th birthday of their son Arthur and had as guests 20 couples of young people, who enjoyed themselves at various party games. A splendid lunch was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Duquette of Woonsocket are visiting local relatives.

MYSTIC

Mystic Encampment, I. O. O. F., were honored by a visitation from two of the grand encampment officers at the meeting held Friday evening. Rufus J. Church, district deputy grand patriarch of New London, was present. The patriarchal degree was conferred upon a class of candidates. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting and a social hour was enjoyed. There were several out of town visitors present.

Twenty of members of the ladies' Aid society got together and thoroughly went over the Methodist parsonage, preparatory to receiving their new pastor, who arrived Friday evening. Rev. J. G.

Work on the water pipes at the corner of Hunters avenue and Merchants avenue has been completed. While the repairs were in progress there was a deep hole in the road and red lanterns were used at night to warn traffic of the danger.

"LIFE'S BEAUTIFUL GATE," SHOP MEETING TOPIC

At the regular weekly noon meeting at the Richmond Radiator plant Tuesday under Y. M. C. A. auspices, the speaker, Rev. C. H. Ricketts, greatly interested his audience of employes on the topic, The Beautiful Gate of Life. In part the address was as follows:

"This subject is taken from the cure which Peter performed at the beautiful gate in Jerusalem. There is some suggestion in the fact that the lame man was cured at a gate. A gate is not a place of residence but merely a passage way. It leads from one inclosure to another; more often from a street to a private or public building.

The gate serves the double purpose of keeping people out who want to get in like the gate of a castle or a walled city; also it keeps others in who would like to get out like the gate of a prison. In both cases it is a necessary protection.

Not only is a gate useful, it is likewise beautiful as the gate admitting to the Pitti Palace. The gate at Solomon's temple was beautiful in its design. It was everything that the artificer's design could make it. But we should never have heard of it had it not been connected with this cure. It was association with a beautiful deed that made it beautiful.

What made that particular gate beautiful was the fact that every afternoon at 3 o'clock, Peter and John went through it to pray in the temple. In so doing they came across a man who had never stood upon his feet. That is moral beauty came into contact with physical ugliness. Disease, like sin, is always ugly. The poor man was forced to beg and beggary is as ugly as disease. It is unnatural for any human being to come down to beggary. It has a tendency to disrupt the moral order. The lame man stretches forth a thin, bony hand for a fraction of a penny.

Peter does not give him even that, but says "Look on us!" The cripple must look at moral beauty if he is to see it and feel its power. You and I must look at the "King in His beauty," and see it, before it gets into our hearts. There will be no results if we turn our backs on Him; we have no eyes in the back of our heads.

This gate was made beautiful because it was the place where he received vastly more than he asked for or expected. He looked on Peter and John expecting only a miserable pittance and was bitterly disappointed at the words "silver and gold have I none." How many like this cripple have one species of heart failure when they ask for silver and gold and fail to get it. But if we get into right relations with God we will receive something more than alms.

Peter's answer, however, was so dazzling that it amazed him, "but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." But the cripple moved not a muscle. He was simply overpowered by the audacity of the suggestion. Then Peter took him by the right hand and helped him to his feet and never again did he lie on that pallet of straw and beg for his bread. What happened was this: He asked for a paltry alms to keep miserable body and soul together, what he received was the ability to earn his bread which was a thousand times better. Next to finding Jesus Christ the biggest thing in this world is to find the capacity for living like a man.

When the red blood began to surge through flabby muscles and dead bones is it a wonder that he went forth "walking, leaping and praising God?" Do we want the beautiful life? Then we must have beautiful thoughts, do beautiful deeds, all of which come from cultivating the beautiful spirit. And we get this by leaving the ugliness of ourselves and passing through the Christ gate into the spiritual beauty of God.

NINETY-EIGHT OUT OF EVERY HUNDRED WOMEN who have tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ailments peculiar to their sex have been benefited by it. What a marvelous record for any medicine to hold! Over 50,000 women replied to a questionnaire recently sent out by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., 98 per cent. of whom definitely stated that they had been benefited or restored to health by this old-fashioned root and herb medicine. This is a most wonderful record for efficiency, and should induce every woman who suffers from any ailment peculiar to her sex to give it a fair trial.

THOUGHT BAG IN RIVER MIGHT SOLVE MYSTERY

A railroad engineer on the New Haven road had visions of a possible solution of the mystery in the disappearance of William Tebbets of Fitchville when he noticed for several days a black bag lodged among some rocks in the water of the Thames river at Allyn's Point. Monday when he went by he could see that the bag had opened and that the contents seemed to be protruding. From what he could see it looked as if the bag might contain parts of a body.

The engineer notified the Norwich police and an officer was sent to investigate.

The bag was found to contain the carcass of a dog.

J. Donohue. This is in final settlement of the claim for Fishwick's injuries on April 18, 1922, while an employe of the company. He was incapacitated to June 18, then resuming work, but was obliged to quit soon and had worked intermittently up to Dec. 25.

He had not worked since Dec. 26. He had been compensated for time lost before then on the basis of a voluntary agreement before this award.

WAITT AND BRIDE VISTING IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

Putnam, May 1.—This city, it would appear from articles appearing in Boston newspapers, is entertaining a bridal couple—Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Waitt—whose romance attracted much more than ordinary attention because of the fact that the groom is a son of Albert H. Waitt, wealthy cigar manufacturer, who is insisting that his son, 22 years of age, will have to earn his living and support his home without paternal assistance.

The couple were married Saturday in Newton, Mass., and early press despatches set forth that it was an elopement. Father Waitt denies this, however, insisting that he was full informed as to the young couple's plans and further that he not only approved of the alliance with the reservations noted, but went with his son and the bride-to-be to the city registrar's office in Newton and arranged for the issuance of the marriage license.

The bride, who was Miss Marian Stappan, was a salesgirl at Newton prior to her marriage. Mr. Waitt senior told newspapermen who interviewed him relative to the marriage that she is a very nice little girl and that her marriage to his son was with his approval and co-operation. "I told her," he is quoted as saying, "that my son would have to work to support her and she was not only willing to accede to this agreement, but also told me she was willing to keep on working herself. Published stories rate me as a millionaire, but I never accumulated that much money in the cigar business, as my income of only $34,000 a year will indicate. However that has nothing to do with my insistence that my son shall go out and earn his own living. He has been a wireless operator on vessels prior to his marriage, but after he returns from his wedding trip to Putnam, Conn., where the bride has relatives, he will have to look for a job."

The young couple have been admirers of each other since their high school days, press despatches state. It was not generally known Tuesday where the couple is visiting in this city.

TO INSPECT HULL OF WRECKED YACHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, May 1.—Customs officials here have ordered two divers to inspect the hull of the British motor yacht, Thelma Phoenix, which is grounded at Sunday on Fishers Island, N. Y., in an effort to determine whether the craft can be salvaged. It was reported today the yacht is resting on a large boulder.

Deputy Collector J. C. Comstock said today that the seven members of the crew of the craft are British subjects and would be released. The ship's papers, seized, show that her cargo of 2400 cases of liquor was consigned to Halifax from Nassau and no commercial charge can be brought.

About 150 cases of liquor have been recovered.

FRENCH OFFICIALS REGARD GERMANY'S REPARATIONS OFFER AS PREPOSTEROUS

Germany Proposes That 30,000,000,000 Gold Marks be Fixed as the Sum Total of Her Obligations—Would Retain Privilege of Passive Resistance in the Ruhr—In France the German Note is Regarded as Not Making the Slightest Progress Toward the Settlement of the Proposition—French Government Has a Plan for the Settlement of the Reparations Problem to Bring Out When the Time is Thought to be Opportune.

Paris, May 2.—(By The A. P.)—The proposals contained in the German note, which was delivered at the foreign office at four o'clock this afternoon in the German language, are regarded in French official circles as for Anglo-Saxon and neutral consumption only. The terms of the note appeared "so preposterous" to the members of the French government that it was assumed there was no hope or desire on the part of Berlin that they be accepted.

"The scheme amounts to the reopening of the whole question of reparations as settled by the treaty of Versailles," a high official of the government said. "The plan is aggravated by the suggestion that in case of failure of a loan, which no one here thinks can be floated successfully, the question of payment by Germany would be referred to a commission, on which would be represented neutrals who are loaded up with marks and have every interest of boosting them by getting Germany off as easily as possible."

Another official said: "There is not the slightest progress toward settlement in this proposition. On the contrary, there is an effort at a movement backward, and it is impossible for the French government to consider it for a moment."

Premier Poincare is studying the translation of the text of the note as it is being made and is reserving comment until he has the whole document before him, but those about him did not conceal the unfavorable impression which the note had made. The opinion is that the reply will be flatly negative.

M. Poincare will probably confer with France's allies before giving his answer, but it is thought it will be unnecessary to consult with Great Britain, as the proposals have as their object the evacuation of the Ruhr, in the occupation of which Great Britain has not participated, and for similar reasons there will be no exchange of views with Washington.

The French government has a plan for the settlement of the reparation problem, which it is holding in reserve, to bring out when the time is thought to be opportune, but it will be only when Germany has ceased resistance to the allied action in the Ruhr and has manifested a desire to reach a serious agreement although it is improbable that it will be brought out in reply to Chancellor Cuno's note.

From information received at the foreign office there is belief that the reichsbank will, as a sequel to the note, make a renewed effort to boost the mark, and thus convey the impression that the German proposals have had a good effect on the market.

Experts connected with the foreign office expressed the opinion that Germany does not desire the success of the loan, that if she did she would not propose it at the present time; that it is to her interest for the loan not to succeed, as under the conditions of the proposals failure of the loan would throw the whole question into the hands of an international committee of business men, with authority to fix the sum Germany ought to pay, and that this committee would surely take less into account the sacrifices France has already made than any allied conferences.

HOW GERMAN PROPOSAL IS VIEWED IN ENGLAND

London, May 2.—(By The A. P.)—The significance of the new note which Germany has handed to the entente government, it is considered here, lies less in its intrinsic merits than in the fact that Marquis Curzon's speech in the house of lords succeeded in overcoming the apparent deadlock into which the Rhur problem had fallen and induced the German government to take the initiative in an attempt to reopen the negotiations.

On its financial side the note is little more than a repitition of the Bergmann offer, which France previously rejected, and little hope is entertained in England that the present German proposals will meet a better fate.

The fact that the note sets forth as essential to the negotiations that "the status quo must be restored within the shortest time," and in essence proposes to make the question as between France and Germany a world question seems to rule out any acquiescence from the present French government, although Germany has abandoned her earlier standpoint that evacuation of the occupied territories must precede any negotiations.

The note leaves many difficulties ahead, one particularly—the stipulation that Germany's undertaking to pay what France will consider a totally inadequate amount, thirty billion gold marks, will depend upon the stabilization of German currency "permanently," loking at all previous experience, this would seem to be an almost impossible condition.

France has always objected to reference to any outside body, such as Secretary Hughes proposes, of the question of the fixation of Germany's total reparations, and it is not likely that she will view the proposals more leniently now.

HARVEY SEES HOPE IN GERMANY'S PROPOSAL

London, May 3.—(By The A. P.)—Commenting on the German reparations offer, American Ambassador Harvey at his last conference with the American newspaper correspondents before he sails for home tomorrow declared he saw brighter hopes for a general European settlement than at any time during his two years at the London embassy.

He believed the solution of all the problems would come if Secretary Hughes' recommendation for an international commission to fix Germany's indebtedness were followed out, and he was confident that Germany would accept, blindfolded and in advance, any reparations sum recommended by the United States.

BELGIUM CONSIDERS OFFER INSIGNIFICANT

Brussels, May 2 (By the A. P.).—Belgium official circles consider entirely insignificant Germany's offer of thirty billion gold marks, of which Belgium would receive only about two and a half billions. The government is withholding expression pending an examination of the plan.

TERMS OF PROPOSALS MADE BY GERMANY

Berlin, May 2.—(By the A. P.)—Germany's latest reparations offer proposes that the sum total of her obligations in cash and kind under the Versailles treaty be fixed at 30,000,000,000 gold marks. The German government in a note made public here today, simultaneously with its receipt by the entente and Washington government, proposes that 20,000,000,000 of the total be raised by July 1, 1927 by a bond issue at normal rates of interest and the international money market. Five billion would be raised before July 1, 1929 in the same manner and the remaining sum similarly before July 1, 1931. The note asserts that Germany in accordance with existing treaties will also make payments in kind which are to be credited to her account.

Germany advances a proposition that security as between France and Germany be attained by an agreement to submit any future conflicts to arbitration or other conciliatory processes.

The note asserts that Germany is making her offer without desisting from the programme of passive resistance, which will be continued until the areas occupied in excess of the stipulations of the Versailles treaty are evacuated, and until conditions on the Rhine are restored according to the terms laid down in the Rhineland agreement.

The offer of an anti-aggression pact on the Rhine is renewed and the government suggests that all conflicts arising out of the question of national securities be submitted to an international court for arbitration.

Fulfillment of Germany's obligation, the note continues, depends on the stabilization of her currency; therefore it is necessary, in connection with the regulation of the reparations problem, to bring about a methodic and permanent stabilization in order to remove the apprehensions of other countries with respect to ruinous German competition. Strengthening of her currency will also enable Germany to restore her internal finances, the note points out.

THOUSANDS WATCH FOR KU KLUX KLAN INITIATION

Middlebush, N. J., May 2.—Thousands of persons gathered at a field near here tonight to watch what had been advertised as a semi-initiation of the Ku Klux Klan, many of them expecting a repetition of last night's disturbances in bound Brook, N. J., when several hundred citizens broke up a meeting in the Pillar of Fire church when a speaker lauded the klan.

At midnight there had been no indication of a disturbance. Klansmen guards kept the spectators a safe distance from the center of the field, where many automobiles were drawn up in horseshoe formation, their searchlights casting a spectral glare on white-robed figures who moved quietly about.

On into the night the watchers waited for the initiation to start and a possible anti-klan demonstration, but the klansmen were apparently waiting for the light of the moon before beginning their ceremonies. It was understood that many of the men who led the attack on the Bound Brook church were among the watchers.

NEW YORK CHILDREN JOIN IN THE BOYCOTT OF SUGAR

New York, May 2.—Two thousand East Side children, assembled in front of their public school today, joined the housewives' boycott against high sugar and took a pledged not to use it until the price comes down.

Mrs. Louis Reed Weigmiller, deputy markets commissioner, who is leading the women in the campaign, petitioned the superintendent of school to have all the city's school children take a similar pledge, in general assembly next Friday. One million children are expected to take the pledge, which reads: "So long as sugar speculators continue to boost the price of sugar, we, the school children of New York city, pledge ourselves to use as little sugar as possible and whenever possible to use substitutes such as fruits and syrups."

President Harding has been invited to address a city hall mass meeting Friday, or to send a representative.

TO REPORT NEW STANDARD TIME BILL IN THE HOUSE

Hartford, Conn., May 2.—A modified bill for the enforcement of standard time in the state will be reported in house of representatives tomorrow by the agriculture committee. The committee was unanimously in favor of the bill at its executive session today.

The first bill on standard time, reported by the judiciary committee, passed the house but was defeated in the senate on a roll call by three votes. The bill to be reported tomorrow eliminates from the former bill the provision that state and municipalities and their departments must open and close at the same hour all through the year and provides for $100 fine instead of $100 fine or ten days in jail or both.

FRANCE GIVES OFFICIAL WARNING TO TURKEY

Lausanne, May 2.—(By the A. P.)—France has officially warned Turkey anew that she does not like the Turkish concentration of troops on the Syrian frontier and has added that if Turkish military pressure on the Syrian border is not removed it may be difficult for France to go on with the Lausanne peace negotiations.

Such is the news emanating from the French delegation tonight. It has produced a very considerable sensation and led to hurried conferences between the allied leaders.

The French charge delivered the warning to Constantinople, and General Pelle, the French high commissioner, repeated it to Ismet Pasha, who said he would refer the point to his home government. General Pelle had already warned Ismet Pasha of France's displeasure over the Turkish mobilization on the edge of French mandated territory, and that if it was intended as an intimidation, while the French were occupied with Germany, to force concessions out of the French delegates at Lausanne, it would not serve its purpose.

What General Pelle practically told Ismet was that France refused to be bluffed.

Turkish representatives said tonight that Turkey had a perfect right to mobilize troops in Cilicia, as well as in other districts of Turkey, and there was no reason why the French should feel provoked.

The Turkish statement said: "After all, we are still at war with the allies and Greece and have a perfect right to maintain troops where we think fit."

Turkey has about 30,000 troops in Cilicia, and General Weygand, the French commander, will find about 2,000 French troops, chiefly colonials, when he arrives in Syria as high commissioner.

The French representatives further explained that no time limit was attached to the notification to Turkey, and there was no reason why the Lausanne negotiations could not continue at least for the present. The Turks apparently feel the same way. In conference circles the general impression prevailed that the Franco-Turkish controversy would be adjusted and would not be the cause of a second collapse of the Near East conference.

The second phase of the conference, which Lausanne is now witnessing is mainly a financial and economic battle between Turkey and England on territorial questions like Mosul.

France's protest against the troops in Cilicia is approved by the British delegation, the spokesman of which said tonight: "France is quite right in protesting, because, with the armistice operating, no one could think of conducting peace negotiations, if one party persisted in moving troops about with the supposed intent of influencing negotiations. We are not worried about this incident and do not think it liable to endanger the Lausanne conference."

STRIKE OF QUARRYMEN UNION MEN AT QUINCY

Quincy, Mass., May 2—A strike of about 300 quarry workers and quarry blacksmiths, said to be unsanctioned by their union, threw 400 other employes out of work today. The men had made demands for wage increases, quarrymen asking an advance from 56 to 77 cents an hour, blacksmiths from 60 to 70 cents, and engineemen from 60 to 90 cents. The manufacturers had asked that they be allowed until next Monday to take action on the demand.

Threatened Life Of Rockefeller, Jr.

New York, May 2—Armed with a stiletto and two long weaver's needles, a silk worker from Greenwich Village who for two weeks had dogged the footsteps of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was clubbed into submission today when he blocked the multi-millionaire's exit from his West Fifty-Fourth Street home and threatened to take his life.

The man gave the name of George Murad, 39, and said he had come from Canada a month ago looking for a job. Besides the weapons, he carried an Assyrian bible, a note-book of directions to the city and country home of John D. Rockefeller, Sr. and Jr., and a $1 bill that a butler in the latter's home had given him this morning on his plea that he was "starving".

Rockefeller first noticed Murad two weeks ago, he told police, when the unkempt stranger began trailing him to and from his home to his business offices, occasionally stopping him to demand that he be given work. Rockefeller thought the fellow only a harmless "crank" until Sunday. As he started home afoot from the morning service at the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, the man appeared at his side and followed him, gesticulating and talking incoherently, into the vestibule of the Rockefeller mansion.

A butler and a house guard put him out, after a struggle. The next morning, at Rockefeller's request, a uniformed policeman was stationed at the entrance to his home. Murad was seen to appear at his usual calling hour and slink away when he saw the bluecoat.

Yesterday, May Day, the guard was reinforced by two police detectives in an automobile, but Murad did not show up. Today he called before the police or detectives arrived, and was met in the vestibule by the caretaker, was given a dollar bill with which to obtain food, and went away.

Waving his arms and shouting "you and the bolsheviks are responsible for all the trouble in the world; you sold out my country", Murad reappeared, running around the corner just as Rockefeller emerged from his home and started toward a taxicab. The multi-millionaire evaded him and signalled the police, who came on the run.

Murad resisted arrest. He tripped one of the police and threw the other. While the three rolled in the street, several of Rockefeller's neighbors ran to offer him aid, a dozen windows in nearby mansions filled with spectators and a crowd gathered from Fifth Avenue.

The police finally got their clubs free and beat Murad into submission. He was hustled away to a police precinct and thence to Bellevue hospital, protesting that he thought it up to Rockefeller to get him a job but that he did not intend to harm him.

MARINE PROHIBITION TO BE EFFECTIVE JUNE 10

Washington, May 2.—The American government, taking a positive position with regard to the transportation of liquor into territorial waters of the United States, decreed today that the rigorous interpretation of the prohibition law given by the supreme court shall become effective June 10.

Secretary Hughes was requested by the treasury to communicate notice of the decision to all foreign governments. The treasury which has jurisdiction over all prohibition enforcement, suggested that the state department advise foreign government that all ships entering the three-mile limit will be subject to the new application of the law with exemption and that no further pronouncement may be expected from this government regarding the effective date.

ARMY AVIATORS START ON TRANSCONTINENTAL FLIGHT

Hempstead, N. Y., May 2—Lieutenants John A. Macready and Oakley G. Kelly took off from Roosevelt field at 1:36 5 p. m. today in the army monoplane T 2 on their second attempt to make a non-stop transcontinental flight. They hoped to reach San Diego, from whic hthey first attempt was made in 32 hours and attend a dinner of the American Legion there tomorrow night.

Spectators of the take-off had a moment of horrified suspense when it appeared that the heavily loaded ship could not rise in time to clear the hangars at the end of the field. The T-2, with Lieutenant Kelly in pilot's seat, cleared the hangars by inches, however, and began making elevation.

One false start was made before the getaway, Lieutenant Kelly turning back for a longer run when he found he could not lift the plane soon enough to clear the hangars.

The pilots will alternate during the trip, with Lieutenant Macready at the wheel entering San Diego, if all goes well. The T-2 has no wireless and messages will be dropped, it was said. The first objective of the pilots was McCook field at Dayton, Ohio, where a message will be dropped. If engine trouble develops during the seven-hour trip to Dayton the T-2 will be brought down there and the flight abandoned, it was said. Otherwise, she will be headed straight across the continent for San Diego.

MEASURES FOR SUPPRESSION OF CRIMINALS AND RADICALS

Senate Passed Bill Providing for Increase of State Police Force From 50 to 80 Men—Senate Also Passed a Bill Which Imposes Severe Penalties for "Advocation, Encouragement or Justification of Injury to Persons and to Public and Private Property"—To Curb Overland Bootlegging, a Law is Being Advocated Which Provides a Penalty for the Carrying of Pistols in Automobiles.

Hartford, May 2—State's attorneys held a conference with Senator A. F. Ells and Representative John Buckley, legislative leaders and Speaker L. J. Nickerson, this afternoon in advocacy of an amendment to the law under which the carriage of concealed weapons is punishable to provide a penalty for the carrying of pistols in automobiles. The claim was advanced that a great many bootleggers operating in Connecticut carry guns in the machines and are ready to use them in a pinch but when caught they escape punishment for being in possession of the weapons because they are not carried on the person. Those who spoke for the amendment were State's Attorneys Alcorn, of Hartford, Alling, of New Haven and T. F. Noone, of Tolland counties.

The senate today passed the bill providing for a state police force of 80 men instead of the present 50 and changing the number of officers in proportion. A force of 110 men had been asked but was cut by the appropriations committee.

The senate concurred the passing the codification of the fish and games laws. This bill prevents aliens from owning a gun or from hunting and also imposes an anglers tax, $1 for residents and $3, for non-residents.

The senate concurred in passing the bill which imposes severe penalties for "advocation, encouragement or justification of injury to persons and to public and private property." This bill was drawn at the request of New Haven authorities after the case of Ernest Schleifer had been dismissed in the city court. Schleifer had been charged with inciting striking shopmen to acts of violence and Judge Webb ruled that there was no law covering the case. He suggested appropriate legislation and the bill passed today was drawn. There is another bill directed chiefly at "radicalism" still in the committee to which it had been recommitted after the Yale law faculty had opposed it.

FIRST BIG CONTEST AT THE MORSE TRIAL

Washington, May 2.—The first big controversy which has developed between government and defense counsel at the Morse trial was ended abruptly today with an announcement that Charles W. Morse and his son, Harry F. Morse, had no objection to the admission of the testimony which their attorneys were seeking to exclude.

The testimony had to do with conference late in 1917 between B. G. Rigley, a New York lawyer, and attaches connected with the various Morse concerns, and the Morses, father and sons, regarding the advisability of constructing the Virginian Shipbuilding Corporation plant at Alexandria, Va., counsel for the defense insisted that since Mr. Higley acted as counsel for the Morses, the communications passed at the conferences were privileged and could not be disclosed by Higley on the witness stand.

After the objection had been withdrawn, Mr. Higley detailed the conversations, disclosing that there was a difference of opinion as to the advisability of constructing a plant at Alexandria. The witness said he and Harry F. Morse opposed the proposition, adding that he told Charles W. Morse that it would require all of the energy, ability and financial strength of the existing organizations to handle the affairs of two plants in Connecticut.

"Mr. Charles W. Morse told me that I need not be concerned; that he could finance the new plant," Higley said. "He seemed sanguine and that was an end of the matter."

Previously the witness had testified that while various other persons officered most of the Morse companies, Charles W. Morse was the active directing head of all of the organizations. Mr. Higley also identified the minutes of the organization meeting at Alexandria of the American Shipbuilding Corporation, which later became the Virginia concern. These minutes were read to the jury and showed that directors of the corporation included Senator Elkins of West Virginia, William Guggenheim, of New York, and H. Lancaster Williams, of Boston, who, with the other nine directors held 100 shares of stock each. The United States Steamship Company was listed as the holder of 98,000 shares.

I., and the former said they were on the way from Providence to deliver some packages to a drug company in Albany, N. Y. The packages, twelve in number, contained what looked like a good brand of whiskey.

Both persons were placed in the lockup. They sent word to Providence and bonds were sent to a local bank for use after a preliminary hearing.

WOMAN EXECUTED IN FORT SASKATCHEWAN JAIL

Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., May 2.—Emilio Piccarillo—"the Emperor Pic" to the rum running fraternity of Crows Nest Pass—and 22 year old Mrs. Florence Lassandra, his confederate in crime, were hanged at sunrise in the Fort Saskatchewan jailyard today for the murder at Coleman last September of Steve Lawson of the Alberta provincial police.

The girl, whose presence with Piccarillo on many a wild rum running ride saved him from the bullets of gallant troopers who would not fire on a woman, died protesting that the emperor had double-crossed her.

TROUBLES DEVELOPING FOR THE RUM FLEET

New York, May 2—(By the A. P.)—The floating rum market outside Jersey's three-mile limit today was sore beset.

These developments came thick and fast:

First, the government announced that coast guard cutters would be massed to keep close tabs on the fleet, day and night, nipping the customers that put out from shore.

Second, the order went into effect, the Manhattan passing out at twilight to relieve a sister cutter that had been doing patrol duty all day.

Third, the government began seizing tugs and launches putting out from New York to provision and fuel the floating liquor warehouses, instituting a test case to determine whether the provenders were guilty of engaging in foreign commerce while possessing only coastwise licenses.

Fourth, patrol of highways leading from the Jersey coast and search of all automobiles suspected of bearing liquor were reported by rum-runners' scouts to be seriously hampering deliveries.

Fifth, passengers returning on the Munargo reported that Nassau bootleggers, once doing a thriving business on liquor shipped to the United States, were being put out of the running by the vigilance of American dry agents and rum pirates on the high seas.

The first blow was struck when the Cutter Seneca seized the Tug Alex Clark and the launch "Woe" which were said to have been carrying supplies and provisions to the rum fleet. Captain John Dryden of the tug and his crew of three were charged with engaging in foreign commerce without a license and were held on $500 bail each.

Conrad Mathisen, said to be a part owner of the tug, was arraigned on the same charge and held in $1,000 bail.

Captain Joseph Manney of the motorboat and his crew also were held. Manney under $1,000 bail.

Federal officials said they would take civil action against the owners of the craft and recommend that these boats and others that may be captured in similar traffic be forfeited and condemned.

DISCUSS BILL FOR $125,000 DORMITORY AT STORRS

Hartford, May 2.—The agriculture committee of the general assembly today discussed the advisability of reporting out a bill for $125,000 dormitory for me nat the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs. It was decided to take the matter up with the appropriations committee and if this committee failed to act, to report out the bill from the agriculture committee.

No provision for the new dormitory is made in the bill making appropriations for new construction at the college which has been reported out by the appropriations committee and which was passed by the senate today.

AGAINST THREE-HEADED HIGHWAY COMMISSION PLAN

Hartford, May 2.—The three-headed highway commission pan will be unfavorably reported in the senate tomorrow by the committee on roads, bridges and rivers, it was learned last night. If it is rejected, as recommended by the committee, the highway department will remain as now constituted, with the commissioner solely responsible for the determination of the highway programs and expenditure of the annual budget of nearly $7,000,000 a year.

The bill to be rejected was drawn by Highway Commissioner Charles J. Bennett after he had notified Governor Templeton of his decision not to accept a reappointment at the expiration of his present term on July 1.

TO MAKE FAVORABLE REPORT ON WORLD COURT

Hartford, Conn., May 2—A favorable report will be made in the house tomorrow morning on the so-called "Ayres Resolution", placing the Connecticut general assembly on record as endorsing the stand of President Harding on the world court.

Royal K. Southwick, of Cornwall, chairman of the committee, said last night that the favorable report was reached after a protracted discussion in an executive session of the commission this afternoon and that he would make it clear in reporting the resolution that the favorable report was not a unanimous one, that a record vote had been taken in the committee and would say how many members voted on the resolution.

The May term of the Windham county superior court was resumed Wednesday and the case of Napoleon L. Brindamour vs The Polish Bakery, Inc., was taken up. The case constitutes a suit for foreclosure on a lien for $1,450. The plaintiff alleges that that amount was unpaid on a contract for the building of a brick structure for the defendants in the summer of 1921. It is charged that that contract was made on July 1, 1921, for the building of a brick structure for $3,400 on land on Jackson street.

The work of erection was started on July 6, 1921, and was completed in November of the same year. Following a disagreement, the defendants failed to pay the amount as agreed at the time the work was started. The plaintiff placed a lien on the property on December 1 and it was recorded at the office of the town clerk. Up to date the sum of $2,250 has been paid on the contract, leaving the balance in question and the plaintiff further alleges that there was a bill for special work to the amount of $350. The work was done on the contract. Damages of $2,000 are sought. M. E. Lincoln testified for the plaintiff.

The witnesses for the defense were, Gus Sagal, Charles Finbacker, John Lathusek, William Grabofski, Frank Safin and Joseph Melio and their testimony agrees in that the work on the building and as oven was defective and was not up to specifications. It was stated that the oven fell apart on two different occasions while it was under present construction. On the first occasion, the iron supports broke and the second time the brick construction of the oven fell through.

Judge Webb still retains his decision in the joint case of Edna E. Sharpe and Susanna W. Sharpe against Isaac G. Larkin, administrator, on which the evidence was heard Tuesday.

Naturalization sessions of the Windham county superior court will be held Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The first session will be in this city and on Wednesday it will be held in Putnam. Judge Webb will be on the bench. There are 70 applicants for admission to citizenship in Windham county who will be given an opportunity to qualify.

The pupils and teachers of Grade six at the Natchaug school delightfully carried out May Day programs and four large baskets which they had been making for several days were stocked with oranges, bananas, apples, cracked nuts, buttered popcorn, home made cake, preserves, peanuts, home made candy and flowers. The dainties were so divided that 38 people could share equally and the class then organized into four squads. One delivered a basket to the almshouse, another to the children's ward at St. Joseph's hospital and the other two to the men's and women's wards at the hospital.

Gilbert Lewis, 17, and Louis Counihan, 16, and two other boys, under 16 years of age, were brought before the police court Wednesday morning and were charged with damaging private property on Prospect street Tuesday night. The two older boys pleaded guilty and pleas of not guilty were entered for the younger lads. The cases were referred to Probation Officer S. Arnold Peckham for further investigation and he will report to the juvenile court on May 12.

According to the court records the Lewis and Counihan boys had been before police court on a previous occasion for misdemeanors. Judge Foss gave the older boys a severe reprimand and sentenced them to one year in the Connecticut state reformatory.

WESTERLY

Tuesday evening the regular weekly drill of the 349th Company, C. A. G., was held in the state armory on Dixon street. The work of the evening was in coast artillery work, with First Lieutenant John F. Datson in charge. Next Tuesday evening the drill work of the company will be along the lines of infantry in preparation for the governor's review which will take place in Providence May 21st. The recruiting campaign, which the company has recently held has met with flattering success. Due to the recent assignment of such an experienced officer as Lieut. Datson, the morale and enthusiasm of the company has been heightened to such a degree that Westerly has a military company second to none.

Confusion of orders and red tape in correspondence of federal and state military authorities and local officials has prevented the 40 caliber Armstrong 4.7 inch pedestal mounted recoil rifle from being taken from the lawn of the armory into the northeast corner of the drill shed where it is ultimately to be mounted. All this has practically been cleared up and 16 ft. 5 inch barrel will be mounted without the shield. Copies of Vol 1, No 1, "The Tank," the official publication of the R. I. C. A. C., published in Providence and edited by Captain Webster of that city have been received and are distributed gratis to company members and interested people.

Miss Evelyn McWeeny, of 51 Elm street, whose marriage to Richard J. Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Butler, 15 Dixon street, occurs June 21st, was the recipient of a silk handkerchief and stocking shower Tuesday evening at her home, tendered by her bridge club. The shower took the seasonable form of a May basket party and the appointments sumptuous and complete. Members of the Bridge club, beside the hostess are the Misses Helen McWeeny, Irene Betferman, Helen Tuit, Mary Quinlan, Mabel Cook, Mrs. John Farrell, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Michael Scanlon, Mrs. Harold Moore, Mrs. Frank G. Ahearn, Mrs. C. Leo Higgins.

Arthur N. Nash is the recipient of a three bill in carved coconut from Benny Hughes, St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. Hughes recently sent Wilcox park from an alligator farm one of its largest and wildest representatives of the crocodile family which unlike the billiken, minus a foot, arrived alive and kicking. Evidently the "General" is desirous of acquainting his home town with the products of the south. As animal and vegetable families are represented and Henry is interested in real estate now it would seem as if the mineral world might be represented by the receipt of at least a gold brick.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Moore with Eleanor, Thomas and Cyril Moore, returned to their Westerly home off Beach street, Tuesday evening, after passing the winter at Mr. Moore's recently acquired home in St. Petersburg, Fla.

At the session of the superior court begun in the county courthouse at West Kingston Tuesday the first case taken up was that of Charles E. Burdick et al. vs. Charles J. Greene et al., appellee. It was an appeal from the probate court of Charleston. Inasmuch as settlement had been effected, it was agreed that the will should be admitted to probate.

The next case was the state against Caswell, charged with breaking and entering. As the defendant was already serving nine months' time, he was given a deferred sentence and recommitted.

In the case of Herden DeV. Pratt vs. Elmor D. Baker, judgment was entered for the plaintiff and the sum of $400 and costs of $10 with stipulation in regard to exhibition filed. Execution, it was agreed, should be stayed until June 1.

The next two cases came together—Ethel E. Landry vs. Frank E. Richmond and Frances E. Landry vs. Frank E. Richmond. Some one has said that the fuzzy little buds look as they they were still wearing their furs as a protection against the cold, and that hepatica, is from the Greek, for liver, probably so named on account of the shape of the leaf.

The old herb collections, hanging from the attic beams always included liverwort, as being good for the liver. Many used to believe that nature, in some fashion used to indicate the uses to which her crations might be applied.

They will perform on the big stage which has been erected for this special purpose and they will put on a different show each evening.

This company is considered one of the best of its kind and is sure to make a hit. Tom Carroll, who is one of the best comedians in show business is assisted by such artists as:

Miss Grace Gould, soubrette with the company Miss Gould is a very clever little miss who sings well and displays some very beautiful gowns.

Miss Anna Richards who possesses a beautiful soprano voice which she uses to good advantage is putting over many of the popular numbers used in the show. During her engagement at Norwich Miss Richards will introduce several new numbers that are bound to be a great success.

Billy Chapman and Wm. Devine are two boys whose work is a great asset to the company, and last but not least the Pony Chorus, composed of pretty girls, whom it is a pleasure to watch work.

Like a moth irresistibly drawn to the flaming candle, so were men drawn to Cora Madison; just a wee, side glance from those coy eyes and the damage was done. Yet you couldn't blame Cora; it was as natural for her to flirt as it was to eat, but, like all her kind, there came a time when she had to pay the penalty for her indiscretions.

Booth Tarkinton's story, "The Flirt," was one of the most widely-read books in the country, and its entertainment value is great, enhanced by its presentation in screen form. It was made into a magnificent film by the Universal Pictures Corporation, and will be seen at the Strand theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

Universal casting directors spent many weary weeks in conning lists of players in order that each character might be fittingly portrayed. The role of Cora Madison is portrayed by that popular star Eileen Percy, with Helen Jerome Eddy as the plainer sister, who is the direct antithesis of "the flirt." George Nichols, whose excellent work in pictures has won him a widespread reputation, is seen as the father. Others in the all-star cast are Neil Craig, Harold Goodwin, Buddy Messinger, Tom Kennedy, Lydia Knott, Bert Roach, Edward Hearne, Dorothea Wolbert, Lloyd Whitlock and William Welsh.

Dog Sense is the comedy and a News weekly completes the bill.

Broadway Theatre

Another banner program of B. F. Keith vaudeville will be presented at the Broadway theatre for three days starting today.

Opening the bill will be Gold and Goldie, in a fast comedy, singing and dancing combination; following them Hardy and Morgan will be sure to please with their comedy patter; Ruby Children and Field, a great combination fill third spot to advantage with a comedy novelty; Bobby Carleone offers an oddity in laughter and song; Dashington's Dog and Cats will be a great treat for the children and will close the bill.

A vivid touch of the wilds is to be seen in the Paramount picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," starring Mary Miles Minter, which will be the feature at the Broadway theatre for three days, opening today. The scene is the log cabin home in the Cumberland mountains owned by "Devil" Judd Tolliver (Ernest Torrence), one of the principal characters in the story. A creek runs past the cabine, which stands in a beautiful glen, a milk house of logs, a meat house, and a curb well. The cabin is in a good state of repair. It has a large stone chimney and a well built porch. A fence runs around the yard, and there is a vegetable garden on one side. Blue smoke lazily rising from the chimney completes a picture worthy to be regarded in all. Antonio Moreno, leading man, and Ernest Torrence are featured and head a splendid supporting cast.

The new owner plans to move to Norwich about June first.

AMERICANS TAKE HONORS IN FIRST DAY'S PLAY FOR THE WALKER CUP

Sandwich, England, May 3 (By the A. P.)—American amateur golf players tonight at the end of the first day of play in the tournament for the St. Georges gold challenge cup stood first and second over the pick of Great Britain's sterling performers and were tied for third place with two Englishmen.

Dr. O. F. Willing, the Oregon state champion, led the field over the 18 holes with a score of 74 and Robert A. Gardner, captain of the American team, turned in a card of 75. Right behind them came Francis Ouimet, former American champion, with a card of 76 strokes, tied with Roger Wethered and Michael Scott.

The St. Georges cup is among England's finest golf trophies and one which in the thirty-five years of its existence never has passed into alien hands. Tonight some of the more pessimistic of the followers of the game in England who are witnessing the tournament expect to see the possibility of the cup going overseas.

This evening everybody in this golfing country, where mile upon mile of the English channel is bordered by fairways and greens, wants to talk about the short, stocky Oregon physician who turned in the best day's score; but nobody knows quite what to say about him, because none but his partner and their caddies witnessed his fine performance.

From start to finish he made the 18-hole journey unhonored by a gallery. Tomorrow when he sets forth on the last eighteen holes of the jaunt around this famous course, where last year Walter Hagen won the British open championship, Dr. Willing is sure to be the cynosure of scores of eyes that today chose to look on the play of the amateur champions of England and the United States, E. W. E. Holderness and Jess Sweetser, the cards of both of whom revealed the unsatisfactory total of 81 strokes.

Only one other United States golfer, aside from Willing, Gardner and Ouimet broke below 80. He was the tall Texan, George V. Rotan, who got a 79, notwithstanding the rather tough going and several tantalizing sand pits with which he came in contact. All the other Americans, and all but nine of the 110 Englishmen in the play, were 80 and over.

Dr. Willing was surprised when told by the correspondent at the tenth tee, that thus far he was in the lead. He said he had been "just plugging along" and seemed not to believe it. All the way round his drives were straight; his approaches covered the pin and his putts consistently rolled straight into the tin cups.

Gardner was erratic on the green, but he was ever steady and straight through the fairways, and his drives which never wavered from the course, always were long ones. On several greens Gardner needed three putts to get down; but he somewhat retrieved these lapses by sinking a forty-foot chip shot from a rough fringe of green on the second hole for a birdie two. One the sixth he also sank a twenty-footer.

Ouimet's shots at the start were below his sterling standard. He took a forty going out; but coming in it was a different story. Homeward bound his card spoke only the language of pars and birdies.

The remainder of the Americans played fair golf.

Jesse Sweetser, the American titleholder, who had never seen the course before today, could not assert his usual mastery over his putter, missing a half dozen easy tries at the cup. The greens seemed to be faster than he estimated them, and he continually slipped over the hole on his putts. In his approaching he also was guilty of a few flaws in his usual skillful play.

The only time Sweetser gave the crowd a kind of a thrill was on the thirteenth green, where he sank a 25-foot putt for a three, two under scratch. On the fifteenth he hooked his drive and seeded a six for that hole, and on the home hole he missed a two-foot putt for a five and was forced to take another irritating six to his score. The champion said he did not like the Sandwich links nor the Deal course. "But," he said, "I have got to like to learn that course at 'Deal.'" It is over the Deal links that the British amateur championships will be contested.

Michael Scott, who with his 76 is tied tonight for third place with Ouimet and Wethered, is a former holder of the St Georges cup and last year won the French amateur championship. Today he played unfaltering golf on every hole. Cyril Tolley, who finished with a 79, was more than once in bad difficulty as he went around the eighteen holes.

Detroit, Mich., May 2.—Manager Cobb used 17 players to win today's game from Cleveland, 4 to 3. Up to the eighth inning Morton allowed the Tigers only three hits. Veach batted for Haney and singled, Woodall scoring. With the bases filled, Morton walked Cobb, forcing in the run that tied the count. Fothergill's single scored Blue, but Veach was out at the plate trying to tally. Score:

JOHNSON PITCHES HIS 100TH SHUTOUT GAME

Washington, May 2.—Walter Johnson held the Yankees to three scattered hits today and scored his first shutout of the season, Washington winning 3 to 0. The veteran twirler displayed his old-time form, working smoothly in pinches with the aid of two double plays.

CUBS WIN FROM REDS ON BOHNE'S WILD HEAVE

Cincinnati, May 2.—A wild throw to second base by Bohne, with a sure double play in sight, which would have retired the side scoreless, gave Chicago a ninth inning 2 to 1 victory over Cincinnati today, evening up the series of four games. Until the ninth inning had the visitors blanked. With runners on first and second and one out, Grimes hit a bounder to Bohne, who threw far over Gaveney's head, and both runners scored. But for this misplay, the Reds would have won on one hit. Cub pitchers gave seven bases on balls and the Reds stole six bases. The score:

VANCE PITCHES WONDERFUL BALL BUT DODGERS LOSE

New York, May 2—Despite fifteen strikeouts by pitcher "Dazzy" Vance, fourteen of them in nine innings, Brooklyn lost its seventh game of the spring to New York, the world's champions winning in the eleventh inning by a score of 7 to 6. Vance's strikeout record was the best made in the majors in recent years. Ten of his strikeouts came in the first five innings. Mamaux relieved Vance in the eleventh, and Kelly's sacrifice fly sent in Frisch with the winning run. The score:

BOSTON OUTHITS ATHLETICS BUT FAIL TO PROFIT

Boston, May 2—Boston outhit Philadelphia today but triples by Perkins and Galloway, together with errors by Fewster and Burns in the first inning gave the visitors four runs, and they eventually won, 4 to 3. It was Rommel's first victory of the year. After the first Murray held the visitors scoreless and gave them three hits. The score:

VAN GILDER HOLDS CHISOX TO 4 HITS BUT LOSES

Chicago, May 2—Elam Van Gilder allowed only four scattered hits, but his wildness, coupled with daring base-running on the part of Johnny Mostil, and some ragged support, enabled Chicago to defeat St. Louis, 4 to 2, today. Charley Robertson pitched in fine form, the visitors being able to bunch hits in only two innings.

The crowd saw William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, national champion, defeat his two closest rivals, William M. Johnston of San Francisco, who ranks No. 2, and Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., No. 3, in identical scores in one-set matches, 6-4. Johnston then defeated Richards by the same score in one set.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING BODY ENTERS FIGHT AGAINST A. A. U.'S RULING

New York, May 2 (By the A. P.)—Adding further fuel to what observers regarded as an impending international athletic war, involving governing bodies in both the United States and Europe, the Women's Swimming Association of New York tonight announced it had carried to the board of governors of the Amateur Athletic Union its fight to obtain sanction for a trip to the British Isles this spring by Helen Wainwright, Gertrude Ederle and Aileen Riggin, three of the foremost American girl swimmers.

This action, coming on the heels of the controversy over the appearance of Charles Paddock, California sprint record-holder, in a Paris collegiate meet scheduled this week, stirred to a higher pitch the protests aroused by the recent dictum of the A. A. U., refusing to sanction foreign competition by American athletic stars this year, with the exception of the Harvard-Yale track team's meet with Oxford-Cambridge in England.

That Paddock would have the backing of sponsors of the Paris meet in carrying out his threat to participate in defiance of the A. A. U., was indicated tonight in dispatches from Paris stating that collegiate delegates of ten nations, including the United States, had decided to admit no interference from outside athletic governing organizations in conducting their meet and allow Paddock to competition. This followed announcement earlier in the day by F. W. Rubien, secretary of the A. A. U., that he had been advised the French Athletic Federation would not permit Paddock to enter the meet.

The Women's Swimming Association, in a formal statement, virtually charged the A. A. U. with bad faith, declaring that "the women were not granted a fair hearing before the national registration committee, which did not receive all the facts in the case, and that the A. A. U. unjustly delayed a vote for three months on the question of granting a permit for foreign competition by the swimming stars. Furthermore, it was said, "the U. S. A. contends the A. A. U. has no authority to refuse permits when every one of its rules has been complied with."

The appeal to the board of governors was taken after the national registration committee refused to grant a permit to the girl swimmers to go abroad. A mail vote among more than 100 governors in various parts of the country is now in progress, it was stated the results of which are expected to be known by next Monday.

Rotarians and Nuggets Practice.

The Nuggets and Rotary club baseball teams practiced at the Academy campus on Wednesday evening and in a practice game that followed the regular infield work the Nuggets trimmed the Rotarians 4 to 1. Several pitchers were tried out by both teams and the hitting was heavy and the fielding snappy.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE MEETING TONIGHT AT C. OF C. ROOMS

The organization meeting of the Norwich Twilight league will be held tonight at 8 o'clock sharp at the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Shetucket street. The thirteen teams that have made application for the league are requested to be present as much business of importance will take place. It is expected that there will be a very large attendance.

BERGEN'S STARS OF WORCESTER HERE SUNDAY

The first game of the baseball season for the Norwich baseball club will be next Sunday afternoon when the local team clashes with Bill Bergen's Worcester All-Stars. Bill will have Canavan do the hurling for the Worcester club, and this alone insures a good game. Bergen writes that he will have a team in the field outside of Canavan that will be just as good as any that ever played on the local diamond.

Manager Bill O'Leary has collected a snappy bunch of ball players and his lineup which is as yet incomplete, looks good on paper. Edie Boyce, former Worcester Eastern league pitcher, will do the hurling, while Phillips, the Boston College backstop, will be on the receiving end. These two compose a battery that is fully the equal of the Canavan-Bergen combination. The first base position is still undecided as Coullard, who was slated for this position, has gone to play in a Maryland league, together with Jack Sank. Danny Silva, who was recently put on the Pittsfield Hillies' retired list at his own request, will play second. Faulkner will be at short. In the outfield there will be Drohan in left, Lester Lee, formerly with Fitchburg, in center, and Jack Clabby, local boy, in right. The third base position is still unfilled.

Manager O'Leary is planning to give Norwich fast independent ball and the first four games that he has scheduled will prove that. Next week Sunday Gardner Town team will be the attraction, on the following Sunday Ware will come here and on the 27th the Fitchburg team opposes the local team. All of these teams were up among the leaders in baseball in New England last season and each retains practically the same team as in 1922. Other games of equal merit are booked for the next two months.

From the interest shown in baseball so far this season it is probable that the crowds at the games this year will be the best in several seasons. There is no game like baseball and when a city has the calibre of baseball that it was given last year it should feel proud and support the team. The fans turned out well last season but it costs money to put on the team that is representing Norwich.

DR. WILLING'S RISE IN GOLF IS REMARKABLE

New York, May 2 (By the A. P.).—Dr. O. F. Willing, Oregon state golf champion for the past two years, who led an international field today at the end of the first day's competition at Sandwich, England, for the Royal St. George's challenge cup, has had a remarkable rise in the royal and ancient game.

Though he learned the fundamentals of the game in his caddy days, Dr. Willing did not play a full round of golf until about five years ago, when he joined the Portland (Ore.) Golf club. He quickly demonstrated unusual playing ability and attracted attention not only for his long driving but for his accurate approach work and putting.

Dr. Willing won the first Portland city championship in 1920, and repeated in 1922. Besides winning the state title two years in a row, he won low medal honors at the annual Pacific northwest championship at Victoria, B. C., last year with a card of 147, seven strokes ahead of the runner-up.

Making his first national championship appearance in 1921, at St. Louis, Dr. Willing tied in the qualifying round for ninth place with Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion, and George Von Elm of Salt Lake City. He eliminated Reggie Lewis of Greenwich, Conn., in the first round, but fell before the youthful prowess of Bobby Jones of Atlanta in the second round. He did not compete in the championship at Brookline last fall.

Dr. Willing's selection as a member of this year's Walker cup team came as a surprise but his performances on British links so far have justified the confidence placed in him. He is the only representative of the Pacific northwest on the team.

SCOTT GIVEN GOLD MEDAL BY DENBY

Washington, May 2.—Walter Johnson, Washington's veteran, in shutting out the New York Yankees today, 3 to 0, pitched his 100th scoreless game as a major leaguer—and he did it on the day Everett Scott, Yankee shortstop, was playing his 1,000th consecutive major league game.

Scott was the center of attention; Johnson the hero of the game. All of the 8,000 fans who flocked to American League park to join Ban Johnson, president of the American league, and Secretary Denby in honoring Scott knew he had already participated in 999 straight games. Few of them realized, however, that their pitching idol had scored 99 shutouts since joining the Washington team in 1907.

Ceremonies had been planned in honor of Scott. Before the game the two teams lined up at the home plate while Scott, escorted by President Johnson and accompanied by the Marine band, marched between the lane of players to Secretary Denby, who pinned a gold medal on the New York player in honor of his record. Later a delegation of admirers from Scott's home town, Bluffton, Ind., presented him with a horseshoe floral wreath.

HAZINGS.

Announcement has been made by Northwestern university in Illinois to the effect that the faculty had decided for all time class wars and rushes on the campus, discarded the freshman caps and suspended all freshmen and sophomore entertainments for the rest of this semester.

This follows the unearthing of the body of a student who has been missing 19 months, who disappeared following a class rush and whose disappearance has been a mystery, but was believed at the time and is still believed to have been the outcome of the hazing activities then indulged in.

The action by the faculty gives support to the idea that the young man was killed by fellow students and that his body was disposed of by burying it on the lake front and apparently in the hope that it would never be recovered.

Whatever the outcome of the inquiry that is now underway, there can be no question but what the faculty has acted promptly even though it seems to be tardily. Suspicion at the time that the student was missing because of hazing activities should have been sufficient to have promptly put an end to it at that time instead of waiting until the body had been discovered.

There is nothing to substantiate the idea that he was deliberately murdered, but conditions under which hazings are conducted are such as to make accidental deaths entirely possible, as has been evidenced at that particular institution by the finding of a student bound head-down to a piling in the lake where he "had been forgotten."

That conditions at the university as regards hazing have not improved is indicated by the fact that a motor accident in the past week, subsequent upon a class fight, resulted in the death of another student.

There never was any excuse for the barbarisms displayed in hazings at such institutions. The practice has been stopped at others and it will be a happy day when they are abolished from them all.

SHOULD HAVE GONE BEFORE.

Within a short time there are those who have been able to get away from soviet Russia after having been there for the purpose of enjoying the great benefit of such a government. They are not only elated to think that they have gotten away from such an experience but they are telling about it, denouncing it and declaring that though they had given nothing but had previously to going to Russia they have been brought to a better appreciation of the advantages of the United States.

Because one man is befuddled by the purchase of a gold brick it does not necessarily prevent others from being caught in the same kind of a plot. This week a party of 56 Russian and Finns, all miners, have been gathered together by representatives of the soviet government and set out for Russia. They have been lured by the policies and freedom of that great country. They even went wearing red shirts and carrying the red flag. They go with great anticipations, quite the same as others have. Their awakening is yet to come. They insist upon a personal experience, but apparently their chief joy will be gained during the days preceding their disillusionment.

But stated as this party was on its departure it cannot have been any greater than that of the people of this country. If they are so wrapped up in the policies of the soviet government they have could exactly the right thing. The place for them is in Russia and not in the United States. This country can profit more from the fact that it is minus just that number of such individuals and nothing would suit it better than to have others of similar mind follow a similar course.

There is no place in the United States for the followers of the red flag whether that means the support of anarchy or bolshevism. The rousing send, if that they were given by their friends might easily, from another standpoint, have been entered into by the entire country. Not only must there be satisfaction that they have gone but the hope is that the prohibition will continue.

FRANCE AND THE NEAR EAST.

Is France experiencing the effects of a boomerang? It was only a short time ago that it was in close communion with the Turkish nationalists. Now it is threatening to cause various degrees of trouble in the near east because the Kemalists have disbanded. Has France been playing with fire and got burned?

At the stage of the troubles in the near east which there was need of unity on the part of the allied France broke away and soon it was evident that France was giving encouragement to the Angora government, thereby strengthening the position of the Turks and seemingly forcing against the allies had particularly as Constantinople was looking out for itself. It had obtained through a treaty special and valuable rights in Asia Minor. It created a new situation in the near east, but it seemed to work and augur well for France, regardless of what the effect was upon others.

Getting the good graces of Kemal worked to the advantage of the nationalists. It preceded the Turkish victory over the Greeks and the first Lausanne conference. Now France considers that Kemal has double-crossed it. Having given its assistance to the Turks, France is now a bit upset because of the recognition of the Chester concessions by Kemal and is threatening all kinds of dire results.

In spite of all that has been known concerning the Turks, France has put implicit faith in Kemal, and relied upon him instead of sticking with the allies through thick and thin in the adjustment of the near east problem. It therefore feels all the more severely the rude awakening. Just why it should have believed the Turks in preference to standing by the allies is of course open to inference, but those who expect to get something for nothing from those who are famous for their duplicity arouse little sympathy.

If personal advantage had been put aside and the near east problem settled on its merits long ago there would have been no such situation as ill feeling as prevails there today.

THE GERMAN OFFER.

The offer which has been anticipated from Germany for some time for the settlement of the reparation question has been made. Germany has refrained from direct negotiations with France but it has repeated the offer that it previously made of 30,000,000,000 gold marks and seems to rely upon the influence of others in bringing France to an acceptance.

Inasmuch as France has previously declined to accept such an offer, and has proceeded to occupy the Ruhr after knowing of the previous offering, it doesn't indicate that it will prove any more acceptable now. France hasn't as yet regarded the occupation of the Ruhr as an unsuccessful move. That being the case it seems plausible that it is not in any mood to give serious consideration to a sum which was not regarded as adequate before and not considered to be what Germany can and ought to pay.

Germany has withdrawn its requirement that there should be an immediate evacuation of the Ruhr in case of acceptance, but it indicates an unwillingness to abandon the passive resistance.

Whether the fact that steps in behalf of negotiations will have any effect remains to be seen. Germany is apparently convinced that it has not the support of the other allies to the extent of causing them to become hostile to France. Its previous tactics of avoiding reparations in every way possible is indicated, and there is nothing in the offer to arouse the hope of acceptance.

DAWES' NEW ORGANIZATION.

In the launching of the new organization known as the Minute Men of the Constitution increased attention will be directed to it because of the national prominence of its instigator, General Charles G. Dawes, who did to the administration in the putting into effect of the budget system was highly conspicuous. He is known as a fighting opponent of graft, privilege and petty politics, a worker for the national welfare and a firm believer in the cutting of government waste.

This new organization is not to be partisan and seeks to obtain no favors or to get no special privileges. It advocates respect for the law and the rights of citizens to organize in behalf of constitutional rights. It stands for loyalty to country above any group, advocates the right of all men to earn a living by honest toil and sets forth the rights and duty of promoting the welfare of the country regardless of race or creed. LURE OF THE WILD

The steady young husband looked puzzled. "Well, we hope to have our own home in a few years. I figure that if we are very careful—"

The pretty spinster aunt smiled into the depths of her square-cut diamond. "Jane thinks it queer because I am willing to move out into a brand new suburb," she explained. "Perhaps it is, but the thought of those peaceful times with nothing to disturb us—I mean me," she amended with a delightful blush, "except the crickets and birds—you understand. I plan to have a friendship garden and that there will be a succession of blooms."

The young matron gasped: "I thought you so enjoyed your life of freedom—studio teas, art discussion, running down to the theatre to see all-night rehearsals. Why, auntie, I have so often thought that your life seemed perfect and that is why we were so amazed when you accepted Jim after his long years of courting, and you so wild about Art!"

The frivolous spinster aunt giggled. "And believed all that art stuff?" she queried. "Why, Jane, I have been years getting that man to the point. You see," her violet eyes grew dreamy beneath the misty golden hair, "I saw so much of temperamental men. Men musicians with long fingers but frightfully short tempers, men with eyes only for sun effects and who would spend days trying for some elusive color that they believed would transfer the tint of rushing winds to the waiting canvas. I would never marry one of the artists. A business man with some idea of time is a good man to have for the master of the household."

"But," interrupted the young matron, her eyes widening in surprise, "you always talked of the glories of the modern bachelor maid, with her opportunities for soul development."

"Naturally," returned the frivolous spinster aunt. "Could I permit Jim to know that I was waiting for him to make up his mind to throw the handkerchief to me? I don't mind admitting it now, but I've been mad about Jim for years, and he fancied I was wrapped up in my career." The white fingers snapped delicately and the great square-cut diamond gleamed as though reflecting the glow in the owner's eyes. "Career! What does a career mean to a regular woman? What I want is a real home and a regular man. That is why I am buying a cottage out in Rosebrier Cliff. I intend to build our foundation on a rather solid basis. The distractions of modern life lure a man away from his home and we are going to be happy if I can manage it."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles B. Warren, who has been named as one of the American commissioners to negotiate for a closer understanding with representatives of the Obregon government in Mexico, recently retired from the post of United States ambassador to Japan.

A resident of Detroit, Mr. Warren is a lawyer and business man of wealth and reputation, and his experience has been by no means confined to his home city. He was associate counsel for the United States before the joint high commission to determine the Behring sea claims in 1896, and counsel for the United States in the North Atlantic fisheries arbitration before The Hague tribunal in 1910. He was on the staff of the judge advocate-general in the late war, and was credited with having had much to do with drawing the draft law. He was also in attendance at the peace conference in Paris part of the time. As a member of the republican national committee, he took an active part in the last national campaign.

Ida Saxton, Wife of William McKinley

One of the most charming women who ever graced the White House was Ida Saxton McKinley, wife of William McKinley. Fair and graceful to look upon, Ida Saxton was blessed with an unusual cultural background and a thorough acquaintance with the capitals of Europe, which gave her the very necessary equipment for filling her position as First Lady of the Land.

She had just returned from a lengthy trip abroad when she met McKinley, who immediately fell a victim to her charms. The marriage was most fortunate, and Ida wove her spell so tightly about her husband that she won his life-long devotion. He, in turn was an ideal husband.

"President McKinley," once said Mark Hanna, the great political boss, "makes it hard for the rest of us husbands in Washington.

The happiness of the McKinleys was increased by the arrival of little Katie, who brought great joy to them both. For two years their life was unclouded, then Katie's little sister was born, and from that time on Mrs. McKinley's health declined steadily. The great shock of losing both her tiny daughters, the second one but a few months after her birth, preyed on the mother's mind, and her nerves gave way completely. Not long after this heavy loss her own mother died, and Ida, who had been her close companion, was deeply stricken. But the President, his own heart heavy, managed by his loving care to raise his wife's spirits to a great degree. Fortunately she died before McKinley's assassination, and the great sorrow of losing the one she loved best was spared her.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Rio Grande Do Sul.

Brazil: Tropical forests—rubber—coffee.

That is the usual thumbnail picture of the huge republic of South America. It takes no account of Brazil's south, and especially of Rio Grande do Sul. That state, mentioned in dispatches because of the revolution which it had on its hands, gives a different picture, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society, and presents a Brazil into which hundreds of thousands of citizens of the United States could fit in peace times with little violence to their daily routine.

"Reverse directions in comparison with the United States," says the bulletin, "and you have an explanation of the importance of Rio Grande do Sul. Brazil's north has a tropical climate; and there is the Brazilian 'black belt' where live millions of negroes. The south has a temperature zone climate at its best; and Rio Grande do Sul, most distant from the Equator, leads all the rest of the states in climatic agreeableness from the point of view of northern Europeans and North Americans. This has been a 'white man's country' from the first, and it has been the leader in many ways in Brazilian development.

"But there is a marked difference between Brazil's south and our own north. This southernmost of Brazil's states has its closest affiliations with our west, for it is a 'cow country' without peer. On the 91,000 square miles of Rio Grande do Sul are more than a quarter as many cattle as in the entire United States. Water and grass are abundant, droughts are practically unknown, and the rolling country with its numerous tree-covered hills, furnishes a charming and stimulating countryside in contrast to the dreary and often dry level of many of the world's great cattle raising regions. Travelers who have visited all the leading livestock countries assert that Rio Grande do Sul's pasture lands are superior to those of Argentina, South Africa, the United States and Australia; and that here, under the southern cross, is the coming 'cow country' of the world.

"Until fairly recently Rio Grande do Sul's cattle were neglected by companies in search of beef to transport and the state had to content itself with shipping millions of dollars worth of 'jerked beef' and hides. Recently tremendous freezing plants have been erected, and now Brazilian beef is finding its way to the world markets in competition with that from Argentina and Australia. Since this region is somewhat closer to Europe and the United States than its competitors, the industry seems assured of a steady development.

"Revolutions and insurrections are no new thing for Rio Grande do Sul, a fact that can best be appreciated, perhaps, when it is pointed out that Giuseppe Garibaldi, liberator of Italy, and one of the most famous revolutionary leaders of modern history learned his 'trade' in Rio Grande during its secession in 1835. Some of Rio Grande do Sul's propensity to play the major role in Brazilian insurgence may be due to its relatively invigorating climate. But more important have been the traits of its gauchos or cowboys — hard-riding, outdoor-loving frontiersmen, impatient of restraint of encroachment on their cherished independence.

"Rio Grande do Sul is not alone a 'cow country.' Its soil grows to perfection the grains and vegetables and fruits of the temperate zone. There has been considerable development along these lines; and the country seems destined to prove that there can actually be a compromise in the old war" between agriculture and stock-raising which has raged since before the days of Abrahani. In manufacturing, only one state, Sao Paulo, surpasses Rio Grande do Sul. The state is the only vineyard of Brazil, producing annually 10,000,000 liters of wine.

"Rio Grande do Sul has been more strongly affected by immigration than any other Brazilian state. For a time it seemed that it would become almost a German colony. Even now whole communities and towns and cities are predominantly German, and in them the German tongue has little competition. About 20,000 Germans live in the state, but since the total population of the commonwealth is more than 2,000,000, the German element is not dominant. Italians also have been attracted by this temperate portion of Brazil and scores of thousands of them have settled in the state. They furnish an interesting example of adaptation to new conditions. Italians whose fathers know little about horses are veritable gauchos, at home only in the saddle, and throwing a lariat with the unerring skill of an Arizona cow-puncher.

"The latitude of Rio Grande do Sul corresponds roughly with that of southern and central Georgia, but the proximity of the Andes in this narrowing portion of the continent and the winds from the cold Argentinia pampas produce a somewhat cooler winter. The area of Rio Grande do Sul is slightly less than that of Oregon, and its population is almost that of Iowa."

Just a Bit Short.

He was hungry as a wolf due to an early start downtown, so at noon he hurried to the restaurant.

"Now," he ordered, "I want oysters on the half shell in a hurry."

"Yessur, right away, suh," assured the waiter hurrying off.

Five minutes passed and five more; still no oysters appeared. With growing impatience he summoned the waiter.

"I ordered oysters on the half shell. Where are they?" he demanded.

The waiter looked embarrassed. "Well you see, suh," he said at length, leaning over and confidentially lowering his voice, "we're jus' a bit sho't on shells today, but yo' o'der is nex' on de list."

POETRY

A SPRINGTIME JAMBOREE.

The pond call them bawling brooks
That ramble down through shady nooks
Perhaps they are—but I must disagree.
My fancy names the call them kids
Out playing where their Ma forbids—
Kids out upon a Springtime Jamboree!

When Spring has thrown off Winter's chill,
And lured me back to vale and hill,
I like to find a rocky-bedded stream;
Then bak a while along the shore,
Let dreams of Youth come back once more
And lend myself to Nature's happy scheme.

I make believe the rushing tide
Is Childhood newly glorified,
Each rock-dashed wave an urchin wild with joy,
They run and jump with freedom rare,
Turn somersaults high up in air—
No sweeter freedom ever blest a boy.

They race around a stony peak,
Then play a game of hide-and-seek,
I feel myself a comrade in their glee.
They are, indeed, just carefree kids
Out paying where their Ma forbids—
Kids out upon a Springtime jamboree.
—William Herschell, in Indianapolis News.

DAWN.

Far in the east a tinted glow is seen
That steals upon the darkness unawares,
Dimming the luster of the shining stars,
Filling the sky with beauty rare, fair;
A moment more and gorgeous hues appear.
A flame of gold flew on the high hill's crest.
The dusky veil of night has been dissolved
And all of the twinkling stars have sought their rest;
A million dancing sunbeams wend their way
To stream and lake and shining window pane
Waking the sleeping earth to life anew,
Telling the news that day is here again.
—Kansas City Star.

Years ago British fashion dictated that every woman should wear a fringe of short hairy on the forehead. The vogue became so general that mistresses advertising for servants stipulated "No fringe." Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon has revived the practice, wearing a fringe about an inch above the eyebrows, says the London Daily Express.

Staggering and falling on the sidewalk at Miles Platting, England, an ex-soldier was found, on removal to the infirmary, to be dead. He had been discharged from the British army as medically unfit and pensioned. Undesirable high tones, or whistles, and annoyance commonly experienced by phonograph users, may be eliminated by the use of recently patented interference tubes. They consist of U-shaped metal appliances, designed to be incorporated in a main tube that is fitted between the reproducer and tone-arm of a talking machine. According to the inventor, the arrangement of bypaths for the sound waves caused certain of these to be considerably softened with but little loss in volume.

Local Druggists Guarantee Rheuma For Rheumatism

What chance does any sufferer take when Rheuma is guaranteed to banish rheumatism, lumbago, gout and kidney ailments, or money back?

Why not investigate this offer? Talk to Lee & Osgood Co. about it. Rheuma must drive rheumatic poison from the system, bring swollen joints back to normal, and relieve all agony, or it costs nothing.

People so crippled with rheumatism that they could not walk have been absolutely freed from the iron grasp of the demon, rheumatism, with the Rheuma treatment. A few hours after the first dose, Rheuma begins to drive the dangerous poisons that cause stiffness and pain in the joints and muscles from the body through the natural channels.

Everybody can afford Rheuma — it's not expensive, and money back if not entirely satisfied.

BUILDING TRADE WAGES HAVE MADE ADVANCES

Wages in several branches of the building trades have made advances in the past month.

On April 16 the minimum wage for carpenters went up from 80 cents to 90 cents. Most of the journeymen carpenters, however, are being paid $1.00 an hour, said one of the contractors Wednesday night. The carpenters asked for $1 an hour as the minimum but agreed to accept 90 cents after conferences with the employers.

On April 1 also, the painters' wages went up from 70 cents an hour minimum to 82 1-2 cents minimum.

The laborers had a contract with the master builders, expiring July 1, providing a minimum wage of 40 cents, but this agreement has been disregarded by the laborers and two advances have recently been granted them in response to their demands, which have brought their wage rate now up to 50, 55 and 60 cents.

The masons have also made demands for wage raises which have not been settled.

Dr. Dimon lost control of his automobile on March 3, running down and fatally injuring Eugene H. Partelle of Groton, and then under strain of the occurrence cut his own throat.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. William H. Kneeland.

The death of Mrs. Maria Antionette (Goodwin) Kneeland, wife of William Henry Kneeland, occurred Saturday night, April 21, 1923, at 11.50 p. m. at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank B. Skeleton, 57 Caya avenue, Hartford, at the age of 78 years.

Mrs. Kneeland was born at Lebanon Center, on the place now owned by Mrs. Ida Abell, on January 9, 1845, the daughter of McCall Goodwin and Maria (Buckley) Goodwin. Mr. Goodwin gave the land on which the Lebanon Baptist church was erected. After the death of Mr. Goodwin the family removed to Columbia where she resided until her marriage. On Thanksgiving day

MRS. WILLIAM H. KNEELAND.

1875, she was united in marriage with William Henry Kneeland of Lebanon, the ceremony being performed by the late Rev. Frederick D. Avery, then pastor of the Columbia Congregational church.

For six years after her marriage they resided in Lebanon and Marlboro, then they purchased a home in Pine street, Columbia, where for thirty-nine years she resided and endeared herself to a large circle of friends.

Two years ago Mrs. Kneeland suffered two shocks from which she only partially recovered. On Wednesday morning, April 18, she had a third shock and remained unconscious until her death. Throughout her long illness she has been patiently and lovingly cared for by her two daughters.

She was a member of the Columbia Congregational church for many years and so long as her health permitted was a regular attendant at its services. She was always actively interested in the welfare of the church and her Christian influence will long remain an inspiration to many.

As a member of the Ladies' Aid society and Red Cross and other philanthropic enterprises she was always one of their most untiring and faithful workers. Her home life was one of unselfish devotion to her family, a loving wife and mother, her presence will be deeply missed.

Besides her husband she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frank B. Skeleton of 57 Caya avenue, Hartford, and Mrs. Everett H. Bosworth of 63 Caya avenue, Hartford. One daughter, Miss Lucy May Kneeland, died in November, 1905, at the age of 25 years. There are four grandchildren, Misses Verna M. and Eleanor N. Skeleton and Miss Lucie Mae Bosworth and Master Emerson Howard Bosworth, all of Hartford, also one brother, Rev. Henry M. Goodwin, and a sister, Mrs. Mary G. Tucker and four nephews and a niece in California.

The funeral services were held Tuesday, April 24, with a prayer service which was attended by a large number of relatives and friends at 57 Caya avenue, Hartford, at 1 o'clock. Dr. A. F. Campbell, pastor of the St. Paul's Methodist church in Hartford conducted the prayer service and spoke in highest terms of the deceased. The body was then taken to Columbia where funeral services were held at 3 p. m. in the Congregational church, of which she was a member. Rev. T. Newton Owen, pastor of that church, conducted the services. Miss Edith Lyman sang very tenderly, Face to Face, and One Sweetly Solemn Thought. She was accompanied by Mrs. Clayton Hunt at the organ. The service was largely attended. The burial took place in the family plot in Columbia cemetery where Rev. Mr. Owen conducted a committal service at the grave. The bearers were her two sons-in-law, Everett H. Bosworth and Frank S. Skeleton, and two nephews by marriage, William A. and Warren M. Kneeland, all of Hartford.

The floral tributes which were very beautiful consisted of a floral wreath with Wife on it, a large floral pillow with Mother on it, a wreath of magnolia leaves and pink roses with Grandma on it, a wreath of mixed flowers and lilies from Mrs. Hattie Kneeland and sons, a large floral wreath from her neighbors on Caya avenue, a spray of snapdragon flowers from St. Paul's Methodist church of Hartford, and carnation sprays from Mr. and Mrs. David Walsh of Leonard Bridge; Mr. and Mrs. John Keene, Mr. Ralph Skeleton and Mr. and Mrs. Gracey and Miss Louise Gracey of Hartford.

George L. Chesbro.

The death of George Lewis Chesbro occurred late Wednesday afternoon at his home on Plain Hill road. He had had a long period of illness which had kept him from active business life for several months.

Mr. Chesbro was born in Norwich October 10, 1858, the son of Amos and Nancy Chesbro and made his home in this city during his entire life. He received his early education in local schools and as a young man was connected with the Forepaugh shows, traveling all over the country. Returning to this city he was employed in the old Hopkins & Allen shop at the Falls as a pistol maker and he worked later with the Hopkins & Allen Co. on Franklin street as manager of the supply department. He was with the company for about 20 years.

On Oct. 22, 1915 he was appointed Norwich superintendent of the state employment bureau, holding that position until his death. The territory of the Norwich bureau took in the entire Eastern Connecticut and during his many years as superintendent Mr. Chesbro had filled the office with efficiency, always having a supply of

AMERICANIZATION SPEAKER AT D. A. R. MEETING

Robert C. [illegible] state Americanization [illegible] talk Wednesday [illegible] at the meeting [illegible] chapter, D. A. R., at the [illegible] house, in which he [illegible] members to use their influence with the Norwich school board to see that Norwich should have an Americanization director. Norwich and Willimantic, he said, were the only places of size in the state last year to have an Americanization director and carry on this work in co-operation with the state board of education. That the work is needed here, he said, was proved by the fact that there are in Norwich 1,113 persons classed as illiterates, not being able to write their own language, and there are 3,000 who cannot read or write English. There is need of a trained and qualified leader to take up this work of Americanization, or adult education, to inculcate American standards of life and thought, rather than allow our American standard of citizenship to be submerged in an alien flood.

If the school board would not support this, he suggested that the chapter might find ways to do some thing in this important work.

The regent, Mrs. A. M. H. Vaughn, presided at the meeting. Reports on the chapter work were made by officers and committees.

Reports of the 33d Continental congress, National society, Daughters of American Revolution, April 16 to 21, were listened to with the greatest interest as presented by Mrs. B. Allen Bidwell, delegate; Mrs. Frank Bromley Stead, Mrs. George Haskell, alternates; Miss Barbara Allen, page; Miss Emily Bidwell, delegate to C. A. R.—all of them stressing the fact that the congress was a large but quiet and interested gathering of D. A. R. women, intent on the transaction of necessary business, with many social functions interspersed to enliven the week.

Mrs. W. Russell Baird was heard in two delightfully rendered songs, My Neighbor, by A. Goring Thomas, and Thy Blue Eyes, by Carl Rohn.

A recommendation was presented from the board by which Article 8, Section 2, of the by-laws of Faith Trumbull chapter be changed to read: "The annual dues shall be $4 (instead of $3.50), payable in advance at the November meeting." This will be voted upon in June. As the election of officers for the coming two years will take place at the June meeting, which takes the form of a garden party at Pinehurst, the residence of Mrs. Charles W. Gale, a nominating committee of three was nominated from the floor.

Tea was served by the hostesses of the afternoon, Mrs. Leonard P. Church, chairman; Mrs. Samuel E. Smiley, Mrs. Helen B. Zabriskie, Mrs. Charles N. Kinney, Mrs. Chester L. Hussey.

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of Today)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real delatone. Mix fresh as wanted.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

E. C. Babson, as treasurer of the Brooklyn Fire district, in his annual financial statement shows that the district has maintained itself during the past fiscal year and in addition reduced its indebtedness by $106.90, the total debt of the district, really a part of Danielson though officially and integrally a part of Brooklyn, being only $1,543.44.

It will be interesting to Killingly taxpayers to know that the Brooklyn fire district proposes to get along on a 2 mill tax during the fiscal year now opening and not only get along, paying its bills but also have a little left toward the reduction of the very inconsequential debt, the value of the property in the district considered.

The detail of Treasurer Babson's statement as of May 1 is as follows:

Hugh Carragher, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Carragher of Mechanic St., was knocked down by an automobile driven by Claude Jette but not seriously injured Wednesday just before one o'clock while he was on his way to St. James' parochial school.

The child, it appears from the statement of onlookers, started to cross Main St., just below the railroad crossing, when the Jette car came along and was evidently hit by a fender of the machine, but not at all seriously injured. Mr. Jette, who was not held responsible, quickly stopped the car, which was proceeding at a moderate pace, and avoided running over the little victim of the accident, who was taken across the square to the W. A. Dawson store and his mother summoned by telephone by Mrs. Emma Ward.

Later an examination of the little boy by Dr. J. M. Parmentier revealed nothing serious in the injuries though a bruise showed on the side and he had a cut on the head, being a bit lame.

The injured boy's junior brother, Daniel was with him at the time the accident happened, but he scurried across the busy street.

To those who haven't given much serious attention to the matter, the suggestion is recommended, with all due modesty, that this is Clean-up week in Danielson. A little journey around the borough Thursday developed the fact that some people hardly back wards have not as yet received the attention that one would expect might be given them during such a period of brightening up the town, and only today and two other working days remain for attention to this matter if the cleaning up is to be done during the period officially designated for that purpose. However, even those who have not yet found time to do the work that can be expected to do this week, if one would be in line with a popular movement, may be easily accomplished before Saturday night. Many have come into line with the clean-up week idea and it may be stated with confidence that many more will have done so before the working days of the week come to an end.

More than 400 owners of dogs in the town of Killingly have made visitations to Town Clerk Frank T. Preston and paid the annual registration fee assessed against those who for one reason or another think Fido or Jack or Bill or Scoot is an essential member of the community. This is close to a record registration of dogs in Killingly and may be accepted in some quarters as evidence that the town is growing, a theory that is not disputed here.

The period for registering dogs without being liable to a penalty for the negligence expired Tuesday. However, dog owners continue to visit the town clerk's office during Wednesday to list unregistered canines, all of these owners being assessed the extra dollar that is charged against those who do not pay on time.

Prosecutions conducted some weeks ago in Killingly against owners of unregistered dogs may or may not have had something to do with the big registration of animals that has taken place here this spring. Many believe that the court actions did stir up a general impression against keeping an unlicensed animal, in any event it is now clearly established that Killingly has a large population of dogs, scores of which serve no other purpose than being a friendly adjunct to the household equipment, a good pal during lonesome hours and an avenue for the disposal of table wastes and surpluses.

Local motorists read with glee Wednesday of the war that is on between the gasoline distributing interests and the oil, the alleged ambition to drive the independents out of business. Within the past two weeks gasoline has taken a drop of two cents a gallon in Danielson and few motorists will wail if it takes other drops that will bring it down to the level of 1912. Possibly there wouldn't be any profit for the gas companies at that price, but the motorists are not concerned about that. They figure that gas has been selling at more money per gallon than they ought to pay and that they are entitled to sit back during at least one spot of the stage which is favorable to them and to their pocketbooks. It may not revealing a secret to publish the fact that they wouldn't be at all perturbed if gasoline went as low as 16 cents a gallon—but they are not expecting that it will. Gasoline company's fights do not usually last long enough for that.

The Champion Hit Like A Sledge Hammer —A Secret of His Terrible Punch

Revealed by the discovery which fifty-eight champions of the world, all the symbol of energy and endurance of trade, and champions in the days of their prime, have used to put all the power and energy of the whole body, and the physical strength of their entire body, into the fist you can't do it in the natural way which most people do it. The secret is in the leverage. The power all depend upon the weight

SENATE DECLINES TO EXCLUDE WOMEN FROM DUTY ON JURIES

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, May 2—The legislative committee on the judiciary reported today unfavorably in the state senate on the bill to allow women to serve on juries. The report of the committee was rejected by a vote of 11 to 19 and the bill was tabled for calendar.

Senator Ells, leader of the majority, said that very good reasons were advanced in favor of the bill at the hearing before the committee. No one appeared in opposition to the bill. The women had accepted the obligation of electors. He did not attach much importance to the claim that women were unfit for jury duty because they were too sympathetic and sentimental. He knew men who were too sympathetic for jury duty. Resuming the senator said the committee had given a great deal of consideration to the bill. There is a feeling that the majority of women did not wish to perform jury duty and were not suited for it. Unquestionably the matter will come up again at a future session.

Senator McGrath, leader of the democratic minority, said the showing made by the women at the committee hearing justified a favorable report from the committee. The time was surely coming when women would do jury duty, and why not now, he asserted. The women of the state were not unanimous in favor of allowing women to serve on juries. The women may not want to do jury duty, but they wanted the right to do the duty. There were many men who were unfit to do jury duty. "Many were called but few are chosen." He moved for a roll call vote. More than one-fifth of the senate having voted for a roll call vote it was ordered.

Senator Doty said he expected that Senator Ells would offer a substitute bill. He could not see how the committee on the judiciary could say that women did not want to do jury duty. He (Senator Doty) wanted to go on record as being in favor of allowing women to serve on juries.

Senator Ells said a vast majority of the women did not want to perform jury duty.

Senator Wilder said the bill was defective.

The report of the committee was rejected by the following aye and nay vote, the ayes being in favor of accepting the report and the nays against acceptance:

Absent or not voting—Senators Sutsman, Bakewell, Challenger, Brooks and Allen—5.

May Not Confirm Peasley

The nomination of Frederick M. Peasley, of Cheshire by Governor Templeton to be a judge of the superior court to succeed judge James H. Webb does not seem to be a popular one.

It was predicted about the corridors today that the nomination would not be confirmed. This is the third judgship appointment from the fifth congressional district.

For Taking McCook Land

Interest centered in the bill which proposes to take by condemnation if it cannot be acquired by purchase, land needed by the tuberculosis commission at Niantic, owned by the McCook heirs. The McCook family have offered to donate a portion of the land, but it does not include the beach frontage which is most desired by the commission. The bill in full introduced today by house chairman Hill of the committee on humane institutions provides that the state tuberculosis commission is directed to purchase for an addition to the state sanitorium in the town of East Lyme the property belonging to the estate of the late Eliza McCook situated in said town and bounded as follows: Commencing at point in the division line between the land of said estate and the land of the state which point is located at or near the southerly end of the picket fence located upon or near said division line, thence running northerly along the easterly line of the property of the state being along the westerly line of the property herein described, two hundred and fifty feet; thence easterly at right angles to said division line, two hundred feet thence southerly at right angles and parallel with said division line and two hundred feet distant therefrom to high water of Long Island sound; thence along the line of high water to the division line between the land herein described and land of the state; thence northerly along the division line between the land of the state and the land of said estate to the point of beginning. In the event said commission shall be unable to agree with the owner or owners of the land herein described it is directed, through the attorney-general, to institute condemnation proceedings to acquire the same in accordance with the provisions of section 5136 of the general statutes.

The bill was tabled for calendar and printing.

Tax on Advertising Signs.

Another bill authorizes the appointment of an assistant messenger in the supreme and superior courts when needed, with compensation at the rate of $4 per day.

Henry S. Dorsey of New London is recompensed by the bill passed today for $106 for money expended while in the military service of the state.

Refuse Shepherd-Towner Aid.

House bill 878, passed, directs the state department of health to refuse the federal aid provided for under the Shepherd-Towner act. The bill caused considerable discussion, participated in by Chairman Keith of the appropriations committee, Mr. Fenton of Windham and Mr. Schatz of Hartford, who opposed the passage of the bill. House Leader Buckley supported the bill.

An act concerning municipal bonds passed today forbids the issuance in the future of bonds except in serial form.

The committee of conference on the shade tree bill reported in favor of the passage of it without the senate amendment.

The bill had previously passed the house and was returned by the senate with an amendment. The house then indefinitely postponed. The action was reconsidered and passed as originally reported.

All bills requiring action by the senate were under suspension of the rules transmitted to that body.

A communication from the town council of West Hartford protesting the law that makes uniform the method of voting and a uniform of ticket was read and the clerk was directed to return the communication to the council.

SENATE.

A favorable report was made by the committee on incorporations on the bill incorporating the Masonic Hall association of Hartford. The capital stock is $500,000.

"Small Loans" Banks.

Senator Brooks explained the bill giving the bank commissioner jurisdiction over the "small loans" banks. The bill required these banks to be licensed by the commissioner and to pay a license fee of $100 and to pay the examinations made by the bank commissioner. The senator said the bill would protect many poor people and its operation would be beneficial to the banks. The bill was passed.

Widows' Pensions.

Senator Wilder explained the bill amending the widows' pension law. The bill provides that the state agent shall determine whether the aid shall be given in cash or merchandise. The weekly allowance is as follows: Food for widow, $2; food for each child over 14 years, $1.75; food for each child between 5 and 14, $1.25; under 5 years, $1; fuel, $1; clothing for each member of the family, 50 cents, and a reasonable allowance, not exceeding $5 a week, for tenement. The bill was passed.

To Protect Property and Persons.

Senator Wilder explained the bill to prevent "the advocacy, encouragement or justification of injury to persons and to public or private property."

Senator Dignam questioned Senator Wilder in regard to the interpretation of the language of the bill and expressed the fear that it might encroach on the right of free speech. Senator Wilder assured him that his fears were groundless. Senator Tone offered an amendment to make the phraseology less drastic and to reduce the penalty from $5,000 to $500, but it was rejected. Senator Brooks favored the bill. It was passed by a practically unanimous vote.

Recommitted—Concerning the practice of midwifery.

Passed—Increasing the state police department to 50 men, to include captain, lieutenant, inspector, a senior sergeant, eight sergeants and an inspector of weights and measures, concerning town seals; incorporating the East Hampton Water company; amending the charter of the Title Insurance and Mortgage company of Stamford.

On the report of the commission on claims the sum of $100 for funeral expenses of Lester Howard was ordered to be paid to J. J. Howard.

The act codifying the fish and game laws passed the senate without amendments and as passed in the house. The bill now goes to the governor and when signed by him becomes operative at once.

COUPLE WILL BE TRIED BY JURY ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, May 2—In the superior court here this afternoon the grand jury failed to return a true bill of first degree murder against John J. Guinan, a sailor stationed at the Submarine Base and Grace McSheffrey, aged 19 years. States Attorney Hull then filed information with the court charging the couple with manslaughter and the pair elected a jury trial.

About three months ago the McSheffrey girl gave birth to a child in a Bank street rooming house and is alleged to have taken the child from the house the same night that it was born and without her having received medical treatment, to a vacant lot at the corner of Reed and Blinman street, depositing the babe, wrapped in clothing and papers behind a pile of lumber.

Guinan, who is not married to the girl and who both he and the girl admit is not the father of the child, is held as accessory before the fact. Guinan has made a statement in which he stated that he was aware of the girl's condition and that the night that the child was born to have endeavored to procure medical attention for her, but was prevented from doing so because he did not have money to deposit in a telephone when he attempted to summon a physician. When he reutrned to the house the child was born and a short time afterwards the McSheffrey girl place dthe babe in a covering and left the place, stating that she was going to get rid of the infant. The babe was found two or three days later and by a laundry mark on a sheet that was wrapped about the child the crime was traced to the girl and her arrest followed while at the Submarine Base to interview Guinan.

Guinan, who was absent on a ship at Newport, was arrested there and brought back to New London. He has been out on bond since his arrest, but the girl has been a prisoner at the New London County jail. The trial will probably not occur until the latter part of the session of court.

Henry Wilmot, a soldier stationed at Fort Warren, Massachusetts, pleaded guilty to burglarizing a store at Mystic several weeks ago and was sentenced to the reformatory by Judge George E. Hinman. Wilmot's father, a resident of Torrington, was in court and stated that his son was incapable and that the former had done everything in his power to assist him, but the son was frequently getting into trouble.

Joseph Young, a Providence negro, who was arrested in a Hill street house several weeks ago, charged with attempting to peddle narcotics, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to prison for a term not less than two, nor more than four years. Young came to New London with a female companion, whom he tried to induce to peddle drugs among the negro population and the woman providing the police with a clue resulted in his arrest. It is believed that Young is a member of a gang of dope peddlers who have operated for a long time in Providence.

Edward Wilson, of Roxbury, Mass., charged with the theft of poultry from the hennery of Ex-Senator Frederick Johnson at Montville last January, was sentenced to fifteen days in jail, the slight sentence being imposed in view of the fact that Wilson, who is 72 years of age and a war veteran, had been incarcerated since January 29th.

Late this afternoon the case of John O'Brien of No. 1627 Main Street, Hartford, charged with indecent assault upon a New London boy, was started, but it is doubtful if the case is concluded before late tomorrow.

Laborers have started work improving the vacant property of the W. H. Perry Ice Co., on North Bank Street. The tract will be filled in and made use of early for the storage of the big trucks of the company instead of parking the vehicles in the street.

The city will soon cause Meridian street, between State and Church streets to be widened eleven feet and plans towards this end have already been started. The street is a narrow one and with the increasing traffic through it together with parking being permitted on the west side, congestion frequently exists there. The widening of the street is made possible by the generosity of William W. Williams, owner of the Williams estate recently acquired by Frederick W. Mercer, the former deeding a strip of the land to the city prior to Mr. Mercer negotiating for the acquisition of the property.

Within a few days the wheel of the Old Town Mill will be started in motion, City Manager Barlow having decided that as the mill has a historic value to the city that the wheel should be kept in motion so that visitors to the ancient structure may observe the big wheel in operation.

Frederick W. Mercer, who received the largest vote cast for members of the directorate of the New London Chamber of Commerce recently, immediately tendered his resignation as soon as he was notified of his election by James G. Hammond, secretary of the chamber. Mr. Mercer, who has figured prominently in New London affairs, both civic and municipal although not desiring to hold public office, did not consider that he could serve with harmony with some of the other members and for that reason tendered his resignation.

Secretary Hammond endeavored to prevail upon Mr. Mercer to reconsider his action, but Mr. Mercer refused, so there remains a vacancy to be filled on the board.

Agnes, the two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bartolucci of No. 20 East street, died this morning following a brief illness.

Samuel Taylor, colored, residing on Broad street, will not be at his accustomed domicile for some time for this afternoon Taylor was convicted by a jury at West Kingston, R. I., of larceny in breaking and entering the home of Albert E. Larson several weeks ago and was sentenced to two years in prison. Taylor was also suspected of having broken into two or three residences in Mystic.

Miss Mary Norrie, a summer resident of New London, occupying for many years the handsome residence at the corner of Pequot and Glenwood avenues, died at her home, No. 92 Park Avenue, New York, last Tuesday.

The annual Memorial Day parade will take place this year in the forenoon instead of the afternoon as has been the custom for a great many years. It is planned this year to make the parade a larger one than has been the case in a long time for as many patriotic organizations as possible will be invited to join in the line of march.

Nunzio D'Elia, proprietor of the Crystal barber shop on State street, upon whom a fine of $50 was imposed by the union a few days ago for conducting business last Sunday, has gotten into good graces of the union body for he has made it known that he will pay his fine and will continue to employ union assistants. In fact D'Elia has already paid $25 of the fine and has assured the union officers that he will make the remaining payment.

Thomas Foley of 128 Winthrop street, employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad as a freight brakeman, who suffered concussion of the brain as a result of being struck by an automobile owned and operated by Charles Bennett of Dorchester, Mass., at the approach of the Thames river highway bridge several weeks ago, and who was recently discharged at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, is still confined to his home as a result of the injury. However, Foley's condition is slowly improving and it will not be long before he is able to be out, although it will be a number of weeks before he will be in a condition to pursue his former duties.

Mamie Shanahan, an inmate of the State Hospital for the Insane at Preston, made her escape this afternoon and the New London police have been requested to maintain a watch for the woman, whom it is believed, may come to this city in her endeavor to reach her home, which is in Norwalk.

Contractors continue to complain to the police because of the practice of boys stealing or damaging property under course of construction. The latest complainant is Levi G. Raymond, who is erecting a residence on Montauk avenue, between Bellevue place and Fair Harbor place. Mr. Raymond asserts that boys visited the partially constructed house last night and did considerable damage.

There are nearly a thousand bottles of honest to goodness Scotch and rye whiskey to be disposed of either here or at Fishers Island and the chances are that the disposition will be made here. The whiskey is that which comes from the auxiliary power boat Thelma Phebe, formerly the yacht Onward and which went ashore at Fishers Island during the tempest of last Sunday night.

A diver went from New London today to make a survey of the stranded vessel and to report on what must be done to get the liquor out of the vessel's hold. Much of the deck load was thrown overboard or floated away when the vessel listed. What didn't get away in that manner was seized by Inspector Dillon.

There is a demand for lights in Memorial park that will illuminate a section where lovers resort at night, and it is likely that the lights will be forthcoming.

Police Captain Pinney and City Manager Barlow went to New York tonight to attend the International Police convention in that city. They will meet some of the big police authorities of the world for some seventy nations will be represented. Great Britain, France, Canada and Italy are represented in the convention and the big cities of the world are to show what they have in the way of plans for the hunting of the crooked fellows who live on their wits and on their ability to get other people's money and wealth without having any claim to it.

The bearers were James D. Gaffney, Patrick Murphy, Patrick Fay, Martin Keefe, Dennis Doyle and Joseph P. McGarry. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The Odd Fellows' building on Bank street was threatened with serious damage this afternoon when a fire was discovered in the store room on the second story of the three story structure. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters summoning the Niagara and Rumseaug Engine companies and the Allen Hook and Ladder company. With the arrival of the firemen the blaze was attacked with chemicals, but as the fire had made its way into one of the partitions, the fire did greater damage than it would have had the blaze been discovered sooner. In order to reach the fire, a hole in the wall was made through which a quantity of chemical was poured. It is believed that the damage will not exceed $300.

The fire started, it is supposed from a lighted pipe deposited by a smoker in the pocket of one of the garments suspended from the wall causing the clothing to ignite and eventually permit the blaze to communicate to the wooden finishings of the building.

Besides the Mohegan and Pequot lodges, three stores occupy the ground floor of the building.

THIS LITTLE BABY GIRL

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my little girl was born, and the effect it had was wonderful. This will be the first child I have nursed as I had to bring my two boys up on the bottle. I was very nervous and worried, tired all the time, and after I read about the Vegetable Compound I tried it and kept on with it. I still continue its use and recommend it to my friends. You may publish these facts as a testimonial for your medicine."—Mrs. Wm. KLINGE, 169 Plymouth S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many mothers are left in a weakened and run-down condition after the birth of the child, and for such mothers the care of the baby is well-nigh impossible. Not only is it hard for the mother, but the child itself will indirectly suffer.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, May 3.—Intermittent selling by professional operators took place in today's stock market but buying support of a substantial character was in evidence most of the day and closing prices were irregularly higher. Bear traders, for the third successive day, made a last hour attack on the general list but made little headway except in the shipping and a few unimportant specialties.

The bear campaign was aided somewhat by further cuts in mid-continent crude oil and sugar prices and Paris dispatches forecasting French rejection of the latest German reparations offer. Relatively low rates for call money and indications that the forced liquidation had been nearly completed, however, had a constructive effect on sentiment. Outside buying was of a cautious character, small traders apparently fearing that the stocks bought for supporting purposes would be thrown back into the market on subsequent rallies.

Several new low records were established in the reactionary periods. Marine preferred dropped 1 1-2 to 32 3-4, the lowest in several years, and U. S. Steel common established a new low for the year at 102 3-8. Other issues which sold at their lowest prices of the year were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Missouri Pacific preferred, Atlantic Refining preferred, American Hide & Leather preferred, Wilson Packing, American Express, Davison Chemical and Loose-Wiles Biscuit.

Some of the most erratic fluctuations took place in the motor group. Studebaker sold as high as 119 1-8, slipped back to 117 1-4 and then rallied to 118 3-8, up nearly a point on the day. Stewart-Warner fluctuated between 104 and 107 1-2, closing at 104 7-8, a net loss of 1 5-8. Stromberg Carburetor closed at a large fractional loss after moving within a range of 3 1-2 points. Maxwell and Moon Motors were well bought on reports of large current earnings. Maxwell's quarterly statement showed net earnings of $1,026,250 in the first quarter as against a loss of $600,000 in the corresponding period last year. Moon Motors earned $402,644 net in the first quarter, or enough to cover the entire year's dividends on the outstanding stock at the present annual rate of $3 a share.

Some of the active industrials to show net gains of a point or more were Baldwin, American Can, Cuba Cane Sugar preferred, National Biscuit and U. S. Alcohol. Woolworth jumped nearly 6 points and General Electric 4, Fisher Body and Jersey Central Railroad each dropped about 3 points on small turnovers.

Call money opened at 5 1-4 per cent., and eased off successively to 5, 4 3-4, 4 1-2 and 4, where it closed. The time money market was quiet with a few loans arranged at 5 1-4 per cent for the shorter maturities. The bulk of prime name commercial paper continues to move at 5 1-4 per cent.

Germany's latest reparations offer was followed by a sharp break in French francs and German marks. Francs dropped 11 points to 6.63 cents and marks from .0033 to .0029 1-2 cents. Swiss francs touched a new low for the year at 18.04 cents. Norwegian kroner rallied 20 points to 17.20 cents. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.63 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, May 3.—Estimates that the seeding of spring wheat this year would show 12 per cent. reduction as compared with 1922 checked declines today in the price of wheat. Closing quotations were unsettled at a range of 5-8c not lower to 1-4c gain with May $1.19 3-4 to $1.19 7-8 and July $1.20 1-8. Corn finished at 1-4c off to 3-8c up. Oats 1-8c to 5-8&3-4c down and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents.

At first, the wheat market had a downward tendency owing to heavy deliveries here on May contracts, more than 1,000,000 bushels, and because Paris dispatches indicated that German debt settlement proposals would be rejected. Then a decided rally in prices took place simultaneously with announcement that a crop expert here had prepared figures which indicated the spring wheat acreage for 1923 would be the smallest since 1900, and that the winter wheat yield would be 32,000,000 bushel less than last year's harvest.

Although selling broadened out, on the price upturn which ensued in the wheat market, reactions from the day's top quotations were of a more or less transient sort, with bulls encouraged by gossip that 740,000 bushels had been taken from Europe and that 440,000 bushels of the amount was domestic grown. On the other hand, the government's weekly crop report which was construed as bearish proved something of an obstacle to any sustained advance.

Corn displayed a little independent strength owing to lake shipments and to consequent expected rapid decrease of the stock of corn here. Absence of demand weakened oats.

Provisions were easier, influenced by the liberal quantity of meats and lard on hand in Chicago, as shown by the monthly statement from warehouses.

BOND MARKET.

New York, May 3.—Price movements were decidedly irregular and confined to narrow limits in today's relatively dull trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange. Most of the foreign bonds were somewhat lower in sympathy with lower exchange rates, Mexican bonds, however, advanced fractionally, the 5's touching their former high at 58 3-8.

U. S. government bonds were in better demand, most of the active issues advancing from 1-32 to 6-32 of a point. The tax exempt 3 1-2's and Victory 4 3-4's were unchanged.

Railroad mortgages fluctuated within a narrow range, a gain of 1 1-8 by Denver & Rio Grande refunding 5's being the only outstanding change. Industrial liens were mixed, Lorillard 5's were up 1 7-8 and Punta Alegre Sugar 7's, 1. Losses of 1 to 1 1-8 points were registered by Illinois Steel 4 1-2's, Eastern Cuba Sugar 7 1-2's, Cuba Cane 8's, and Consolidated Coal of Maryland 5's.

Total sales (par value) were $10,326,000.

Public offering will be made tomorrow of $10,000,000 Empire Gas & Fuel Company first and refunding convertible 8-year 7 per cent. gold bonds at 99 1-2 to yield 7.19 per cent., the proceeds to be used in developing and improving the property. It is probable also that $,000,000 one to 15-year 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates of the Virginian Railway may be offered at prices to yield 5 1-2 per cent.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Lollypops for the School Children.

"The only time I can't keep still
Is when the camera man
Says, "Now be quiet—don't you move!
Look pleasant, if you can."

"All over!" said Photographer Crane who had been taking a picture of the two little rabbits, as I mentioned in the last story. "Now, wait a minute and I'll show you your pictures," and, pulling out the slide, he poured some stuff over the tintype and handed it to Uncle Lucky.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit, "Your camera has made a dreadful mistake. Why, my old wedding stovepipe hat is on Little Jack Rabbitt's head and his khaki cap on mine."

It was the stage coach dog!

"You don't say so," said the photographer bird. "Maybe you moved," and I guess that was what happened.

"Shall I take you over again?" he asked.

"Not for ten dollars," answered the old gentleman rabbit and, as Photographer Crane didn't say he'd do it for nothing, Uncle Lucky took the picture and drove away.

By and by, after a while, and maybe a smile and perhaps a mile, they saw an old friend of theirs but you'd never guess who if I gave you until the 4th of July, so I'll tell you right away.

It was the Stagecoach Dog. Yes sir! There he was, driving his goat team and smoking his old black pipe.

"Whoa! you skittish billygoats,
Don't be afraid, I say.
The Luckymobile won't hurt you,
So don't you run away."

"Where are you going with the stagecoach?" asked Uncle Lucky, as soon as the billygoats stopped standing up on their hind legs.

"Over to the Shady Forest school," answered the old dog, "I'm going to give all the children a ride."

"Isn't that fine," said the old gentleman rabbit. "Here, take this box of lollypops and give every child a candy," and he handed the old stagecoach dog a big wooden box just crammed full of lollypops, red, white and blue. After that, Uncle Lucky tooted his horn three times and a half and drove away.

Pretty soon, who should come along but a little white mouse. She held a pink parasol over her head and when he saw the two little rabbits she danced up and down and cried:

"Oh take me for a pleasant ride
I hate to walk alone;
For, if you don't, I'll have to get
A taxi on the 'phone."

"Jump in," said kind Uncle Lucky, "but don't lose your parasol when the wind blows."

So, in jumped the little mouse and away they went and Billy Breeze was very kind—he didn't blow the pink parasol away, but just whispered through the treetops a pretty song which I'll tell you in the next story.

NORWICH TOWN

The early arrivals of summer birds make the mornings full of song. The notes of the meadow lark and the red breasted gross beak almost make one believe that summer is right before us.

Some of the winter birds still come to their old feeding places. Crumbs, suet and freshly ploughed gardens attract them as well as the spring birds.

Buds are swelling and leaves are opening in nearby groves.

Hamden—Camillo Gherlone, 42, of Whitney avenue, Centerville, narrowly escaped fatal injury at the W. W. Woodruff & Sons' factory in Mount Carmel when his clothing became caught in the shafting.

PROTECTION FROM TYPHOID THROUGH SUMMER SEASON

Each year as people return from vacations a certain number develop typhoid fever as a result of being infected by water, contaminated milk or other contaminated food in the places where they spent their vacation. This may be a part of our own state or some other state or country. Vacation time is nearly here; incidentally, as pointed out above, this is typhoid time.

The cooperation and assistance of the households are necessary to bring about a continued reduction in the typhoid cases in Connecticut. This is for the reason that cities, towns and boroughs, with the state, have assisted in eliminating watersheds, so that during 1922 only one outbreak was due to contaminated milk, this outbreak numbering but five cases. No typhoid fever was determined to be due to a private or municipal water supply during 1922 other than wells and springs.

The typhoid germ carrier is the person responsible for most of the typhoid cases where the source of infection is not determined. Most typhoid carriers have had typhoid fever at some time or other during their lives. This may be six months ago or forty years ago. When a typhoid fever case occurs in a house where a person is living, who has had typhoid fever at some time in the past, the physician, health officer, and people in the house should assist in the collection of specimens necessary to determine whether or not the individual, who had had typhoid fever in the past, is a typhoid germ carrier. By doing this, Connecticut can make continued progress in reducing typhoid fever cases and deaths, and we are absolutely sure that results can be obtained.

Immunization: Persons going on vacations should be immunized against typhoid fever with typhoid vaccine and persons living in a household where an individual is suspected or known to be a typhoid germ carrier should be immunized against typhoid fever by having their family physician administer the typhoid vaccine.

NORWICH ROTARIANS IN AID TO BOYS' WORK

As this week is devoted to boys' work all over the nation, the Norwich Rotary club in keeping with all other Rotary clubs in America devoted the regular meeting Wednesday noon to a discussion of Boys' Work in Norwich. Dr. R. R. Agnew chairman of the boys' work committee of the club, had charge of the program for the day. President Charles A. Saxton, who has been absent from the recent meetings owing to illness, was back and presided at the business session. Lucius Briggs was the song leader for the meeting.

Dr. Agnew in speaking of the boys' work that could be done by the Rotary club, told of several cases of needy children in Norwich who had been made cripples through infantile paralysis. He said that he had recently talked with Dr. Swett of Hartford regarding these cases and that the Hartford specialist had generously offered to come to Norwich and make an examination of the cases. He also will operate where it is necessary and the only expense will be the hospital charges. There are three classes of children who are crippled, those that need sanatorium treatment, others that need an operation and those that the only possible help will be a brace.

Dr. Agnew also spoke of some recreation facilities that could be provided for the boys by the Rotary club and also about the educational work among some of the needy boys.

Charles R. Butts, custodian of the Dr. John S. Blackmar Boys Fund, made a gratifying report that showed that the fund was slowly but steadily swelling.

Scout Executive E. A. Benton spoke on the Boy Scout work and the plans for the increase of scout work throughout the northern section of New London county. He also spoke on the camp at Beach Pond and the need of a few improvements that were necessary. He also told of the amount of good that was being derived by the children in attending this camp each year. He extended a hearty invitation to the club to spend a day or so at the camp during the coming summer and in all predobability one of the July or August meetings will be held at the camp.

Arthur L. Peale, president of the Boy Scout Council, also spoke of the scout work in Norwich and vicinity and heartily endorsed Mr. Benton's invitation to the Rotary club to attend the camp this summer.

After the talks on boys' work there was a discussion of holding some form of entertainment to raise funds for the boys' work of the club. The matter was left in the hands of the boys' work committee and the entertainment committee.

At the business session there was an announcement made that the ladies' night of the New London Rotary club, which was postponed, will be held at New London on Tuesday evening, May 15th. About 20 will attend from the local club.

The baseball team reported that practice had started and that this year the local team was out to clean up the Rotary championship of the eastern part of the state. There was a practice at the Academy campus on Wednesday evening.

The musical program for the meeting consisted of a duet by George Ingalls and Bert Gager, and selections by guests and visiting Rotarians.

$13,501,500 FOR ROADS IN NEXT TWO YEARS IN STATE

Direct appropriations of $4,201,500 for the state highway department is the recommendation to the general assembly by the appropriations committee, according to House Chairman Luther M. Keith of Putnam. With the estimated receipts of the department from other sources $13,501,500 will be available for road work in the next two years, which would be about a half million dollars less than the funds provided by the last session of the legislature.

$8,500,000 From Autoists.

A big increase in motor vehicle registrations might make up the difference, the house chairman said. The committee took the receipts of the past year as a conservative estimate of what could be expected in each of the next two years, setting down $7,900,000 as the anticipated revenue from that source. To this was added $800,000 due in federal aid appropriations and $1,500,000 in estimated receipts from the gasoline tax which for the first time are to be turned over to the highway department direct as the result of a bill favorably reported by the finance committee.

The financial program submitted to the appropriations committee was prepared by Commissioner Charles J. Bennett before his successor, John A. Macdonald, had been appointed or was under consideration by was under consideration by Governor Templeton. Including bills approved by the committee on roads, bridges and rivers, the program laid before the appropriations committee carried proposed appropriations aggregating $14,476,500. The total of the recommendations to be made to the legislature represents a net reduction of $975,000 from that figure.

Using Gasoline Tax.

On the ground that receipts from the gasoline tax will now be available for trunk line construction, as well as for repairs and replacements, a proposed appropriation of $2,000,000 for that purpose was cut in half. A million dollars appropriation for construction of state aid roads was permitted to stand. Two years ago, the legislature appropriated $990,000 for such roads, but Governor Lake vetoed it.

For the completion of unfinished sections of the state aid roads, for which $600,000 was approved by the roads committee, $400,000 is to be recommended by the appropriations committee. Bills appropriating $10,000 for the completion of state aid roads in towns which are not interested in their completion and $175,000 to reimburse towns which constructed roads in anticipation of ultimate reimbursement by the state, will be unfavorably reported. The towns which constructed these roads, in accordance with a statute that provides for the reimbursement, will get their money from the state notwithstanding the rejection of this bill, but will have to wait for some time until the highway department has the funds available. The state money is paid for these roads in the same proportion as payments are made for all other state aid roads. The only difference is that at the time the roads were constructed in towns which took advantage of this statute, the towns bore practically the entire expense and will do so until finally reimbursed.

The town of Franklin went into debt on account of the roads it built under this arrangement. The maintenance budget of the department is made up of appropriations as follows for the two-year period: Salary of commissioner, $16,000 ($8,000 a year); commissioner's traveling expenses, $2,000; automobile expenses, $8,500; office and incidental expenses, $30,000; engineers and deputies, $275,000; trunk line and state aid bridges, $500,000; elimination of dangerous conditions, $200,000; state aid repairs, $650,000. The maintenance budget to be recommended is identical with that approved by the state board of finance.

Will Carry Out Contracts.

The highway commissioner designate will be engaged for most of the first year probably in carrying out contracts started by his predecessor, but the new construction made possible by the finances provided for that purpose by the current session of the legislature will be laid out by Mr. Macdonald.

NON-STOP FLIGHT ACROSS CONTINENT, 2,700 MILES, MADE IN 26 H. 50 M. 48 2-5 S.

Feat Was Accomplished by Lieuts. Oakley Kelly and John A. Macready—Route Was From New York to San Diego, Cal.—Both Aviators Were in Good Physical Condition When They Landed—President Harding and General Pershing Have Sent Congratulations to the Daring Aviators—The Two Airmen Are to Prepare for a Trip Around the World.

San Diego, Calif., May 3—(By the A. P.)—Completeing their transcontinental flight from New York to San Diego, Lieutenants Oakley Kelly and John A. Macready, United States Army aviators, arrived at Rockwell field here at 12:26:56 p. m. pacific time today, as officially timed by representatives of the National Aeronautic association.

Actual arrival at Rockwell Field, however, was several minutes earlier as the airmen circled about for more than two minutes before landing.

The two airmen flew directly over the heart of the city on their arrival being greeted by the blowing of whistles by factories and by warships in the harbor. A fleet of airplanes from Rockwell Field and a squadron of seaplanes from the North Island navy air station met Kelly and Macready on the outskirts of the city and escorted them to Rockwell.

It was later announced at Rockwell Field that the official time for the flight was 26 hours, 50 minutes and 48 2-5 seconds.

BOTH AVIATORS IN GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION

San Diego, Calif., May 3.—Today it is but a single span across the continent. From New York to San Diego is only a hop. The Atlantic and Pacific are terminals in America's air areas and—if one wishes there are no stops between.

With the arrival at Rockwell Field, near here, of the army monoplane T-2, piloted by Lieutenants Oakley G. Kelly and John A. Macready, the first non-stop flight across the United States was completed.

The time from Hempstead, N. Y., to San Diego was 26 hours 50 minutes and 48 2-5 seconds.

The grind began Wednesday at 12:36:53 p. m. Eastern Standard time. The distance is estimated at approximately 2,700 miles.

The airmen received a warm greeting when they were sighted over the city a few minutes before they landed at Rockwell Field. Airplanes from the field and naval planes from North Island escorted the two lieutenants to the landing field. Whistles of factories and from warships in the harbor also joined in the greeting.

Both aviators were in good physical condition when they landed and after being greeted by army officials were taken to officers' quarters.

The historic flight began at Hempstead, with Kelly in the pit. The T-2 cleared hangars at the end of the flying field by inches, nosed up for elevation and turned its blunt nose toward Rockwell Field. It did not stop an inch short of its goal.

Spectators at the take-off were horrified for a momen when it appeared that the huge plane would not clear the building. It was the second start, Lieutenant Kelly having turned back after the first attempt, when it was apparent that the T-2 would be unable to clear the buildings.

Roaring westward hour after hour in the supreme attempt of its historic career, the T-2 was awaited in every city, town and village throughout the long line of flight and telegraph instruments during the afternoon and night told of the passing of point after point hours ahead of the tentative schedule announced.

The aviators were the recipients tonight of many congratulatory telegrams including one from President Harding.

After Kelly and Macready had refreshed themselves with a quick wash and some food they told their story. It was a composite story, first one putting in a sentence or two and then the other breaking in.

"When we left New York," said Kelly, "we could not seem to get the full horse power out of the Liberty engine. We flew for more than 20 miles at an altitude of less than 400 feet.

"Over New Jersey the voltage regulator went out. This was heartbreaking, for unless we could repair it in flight, we would be forced to turn back. While I handled the control wheel Macready set desperately to work taking off the switch and installing a new one.

"He succeeded and a load was lifted from our hearts when the regular again began to function properly."

Macready took up the story:

"From that moment the flight became a pleasant prospect for us, and we encountered no further mechanical trouble. The Liberty motor we kept operating at 90 per cent. of its full 400 horse power after we had cleared the New Jersey air lanes.

"Reaching Dayton, Ohio, 560 miles airline from New York, we headed for St. Louis thence steered for Tucumcari, N. M. We were flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet when darkness caught us near Indianapolis. Approximately 50 miles from Belleville, Ill., we were thrilled by the sight of a huge beam of light projecting up through the clouds. It was a veritable beacon along a rocky and dangerous shore to us, for otherwise intense darkness prevailed and we were trusting solely to our compass to keep on a straight course.

"Aided by this beam of light, which we knew came from Belleville, we continued straight as an arrow for the Missouri river. A light rain began to fall when we crossed the Missouri line, a condition we were prepared for on account of the cloudy weather in Indiana and Illinois. At the Missouri-Kansas line, while traveling better than 110 miles an hour and at an altitude of 5,000 feet we sighted moonlight filtering through cloud holes. It gave us a feeling of security.

"These faint streaks of moon light were all that we sighted of the heavens until daybreak over Tucumcari. Kelly was at the wheel. Dawn was just breaking. Kelly gave a shout of joy when, on looking over the side of the cock-pit he spied the cemetery on the outskirts of Tucumcari. It was a landmark he knew."

From that time on the aviators had not the slightest difficulty. They were flying in daylight over a section they knew well from their previous flight and the plane, lightened of much of its early burden of fuel, did all that was asked of it in climbing over the mountain ranges. They considered that part of the trip so easy they barell commented on it.

Macready and Kelly said they exchanged positions at the wheel every six hours except while crossing Arizona forests. Then they changed frequently, partly to rest and partly to arrange their schedule so that Macready would handle the controls in making the landing here.

The aviators said they would remain here in the hope of establishing a new world duration record of at least 48 hours. They will make that effort some time this summer. They expect to remain on duty at Rockwell Field until next spring, when they plan to go east to prepare for their attempt to fly around the world.

All distance records for a non-stop airplane flight were smashed today by the transcontinental jump.

It was the second attempt of Kelly and Macready at a transcontinental flight without a stop, they having been forced down at Indianapolis on their way east from San Diego last year.

This flight was made in the same place that was used today, though a different engine had been installed.

"You have written a new chapter in the triumph of American aviation," said a telegram from President Harding, and scores of other congratulatory messages expressed a similar enthusiasm over the accomplishment.

The T-2 landed at Rockwell field, according to the official timers, at 26 minutes 56 1-4 seconds past 12 o'clock noon, Pacific coast time.

There was wild enthusiasm at Rockwell field when Lieutenant Macready nosed the T-2 down and landed the hue ship with consummate ease on almost the exact spot where he and Kelly took off in their attempt to fly to New York Nov. 4 last.

The crowd, thrilled by the sight of the beautiful ship, and sensing deeply what his feat meant for America's prestige in the air, pushed the guards aside like so much chaff and bore down on Kelly and Macready, madly cheering the record makers.

The two air navigators, their faces splotched with oil and grease but wreathed in wide grins, were fairly forced up against the fuselage. Here they were lifted on the shoulders of admirers, presented with huge bouquets, and not let down until the throng had yelled itself hoarse.

Major Henry Arnold, commandant of Rockwell field, and the officials of the National Aeronautical Association were in the mad rush of the spectators. Major Arnold finally fought his way to Macready's and Kelly's side.

"Congratulations," said the major to both men. "It was a marvelous flight and we are surely proud of you."

The following table marks the progress of the historic flight, the time being approximate, and shown in all cases in eastern standard:

6.55 p. m., over Dayton, Ohio.
8.30 p. m., over Terre Haute, Ind.
10.15 p. m., over St. Louis, Mo.
1 a. m. (Thursday), Kansas City, Mo.

Here the plane was swallowed by the darkness and was not heard from definitely until after dawn, when it was reported over New Mexico.

Later a report was received from Arizona, and then Centro, Cal., flashed the word the aviators had passed over there at 11.23 a. m. (coast time), flying at from 4,000 to 5,000 feet elevation. The landing at Rockwell field was made in about an hour.

The aviators hardly had made their record before they were laying plans for a more ambitious flight—one around the world. This they hope to attempt next year, they announced in a statement tonight.

PRESIDENT HARDING CONGRATULATES AVIATORS

Washington, May 3 — President Harding, on being informed today of the non-stop flight from New York to San Diego of Lieutenants Macready and Kelly, sent the two aviators a telegram of congratulation telling them that they had "written a new chapter in the triumphs of American aviation."

The president's telegram follows: "Accept my most cordial congratulations on the success of your record making non-stop coast-to-coast flight successfully completed today. You have written a new chapter in the triumphs of American aviation."

Army Air Service headquarters also telegraphed under the signature of Major General Patrick, chief of the army air service, a message of congratulation to the two pilots.

The trans-continental flight of Lieutenants Macready and Kelly was the culmination of more than a year's effort by army officers in the air service. It was conceived by them, when the project was first suggested, as a preposterous idea both from an engineering point of view and physical endurance of the pilots.

An official report setting forth the study made by te air service in preparation for the flight was made public today. It points out the material advantages, both commercial and military attendant upon the successful accomplishment of the flight. From a standpoint of national defense, the report says, a non-stop transcontinental air voyage indicates the feasibility of transporting men, messages equipment or any other vital necessity, from one coast to the other in an incredibly short space of time.

Another feature regarded as of secondary importance is the demonstration that it is possible to concentrate large numbers of airplanes at any desired point within the United States on short notice.

Another feature regarded by air service officials as of value is the assistance given them by the experiment in designing and constructing long distance bombing airplanes.

In the field of commercial aviation, the report says, the accomplishment of the two pilots is expected to encourage aircraft companies to organize aerial transport services and establish an increased number of landing field and air routes over the country.

In their unsuccessful attempt at a continuous transcontinental flight last fall the two lieutenants established what at that time was a world record for distance by covering without stop 2,516.18 miles from San Diego, California to the point in Indiana where they were forced down by a leaking radiator. They also hold the world's record for duration of flight and several world's speed records.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM GENERAL PERSHING

Washington, May 2.—General Pershing received first word of the successful non-stop flight of Lieutenants MacReady and Kelly from New York to San Diego at his residence here, and requested the Associated Press to send the following personal message to the pilots:

"We have been following you with great interest. The army is proud of your wonderful achievement. Please accept my official and personal greetings and congratulations.

MILEAGE ESTIMATED AT BETWEEN $27,000 AND 28,000

New York, May 3.—The mileage covered by Lieutenants MacReady and Kelly in the T-2 in their transcontinental flight was estimated at between at between 2,700 and 2,800 miles by Major W. R. Weaver, commander of Mitchel fieldt tonigh.. The fliers averaged better than 100 miles an hour on their trip, he said.

STAND OF THE U. S. ON USE OF NARCOTIC DRUGS

Washington, May 3.—The United States will take the position at the meeting this month of the opium advisory committee of the league of nations at Geneva, Secretary Hughes declared in an address tonight before the national anti-narcotic conference assembled here by Rexford L. Homles, a Washington church worker, that the use of narcotic drugs for other than medicinal and scientific purposes is illegitimate.

Curtailment of the production of opium and cocoa leaves in line with the resolution adopted by congress at the last session calling upon the president to urge such restrictions upon foreign governments, Mr. Hughes added, also will be advocated by the American delegation which has been appointed to represent the United States government at the Geneva meeting in a "consultative" capacity.

"The policy of the United States in regard to traffic in narcotic drugs is unmistakable," Mr. Hughes declared. "It is to restrict the manufacture and domestic distribution to medicinal and scientific uses. The laws on this subject are administered by the treasury department. The department of state is concerned with the traffi insofar as it is affected by our relations with foreign powers. In this respect, too, our policy is well defined."

Mr. Hughes then referred to The Hague opium convention of 1912, to which the United States is a party, and which was entered into with several countries to control the international traffic in opium, cocaine and their derivatives.

"It has been the consistent policy of the United States," he continued, "to adhere to the letter and spirit of this treaty and to urge upon other nations the advisability of adhering to it and of enacting legislation which will carry out its provisions."

Canada Has Placed Howat in Duress

Secretary of State Hughes Has Been Asked to Intercede With the Canadian Government.

Pittsburgs, Kansas, May 3.—Secretary of State Hughes was asked today to intercede with the Canadian government for Alexander Howat, former miners' union chieftain of Kansas, now detained in Canada following his entering that country to speak to the coal miners.

HOWAT QUESTION BEFORE HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ottawa, May 3.—The detention of Alexander Howat, former president of the Kansas district of the United Mine Workers of America, at McAdam Junction on his way to Cape Breton, was again the subject of a question in the house of commons today by J. S. Woodsworth, labor member, Winnipeg Center. Charles Stewart, acting minister of immigration, replied that he had no further information to give on the matter.

FOR ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROHIBITION LAW

Washington, May 3.—Treasury officials began today the drafting of definite regulations for enforcement of the prohibition law as construed by the supreme court, with the announced determination that no loopholes would be left for evasion. Penalties will be provided, it was declared, which will leave no doubt as to the government's intention to deal vigorously with the situation.

The day's developments, therefore, augmented evidence already given in several quarters that the national policy with respect to the transportation of liquor within the territorial waters of the United States will be firm and that, after June 10 when the regulations become effective, strong representations will have to be made by foreign powers before changes in that policy will be considered. Treasury plans contemplate the writing of regulations which will make the three-mile limit an actual deadline for ... with liquor aboard, and one spokesman described the language of the court decision as warranting the most rigid application.

There will be provisions, obviously, for the entry into American waters of necessary stocks of medicinal liquor on ships, but the restrictions will be, it said, of a character serving as proof of th epositive stand of the United States government. Officials explained that there is no desire to needlessly handicap legitimate business endeavor, but those who may seek to trespass must face consequences which, it was asserted today, should effectually cut off attempts to sneak liquor through the American boundaries.

In view of this sentiment, there was some fear that efforts would be made by some foreign governments to retaliate through the use of customs laws. Secretary Mellon discounted the possibility. The use of retaliatory measures to embarrass American shipping would not go far, however, in the view of officials, before they reached the point of violation of an international law or treaties.

SUGAR DROPS IN PRICE FOLLOWING BOYCOTT

New York, May 3.—On the heels of the sugar boycott by women in New York and scores of other communities throughout the country, a sharp break in futures amounting at teh close from 45 to 55 points occurred today. A reduction in the price of refined sugar from 10 to 9 1-2 cents was announced by one large refiner.

"Anti-sugar" pledges will be administered to the 1,000,000 school children tomorrow in an attempt to break present prices, it was announced by the women's sugar committee. The children who take the pledge will use sugar substitutes, such as fruits and syrups, "as long as sugar speculators continue to boost the price."

The break in sugar futures today was attributed to the lower prices for refined sugar, and led to increased offerings by operators in the spot market, with the result that a further decline occurred in Cuban. Sales were recorded at 6 cents cost and freight, representing an overnight drop of 1-4 of a cent and a decline of fully 3-4 of a cent from the recent high level. Later offerings were made at 5 7-8 cents cost and freight without finding buyers.

Abducted Boy Found Alive and Well

Theresa, Jefferson County, N. Y., May 3.—Verner Alexanderson, kidnapped Schenectady boy, was found by Bert Jarviss, boat liveryman, in a cottage at Stony Point, three miles down the river from here, early this afternoon. He was in charge of a woman named Grinnel, who said two men had employed her in Alexandria Bay to care for the boy until they were able to bring their families to the Stony Point home.

Jarviss said the cottage for which he was caretaker was rented by two men last Thursday afternoon. When he today learned of the boy's disappearance and of the description of the automobile in which he is believed to have been spirited away, he visited the cottage, identified the boy as Verner Alexanderson and notified Sheriff Jackson at Watertown.

The boy was taken to Watertown early tonight.

Stony Point, as the cottage property is known, is about three miles south of here on the Indian river, and is the property of Morris Stone, Jarviss said.

Two men, he added, drove to his boat livery Thursday in a large black touring car, told him they wanted to rent a place down river for a few days, agreed to take the Stone cottage, and left. on Monday night, he said, they returned, bringing with them an elderly woman and a boy, who they said was the son of one of them, and moved into the cottage.

Today he visited Stony Point. The woman, who said her name was Grinnel, told him that the men, whose names she could not recall, employed her at Alexandria Bay to keep "their son" until they were enabled to move their families into the Stony Point cottage.

The name of the boy, she said, was "Vernon Alexanderson". The boy, Jarvis asserted appeared to be happy and contented in his new home beside the river, but when asked by Jarvis ... to his other name ... decided ... Jarvis ... to pass ... Watertown ... came for the boy, whose ... Grinnel ... Watertown ... The men who ... the boy have not been located as far as is known here.

MOTHER AND SON TALK OVER TELEPHONE

... N. Y., May 3.—"Hello mother, ... Mrs. Alexanderson, ... Alexanderson, chief ... Alexanderson ... of Verner, who ... from his home near ... son.

Verner telephoned his mother today from Watertown, where he is in the keeping of Sheriff Jackson of Jefferson County, after being rescued by officials from a cottage on the Indian river, near Thereisa, where his kidnapers had hidden him.

Detectives now are seeking two men who are believed to have spirited away the youngster, and whose stolen automobile was found this afternoon near Alexandria Bay.

"Hello, my darling!" exclaimed the mother. "And you're all right?"

"Yes, mamma and say you ought to see my dog!" returned the boy.

And then the boy told how he had been treated well by his captors, how he had been given a dog, which must come home with him, and how glad he would be to see his mother, his father and his three sisters.

Tomorrow morning, according to present plans, the father and mother of the boy will start for Watertown by automobile to bring their son home.

With them will go District Attorney Blessing, of Schenectady County, his assistant, and detectives who will aid Detective Ben Van Deusen, through whose efforts the trail to the boy was found, in tracking the men who stole the boy away and who are believed to have fled to Canada or have hidden themselves among the islands of the St. Lawrence river.

FRENCH GOV'T WILL NOT BROOK MEDIATION IN REPARATIONS

French Reply to German Reparations Offer is an Unequivocal Refusal of Chancellor Cuno's Proposal—The Document Has Been Sent to Brussels by Special Courier—The Reply in No Way Takes the Form of a Counter-Proposal—Courtmartial of Krupp Officials to Begin Today.

Paris, May 3 (By the A. P.)—The French reply to the German reparations offer is a short, terse document, the text of it went forward to Brussels this evening, it is an unequivocal refusal of Chancellor Cuno's proposals. Though the nature of the contents has not been disclosed officially it can be asserted that the note in no way takes the form of a counter-proposition

Premier Poincare, M. De Lasteyrie, M. Le Troequer, M. Reibel and M. Barthou collaborated in drawing up the reply. All agreed that by setting forth a reparation plan France would only fall into a time-worn German trap, whereby Germany, they believe, was seeking to induce her opponents to make concessions, without giving any promises herself.

It is understood that the note begins by declaring the impossibility of using the German note as a basis for negotiations.

The note leaves no doubt regarding France's determination not to brook mediation, but to recover her due. The reply is said to explain the reasons for refusal to negotiate by merely refuting the essential passages of Chancellor Cuno's offer without detailed explanations.

EVIDENCE FOR DEFENSE IN THE MORSE TRIAL

Washington, May 3. — Additional evidence designed to show that there was opportunity for a meeting of the minds of Charles W. Morse, his sons and other defendants for the formation of the conspiracy charged against them to defraud the federal government on wartime ship contracts was presented today in the District of Columbia supreme court. At the same time defense counsel elicited from the government's witness, B. G. Higley, of New York, who was an officer of and counsel for the various Morse companies, the statement that he knew of no fact then and had known of none since which showed that the contracts for building government ships were entered into for the purpose of defrauding, delaying, thwarting or perverting the purpose of the government.

Moreover, the witness testified that Charles W. Morse had repeatedly voiced a desire to use every effort to help the government and stated his willingness to "make any financial sacrifice" in seeing that the government got ships to aid in carrying on the war.

Higley in his direct testimany, identified minutes of meetings of C. W. Morse and Company, Inc., and the Groton Iron Works, the first company was a banking and brokerage concern, he said, and the minutes showed that Charles W. Morse, the president, or Higley, as vice president and secretary, was empowered to sign checks, notes and drafts and to borrow funds necessary for the conduct of the business.

Minutes of the Groton Iron Works showed that this concern was organized in Maine just before the United States entered the war and acquired the Robert M. Palmer and Company's wooden shipyard at Noank, Conn. Within less than a month its directorate resigned and new directors were elected. They included B. W. Morse E. A. Morse, Higley, William Guggenheim and Samuel Adams.

On the day following its election, the new board, according to the minutes adopted a resolution offering the government the use of the Noank plant and directing the officers to build wooden ships for the government on such terms as it might make. On cross examination, Higley said he knew of no fact showing that this offer was not made in good faith.

Questioned by Attorney Rockwood of defense counsel, Higley said the United States Steamship Company, a Morse concern, which owned the stock of the Groton Iron Works, had assets of "several millions of dollars" at the time the government contracts were entered into by the Groton plant. He testified also that the steamship company, owned a controlling interest in the Hudson Navigation Company, which had gross assets of approximately $12,000,000.

Government counsel brought out that the Hudson Navigation Company had an outstanding mortgage of $4,000,000 and that several of the steamers listed in the assets of the United States Steamship Company had been destroyed; one of them, news being heard from after starting for Russia.

Counsel for the government and the defense, with the concurrence of Justice Stafford, reached an agreement under which the deposition of John Barton Payne, former chairman of the shipping board, will be taken this week so that he may leave Sunday night for Mexico City. Mr. Payne is listed as a witness for both sides.

Another development today was that Justice Stafford had granted permission for the defense to file a motion to quash the indictments on the ground that one of the grand jurors returning them was not a resident of the District of Columbia and that another held a government contract. The defense also has information that one of the grand jurors had not taken out naturalization papes and that matter is now under investigation. Meanwhile, Justice Stafford has the motion under advisement.

The pastor, Rev. Quincy Blakeley, read the service of the church, and the body, which had rested in a flag-draped casket, was borne down the aisle by sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard. Rear Admiral Cowles was buried in the full dress of his rank.

Many men of note both in the service and in civilian life were at the church services. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, a nephew, and Rev. Fr. Gleason, who served under the late rear admiral, and a number of officers who had been shipmates, were among the number.

INVESTIGATING DEATH OF FREDERICK N. CARTER

Kent, Conn., May 3.—Authorities investigating the death of Frederick N. Carter, 19, whose body was found on the edge of the Housatonic river on Monday, learned today that Miss Jennie Parker, at whose home Carter had lived for several years, heard the shot which probably ended the youth's life about 9 o'clock on the night of April 8. On the following day Miss Parker asked Howard Giddings, a member of the state legislature, to go to the river bank and look for Carter. Mr. Giddings searched along the river but found nothing.

Miss Barker told Mr. Giddings that Carter had been in a moody frame of mind and when she heard the shot she feared he might have shot himself. She said there had been no argument between herself and Carter.

On April 13 railroad men found a shotgun near the river and it was identified as Carter's. Miss Barker has been prostrated since the finding of Carter's body last Monday but was said to be recovering today and willing to testify at the inquest to be held by Coroner Herman next week.

The coroner and townspeople regard the case as one of suicide, although the former has withheld a formal opinion until after the inquest.

The case of Leon H. Frink vs. Charles Levalley, a suit to recover payments alleged to be due on a number of second hand automobiles, was completed Thursday afternoon at the session of the Windham county superior court.

It was said that the plaintiff is an automobile dealer in Plainfield and had disposed of second hand cars taken in trade to the defendant. The business was conducted on account, and some months ago, when the men arranged for a settlement, Levalley claimed that he had not been given credit for a number of payments. Frink then brought suit to recover. At the trial it was shown that Levalley kept no books, his accounts being receipts on short papers of memorandum. The plaintiff presented account books which covered alleged transactions between Frink and Levalley, dates, make of cars and payments.

A tabulation of most of the figures was made by Judge Webb, but he decided to withhold his decision until he had carefully inspected the accounts of both men.

Court was adjourned until Friday morning at 10 o'clock (standard time).

Following the selection of another architect, it is now thought that the proposed addition to the Natchaug grammar school can be built within the appropriation of $80,000. New plans and specifications are nearly completed and will be presented to the building committee by Monday of next week. Under the new plans the addition is to be of similar size and design as formerly agreed upon but it will consist of eight rooms instead of ten. The local architect believes that the building can be built, furnished, etc., within the amount of the appropriation. Some weeks ago the building committee opened bids on plans made by another architect and found that all exceeded the amount of $80,000.

It's easier to operate than any other cultivator you ever saw. Convenient levers enable you to make every adjustment from the seat. Spacing lever adjusts distance between rigs. Depth lever for each rig regulates depth of work accurately. Tilting lever adjusts front or rear shovels to run deeper or shallower, as desired—a big advantage in cultivating up or down hill.

You are sure to like the "KC". Drop in and see it.

Americanization Institute Pageant.

America is what it is today because the founders of our country had in their minds a very wonderful ideal and followed it as well as they could. "E Pluribus Unum," they put on the seal of the United States, and even of our smallest coins "farm many, one."

If our nation is to live and prosper the high ideals of its founders must be kept alive in the hearts and minds of our boys and girls who will soon have the responsibility of carrying on the republic which can be no better than its citizens.

This is one of the fundamental tasks of the Norwich Americanization Institute; to prepare the nation's children, who will some day be called upon to take unto themselves the responsibilities of government. Many of these so-called children come from far shores and are unacquainted with our methods and ideals. Native-born Americans inherit these ideals; and it is for us, the heirs of the great republic to share with our brothers, the foreign-born, our aims and ideals, that they, too, may become worthy and sympathetic Americans; that they may pass to their children the noble heritage.

Statistics show that there are over 5,000 adults right here in the city of Norwich who can neither read nor write English. Situated in the Thayer building, within easy reach of the foreign population, the Norwich Americanization Institute has taught these hundred foreigners to read, write and speak English, and trained them for American citizenship, since its organization in 1920. Its doors are open all day and evening that each one needing its services may receive attention upon application. Although a very small fee is charged each pupil, it is only through individuals of Norwich that the work of the institute can be carried on. Realizing the need to the community of such an organization the leading industries of Norwich stand squarely behind it.

Knowing that the people of Norwich will be glad to co-operate once they realize the need, the committee in charge of carrying on the educational work decided to bring to them a pageant, along Americanization lines. This pageant is being enthusiastically prepared by many of the young people of the city and will be one of the most artistically presented productions Norwich has ever seen. Through it we will all be led to a deeper understanding of what each of us must do as his part in founding the New World; as great responsibility as faced our fathers when they declared this an Independent Nation.

Watch the papers for details and announcements of this pageant and engage your seats early as the keen interest manifested already shows there will be standing room only for those who wait.

Ships of the world, operated by motor, have a total tonnage of 1,031,057, as compared with 60,749,455 of steam vessels.

U. S. Government and Saving.

Saving and thrift are qualities which need not be extolled. Their worth has been proven time after time. It is the thrifty person and the saving families that succeed. In fact it has been demonstrated again and again that the road to success is reached by saving.

The United States government has taken hold of saving in a practical way and has provided a plan which makes it easy for people to save in small sums and to make their small savings increase until a fair competence is acquired. The manner in which this can be done is told in a booklet on saving issued by the United States Government Savings System. Not only are the lessons of thrift told in clear and concise language, but the facts about treasury savings certificates the gilt-edged government savings security, are given in such form as any reader can readily understand it. This little booklet is sent free to anyone who will write to the Government Savings System in the treasury department at Washington.

"The Christian" Coming to the Breed.

Goldwyn's super-feature, "The Christian," adapted from Sir Hall Cain's most famous novel, directed by Maurice Tourneur, is coming to the Breed theatre on Sunday for five days. This photoplay is a credit to everyone concerned in its production; it takes rank among the really big films of the year. Tourneur was selected by Goldwyn production executive to make the film because of his fine record of achievement in adapting famous novels to the screen. He has done a finished and inspiring job.

Director and principals were sent to England to make exteriors in London, at Cambridge, at the Derby at Epsom Downs and on the Isle of Man where the big thrilling climaxes of the story take place. The author gave assistance to the director in obtaining the correct atmosphere and in getting the consent of the London officials to photograph the big mob scene in Trafalgar square—the first time such permission had ever been granted.

The story of "The Christian" is well known to readers and playgoers—it concerns the efforts of one John Storm, to become a Christian Socialist, to live as Christ would live, and his struggle to free himself from his love for Clary Quayle. He meets the usual end that comes to all reformers and prophets—is mobbed to death.

The cast is a notable one: Richard Dix plays the lead and opposite him is Mae Busch. These two players were selected by a process of elimination from a list which included a score or more of the best known film players of the day. Other players are Phyllis Haver, Gareth Hughes, Mahlon Hamilton, Joseph Dowling, Claude Gillingwater, Cyril Chadwick, Beryl Mercer, Harry Northrup, Robert Bolder, Millo Davenport, Alice Hesse and Allegan Pringle. Cedric Gibbons, Goldwyn art director, has outdone himself in some of the sets for the film and the photography is super-excellent. The story is a thrilling, emotional drama, realistically acted.

Aaron Gordon Buys Fine New Residence.

Coit & Sholes have sold for Henry L. Peterson his new bungalow, No. 75 Sachem street to Aaron Gordon of the Max Gordon & Sons Corporation, the property being deeded to Rose Gordon, the wife of the purchaser, to whom Mr. Gordon presents it. This recently constructed bungalow has been the subject of much favorable comment. The plans were drawn by a Boston architect considered an authority on houses of this type and the spacious interior is planned and arranged in a most distinctive and pleasing manner and contains every latest improvement for the convenience and comfort of its occupants. There is a large lot, and a garage that conforms with the dwelling in architecture. The new owner will enlarge the garage to provide space for three motor cars. Mr. Gordon is to be congratulated upon securing one of the most attractive modern residences in Norwich.

Broadway Theatre.

A real all star B. F. Keith vaudeville bill was presented at the Broadway theatre yesterday and will continue today and Saturday.

Ruby Children and Field in "A Comedy Novelty," was a sure hit.

Bobby Carbone in fourth spot offered "An Oddity in Laughter and Song." This one had some real comedy.

Closing the bill was Dashington's Dogs and Cats, working in perfect harmony. It is a treat for the children, so bring them along.

Mary Miles Minter's latest Paramount star picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," was shown for the first time at the Broadway theatre last night and was warmly received by a capacity audience.

Miss Minter has the role of a sweet, wholesome girl of the Kentucky mountains. The story deals with a merciless mountain feud, the invasion of the law into the hearts of the simple folk of that district and the finish of a bitter feud.

The picture is one of romance, thrills, hate and love. In the ragged clothes of a mountain miss the star appears to decided advantage.

Antonio Moreno and Ernest Torrence play opposite the star. Other members of the cast include Edwin Brady, Frances Warner, J. S. Stembridge and Cullen Tate. The direction by Charles Maigne was excellent.

"The Flirt" is One of the Year's Finest Screen Productions at the Strand.

There is a new photoplay at the Strand theatre this week that will appeal to every one. It is a film dramatization of Booth Tarkington's famous story, "The Flirt," with which thousands are familiar, as the book was one of the best sellers of its period. This picture is especially recommended for:

Girls like Cora who think that:

It doesn't hurt to flirt if you don't flirt to hurt.

Fathers like John Madison, who are:

Headed for the poorhouse with the family in high gear.

"The Flirt" was filmed at Universal City under the direction of Hobart Henley. It is offered by Carl Laemmle as the year's most appealing blend of laughter and tears, and lives up to all its advance notices.

Then, too, there was Laura, the sister; Jim, the older brother; Hedrick, the little pest of a kid brother; Sam, the brother-in-law who ceased being a plumber when Cora thought up the title, "Sanitary Engineer," and as many suitors as Cora could keep out of fist-fights on the veranda.

It boasts a real all-star cast, including Eileen Percy as the Flirting Cora, Helen Jerome Eddy as the elder sister, George Nichols as the father, Lydia Knott as the mother, Buddy Messenger, the wonder-boy of the screen as the pesky kid brother, and Neil Craig, Tom Kennedy, Harold Goodwin, Lloyd Whitlock, Bert Roach, Edward Hearn, Dorothea Wolbert and William Welsh in other roles.

A Cameo comedy pleased as well as a News.

Breed Theatre.

High upon the balcony she stood, a grim spectre outlined by the searchlight against the flaming, smoking walls! Down in the teeming street, a riot of panic and disorder, stood the father, struck to the heart by terror as he saw the smoke engulf his daughter and blot her completely from view. Then the thrilling rescue!

That, briefly, is but one of the terrific action situations in the great firemen's melodrama, "The Third Alarm," which is now showing at the Breed theatre.

"The Third Alarm" is a companion picture to "In the Name of the Law," a police drama of unusual proportions which is still entertaining millions of theatregoers throughout the world. It is built on the same huge lines but with far more thrilling action than was developed in the production which immortalized the American policeman.

Emory Johnson produced both productions, impelled by his long and fervent regard for policemen and firemen, to whom he thought, the public owed a great debt of gratitude which it had long neglected to pay.

While "The Third Alarm" has been invested with truly magnificent love interest and stupendous dramatic thrills, it also shows what hazards the fireman confronts, how he struggles manfully to support his family, how he goes to his duty, no matter how great the danger, and how, in the end, the public is all too likely to forget what a fine and noble work the fire-fighter has achieved. At no time, does Mr. Johnson become preachy. "The Third Alarm" is first of all entertainment, but in the development of his homely theme, Mr. Johnson has gone far beyond the mere individuals with whom he has told his story and shows the noble and manifold instincts which actuate the average fireman in the pursuit of his duty.

In the cast are such well known players as Ralph Lewis, in the role of the veteran fire-fighter; Johnnie Walker, Ella Hall, Richard Morris, and others. F. O. B. is distributing the production.

Ruth Roland in the last chapter of "The Timber Queen" and the Pathe News make up the remander of the bill.

Forty per cent. of the members of the American Legion are in towns of under 2,500 inhabitants.

TEN TEAMS MAKE PRELIMIMARY PLANS FOR NORWICH TWILIGHT LEAGUE

With ten teams represented by about 100 red hot baseball enthusiasts the Norwich Twilight League got its start Thursday evening at a preliminary meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Only preliminary plans were discussed and the real organization of the league, rules and regulations governing the games and players, were left in the hands of a committee.

Earl Mathewson was chosen chairman of the meeting and M. E. Standish secretary. The first matter taken up was the election of officers and after considerable discussion it was voted to leave the matter in the hands of the committee that was appointed, one member from each club in the league. The committee is George Madden, Nuggets; Earl Mathewson, Professional Men; Saul Budnick, Harddigs; S. Kramer, East Ends; Harold Stone, Duwells; George Farrell, Swanee Colts; Harry Welsner, Norwich A. A.; J. R. Brown, Atlantic Carton Team; A. Spencer, Spencer's Stars; D. Shea, Jail Hill A. C. This committee was empowered to appoint a finance committee, a schedule committee and a committee to select the umpires.

Several names were proposed at the meeting to be considered for the various offices in the league and these will be taken into consideration by the committee at a meeting to be held on Monday evening.

A general meeting of the league will be held on next Tuesday evening at the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

It was also suggested at the meeting to secure some one from New London who is familiar with the details of the New London Twilight League to be present at the meeting on Monday evening and tell how the league is being conducted in that city. The New London league was a success last season and was a source of much pleasure to the New London people.

BILL BERGEN TO BRING FAST TEAM HERE SUNDAY

Bill Bergen who brings the Worcester All Stars here on Sunday to clash with the Norwich Baseball club has a very fast team, according to the line-up that he has forwarded to Manager O'Leary. As has been announced before, Hughie Canavan is to do the pitching and Bill himself will do the backstop work.

The players that Bergen will bring with him are all first class ball players, many of them having played here before with the Alhambra Council team last season. There will be Drumsay, formerly of the Baltimore Orioles, Keegan, formerly with Worcester and Springfield; Carr, formerly with Albany; Tony Comerford of Boston College, Riopel of Holy Cross and Kelleher, who had a tryout with Worcester. He also has Burke, an ex-Boston Brave man and still a fast player. This aggregation looks as though it would give O'Leary's team a pleasant afternoon and busy.

The diamond at the Fairgrounds is in the best condition that it has been since ball playing was started there. Manager O'Leary has raised the infield around second and first bases about eight inches, filling in with loam and clay that has packed down hard. The field is fast and snappy playing may be expected.

TILDEN DISPLAYS BRILLIANT FORM AGAINST JOHNSTON

Philadelphia, May 3.—William T. Tilden, 2d., national tennis champion, in the first real test since he had part of his finger amputated, today defeated William M. Johnston, of San Francisco, his old rival in many tournaments, in an exhibition match at the Germantown Academy. The scores were 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

After the singles match, Tilden, paired with Wallace F. Johnson, Philadelphia, defeated Johnston and R. N. Williams, Philadelphia, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Tilden and Johnston appeared to be in as fine form as on the several historical occasions when they were competing for the title. The loss of a portion of his middle finger did not worry Tilden, except on his cannon ball service which he used at times in the first and second sets.

RAY WINS BIG PURSE IN ENGLISH TOURNAMENT

St. Anne's, Eng., May 3.—(By the A. P.)—Edward Ray, noted British professional golfer, won the 1,000 pounds sterling tournament play in which was completed on the links here today. Ray's winning aggregate for the 72 holes in the two-day's play was 288. A field of 100 leading professionals competed.

L. Holland of Northampton and Abe Mitchell tied for second with 289, and George Duncan was third with 290. James Ockenden finished ninth with 295 and James Braid was 15th with 300.

It was an exceptionally close finish, only two strokes dividing the first four players, three of whom are England's greatest hopes.

OUIMET AND DR. WILLING ARE TIED FOR ST. GEORGE CHALLENGE CUP

Sandwich, England, May 3.—(By the A. P.)—The handle of England's finest golf cup were gripped tonight by the hands of two Americans—Francis Ouimet of Boston and Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, Oregon—who tomorrow will play an 18-hole match to decide which of them is to have the honor of being the winner of the trophy and taking back to the United States with him a reproduction of it.

The trophy is the Royal St. George's champion grand challenge cup, and either Ouimet or Willing today obtained title to it by tying with low scores of 153 for the 36 holes play which was begun yesterday morning and finished this afternoon. They defeated a field of 120 golfers, among them most of England's best amateurs and 10 of America's strongest players. Today was the first time since the gold cup was put up as a trophy in 1884 that it fell into foreign hands.

Ranking next to Ouimet and Willing in the two days of medal play was Robert A. Gardner of Chicago, former United States champion and captain of the American expeditionary golf force, with a score of 154. Behind the Americans were all the English players who tried to keep the cup at home and failed, among them six previous winners of the cup, and others with names of not in golf, such as Roger Wethered, Cyril Tolley, E. W. E. Holderness and W. B. Torrence.

Gardner was the only one of the players who got within three strokes of the two leading Yankee players. The top notchers behind Gardner, six English and Scotch players, were clustered in a tie for fourth place with score of 157. They were Bernard Drawin; Dr. H. D. Gillies, Harry Braid, who is a son of the famous professional, James Braid; Roger Wethered; Willis Mackenzie, who went to the United States last year with the English team, and Noel Layton, who played with the English against Scotland last year.

Willing could have won the cup outright on the home stretch by sinking an eight-foot putt, but the ball stopped 12 inches short. Half an hour later Gardner had a chance to tie with his two colleagues by dropping a 6-footer into the home hole. But he also missed him chance. The misfortunes of these two men, however, were minor when compared with those which befell the natives, Michael Scott, Wethered and Torrence, all three of whom came in after Ouimet and Willing had finished and each of whom had a chance when they turned homeward on the tenth tee to beat out the Americans. But the game of each of them collapsed on the last long holes where good golf would have meant victory for England, and their only fair quality of golf made defeat inevitable. What each did was to play golf that also might be called bad.

Ouimet did what was expected of him in being at the top of the field; but Willing's achievement seems to have been somewhat of a surprise, even those he had led in the first round with 74. Today he was able to hook and slice drives and yet come home with a good enough card to get his fingers on the rim of the cup. Once more today he used his putter like a magician.

Ouimet shot the white ball around the course with soundness and consistency, only occasionally lightened by a stroke of brilliance. Like Gardner, he failed by inches on several holes to sink very long putts; but unlike Gardner he never needed three putts to get down. This fate befell Gardner both on the tenth and eleventh holes, and it was he himself that thought this put him out of a tie or victory. Three times Ouimet got his first putt in the cup. He played straight down the line on nearly every hole and his approaches were things of beauty.

George V. Rotan of Houston, Texas, with 79-80—159, finished among the ten ten, tied with Scott and Torrence, the last hopes of the home players. Jess Sweetser, the American champion, simply could not get going. When his drives were good his approaches slipped over the green; when his approaches were excellent, they almost invariably were followed by wicked putts that refused to go up to the hole, or, if they did go up, balked at going in. After taking out today on top of his score of 81 Wednesday, and going from bad to worse on the way home, Sweetser gave up the battle at the 17th hole.

Tolley quit on the 12th. The other American aside from Ouimet, Willing and Gardner, all new to the course, had few thrills in their cards. F. J. Wright, Jr., Los Angeles; S. Davidson Herron, Chicago, and John F. Neville, San Francisco, each had scores of 163, and Maxwell R. Marston, Philadelphia, brought in a 164 and H. R. Johnston, St. Paul a 173. Holderness, the English champion had a 161.

The weather was glorious for golf. The sun quickly dissipated the clouds that spilled a shower at breakfast time, and by noon the sun was so warm that it seemed like summertime.

WHO IS THE BEST MARBLE SHOOTER IN NORWICH?

New York, Philadelphia, Washington and other large cities have found their marble champions, and now comes the announcement that Norwich is in search of its champion "shooter." Physical Director Fritz of the Y. M. C. A. is announcing a marble tournament to be held on the courts in back of the Y. M. C. A. building, Saturday, May 26th.

In addition to having the honor of being the first "champ" the winner will be awarded a medal, as will the second and third high scorers of the tournament. Ribbon awards will be given the next ten highest point getters.

Any boy in the city will be eligible to enter the contest, without cost, as the tournament is a part of the Y program to help interest a larger number of boys in wholesome sports and recreation. Printed entry blanks and further information may be had by calling at the Y. M. C. A. In charge of the tournament is a committee consisting of John M. Swabn, Weston Pullen, Myles Standish and E. J. Fritz.

NAVY MAY YET ROW IN POUGHKEEPSIE REGATTA

New York, May 3.—The United States Naval Academy may yet withdraw its recent declaration that its crew would not be permitted to compete in the 1923 Poughkeepsie regatta, is the belief of college rowing circles here.

In view of the navy's impressive victories over Pennsylvania and M. I. T. so far this season and the prospect that the middies are slated for another season of triumphs the stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association were reported today to have renewed their invitation for Annapolis to race on the Hudson. The navy's answer may come after the race on Lake Carnegie Saturday, when the middies row against Princeton and Harvard.

DEMPSEY-GIBBONS ARTICLES TO BE SIGNED TODAY

Chicago, May 3.—Failure to agree on a few minor details after the question of a referee had been practically settled, prevented the signing of articles tonight closing a 15-round heavyweight championship match between Jack Dempsey, the titleholder, and Tom Gibbons, the St Paul challenger, at Shelby, Mont., July 4.

Jack Kearns, manager of the champion, and Mike Collins, match maker for the promoters, said the articles would be signed tomorrow. The reason for the delay in signing was because Kearns wanted the certified check for $110,000 turned into cash at once.

Jimmy Daugherty, veteran referee of Philadelphia, probably will be selected tomorrow as the third man in the ring. Daugherty was Kearns only choice. Eddie Kane, manager of Gibbons, objected, claiming Daugherty was too friendly to both Kearns and Dempsey, but after several hours of discussion virtually agreed to the Philadelphia.

HARVARD TO HOLD OPEN HANDICAP TRACK MEET

Cambridge, Mass., May 1.—The Harvard athletic committee decided tonight to hold an open handicap track meet in the stadium here on June 9. Several star trackmen from other cities, including Joie Ray, will be asked to compete. The committee also decided tonight not to permit the second varsity crew to compete against the Princeton second shell next Saturday at Annapolis.

Joie Ray has asked the track advisory committee of Harvard for an opportunity to break the world's record for the mile handicap set in 1906 by Norman S. Taber. Taber set the record at 4 minutes 12 3-5 seconds.

The reasons which the athletic committee assigned refusing the second crew permission to row in the south which that three races have already been scheduled for the local second crew men including the American regatta.

DRAWINGS MADE FOR HOUSATONIC REGATTA

Derby, May 3.—Drawings for positions for the varsity and junior varsity races, which are to take place on the Housatonic river Saturday afternoon between crews from Columbia, Pennsylvania and Yale took place today.

For the varsity race Columbia drew lane number one, which is nearest the shelton shore, Pennsylvania number 2, and Yale number 3.

The six crews worked out on the the river this afternoon each of them covering the two mile course in fast time. No official time was given out.

The crews will row on the river again tomorrow morning and afternoon.

KILBANE IS TO FIGHT DUNDEE AFTER CRIQUI BOUT

Cleveland, Ohio, May 3.—Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane will meet Johnny Dundee within 90 days after his bout with Eugene Criqui, which is scheduled to be held in New York June 2, provided he defeats the French challenger, Tom O'Rourke, promoter of the Kilbane-Criqui match, announced here today.

O'Rourke said that Kilbane had signed an agreement calling for a bout with Dundee and that the champion would post a forfeit of $5,000 for the New York state athletic commission as evidence of good faith.

PADDOCK WINS HIS EVENTS IN PARIS MEET

Paris, May 3 (By the A. P.)—Charles Paddock participated in the opening events today of the first international students' athletic meet despite the ukase of the American Amateur Athletic Union forbidding him to compete abroad this season.

He easily won the trial heats in the 100 and 200-meter dashes, the only events in which he is entered negotiating the 100 meters in eleven seconds flat. He also equalled the world's record of 16 seconds in the 150-meter dash.

Additional preliminaries will be held tomorrow, the semi-finals on Saturday, and the finals on Sunday.

COLLEGIATE ASSOCIATION NOT TO BAN PADDOCK

New York, May 3.—(By the A. P.)—While Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, was announcing tonight that Charles Paddock, California sprinting star, had automatically disqualified himself as an amateur within the jurisdiction of the A. A. U., by participating today in an international students' track meet at Paris, Brigadier General Palmer E. Pierce of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, issued a statement declaring the N. C. A. A. had sanctioned Paddock's entry and could see no ground for objection to his action.

WORCESTER TAKES EASY GAME FROM HARTFORD

Hartford, Conn., May 3.—Hartford lost to Worcester here this afternoon, 8 to 2, the "Coal Heavers" batting Smuckler and Grampp hard at opportune times. It was the local team's first defeat on its home field. Score by innings:

ALBANY HAS EASY TIME BEATING BRIDGEPORT

Albany, N. Y., May 3.—Albany had no trouble defeating Bridgeport today. The score was 8 to 3. The victory gave Albany the series. Emmer's home run with one on was a feature. Edmondson, Albany pitcher, was hit freely but was strong in the pinches. Rosenthal was ordered from the field for protesting a called strike. Score:

ARBOR DAY.

Are you going to enter into the spirit of Arbor and Bird day, even though you don't actually engage in tree planting, or put out houses for the birds?

Many who are in sympathy with the efforts that are being made for a better utilization of land through reforestation work have for some little time been setting out trees and their activity will be continued over a considerable period yet. It is not to be expected that the setting out of trees and shrubs can all be crowded into one day. There is in fact no particular merit in one day at this season over another. The aim is to bring about a general interest in such a movement and to especially implant the idea in the minds of the children.

Well does Governor Templeton say in his proclamation, setting forth today as Arbor and Bird day, that "Every community, whether rural or urban, is necessarily interested in agriculture. In many countries, food and fuel, once plentiful, have become rarities. It is of the utmost importance that Connecticut be self-sustaining in these respects. Whatever induces successful agriculture, therefore, is of the greatest interest to the people of the state."

There seems little prospect that this state will be self sustaining in regard to food or fuel, but it is patent that it can become more nearly self sustaining than it is in regard to food and other necessities and that through agriculture and forestry. The need is to make the most of our opportunities. Much good can therefore come from teaching the school children the necessity of protecting the fruit and forest trees, the setting out of trees for shade and for lumber, the guarding of woodland against fires, the value of replacing what has been removed when possible and at the same time protecting the birds, their nests, their eggs and their young.

Arbor day has been observed for many years and without question it has accomplished good results in stimulating an interest and a knowledge concerning trees and birds, together with the benefits and pleasure derived from them.

LESS CONSUMPTION, LOWER PRICE.

One chain of stores has advertised to the effect that through the efforts of the housewives it has been possible to cut the price of sugar a half cent a pound and urges them to keep up their good work.

The idea of curbing the consumption of sugar is being generally endorsed. It is recognized that there is a powerful remedy in the hands of the consumers and that no one is entitled to its benefits more than they are. Sugar consumption has been increasing. Individuals have been eating more in one way or another. There might be some difficulty in getting along without any sugar for those who are used to it, but the Esquimaux who have not felt the effects of civilization do. They knew nothing of salt or sugar until the white men taught them, and even then they at first preferred salt to sugar.

It is, however, not a question of stopping all sugar consumption. That could not be expected, and is certainly not needed. Refiners state that the supply is ample, so that with a reduction in the amount of sugar that is being used by individuals it is bound to have an influence upon the price that will be demanded for it. The manner in which it has been undertaken in the large cities and the support which such a plan has received from various sources make it evident that the idea is bound to spread. Not only will it counteract the efforts of those who are disposed to hoard but it will permit that piling up of the supply in such a manner as to have the desired effect upon price.

When unjustified conditions are foisted upon the public it calls for just such an effective remedy as the public in this instance is able to put into operation.

WASHINGTON LIQUOR.

Washington is particularly concerned with the statement of a chemist of that city to the effect that he has not found a sample of genuine Scotch or rye whiskey, or gin in the last six months, and that the only real stuff obtainable is obtained on prescriptions from the drugstores.

Presumably his efforts have been devoted to testing the quality of a considerable number of samples of wet goods that have been seized, or that have somehow come into the possession of the authorities, but the statement gives some idea of the amount of hooch that is being circulated and being drunk in place of real liquor.

There is no reason to believe that the situation is any different in Washington than it is in other cities. Evidence that strong liquor is obtainable is not lacking. As to the quality tastes might differ, but home distilled liquor is available and is being consumed regardless of what the character might be as displayed by a chemical test.

Judging by the Washington chemist's statement it doesn't appear that he has encountered any of the much talked about liquor that is obtained from the rum fleet, except that the rum fleet is dispensing hooch instead of the real thing. The impression would be gained that Washington drinkers are being served by the bootleggers who are peddling their own wares, or the product of stills in that vicinity. It can be imagined that those who possess the real Scotch and rye whiskey and the real gin are taking excellent care to see that it does not get into the hands of the authorities or the chemist. They may see no advantage in devoting it to such use and are satisfied with their own judgment.

The absence of the real stuff only emphasizes the need of greater efforts in the part of those engaged in the work of enforcing the dry law, for bad as the real stuff is that which is taking its place must be worse in different degrees.

SWIMMING INSTRUCTIONS.

For several years it has been a valuable service that has been rendered by the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. in teaching boys of this city how to swim. For this purpose the association has hitherto been restricted to the use of the lake in Mohegan park. With its new swimming tank it is not necessary to wait for the good old summer time before instituting this highly important work.

Throwing its swimming tank open to the boys of the city, between the ages of 11 and 18, for free use and instruction in swimming reflects both the desire to render a community service and a willingness to utilize its facilities in a most worthy cause.

Because a boy knows how to swim does not guarantee that he will not be drowned, but it is nevertheless one of the important protective measures that deserves to be heartily endorsed. There is no telling when such knowledge is going to be needed for the saving of self or others. It is vital that all should know how to take care of themselves in the water as well as on land. Emergencies come without warning, and the opportunity to prepare against them is something which cannot be wisely neglected.

Swimming is one of the best exercises. Knowing how to swim doesn't call for recklessness in the water any more than on terra firma, but it makes it possible for the individual to care for himself just that much better and is a precaution that is dictated by good judgment.

Even some parents believe that the way for a boy to learn to swim is to jump overboard. Most people prefer that a knowledge of swimming should be acquired under the guidance of a competent instructor.

FLOOD WATERS.

Flood conditions at the present time are directing much attention to the situation which has prevailed in the state of Maine for a considerable time and which was the cause of serious conflict between the legislature and the governors this year.

Maine is witnessing vast quantities of water going to waste and causing destruction. Probably the most enthusiastic of the advocates would not maintain that it would be possible to store all that water in reservoirs, but they have been aware that a large volume of water could be ponded from the spring thaws and rains and distributed throughout the season of the year when the water may be low and the rains infrequent.

Efforts to have the legislature authorize steps for the construction of such reservoirs were successful before the legislature. They called forth strong denunciation from the governor and a vetoing of the measure. No construction could have been undertaken in time to have held back any of the flood that is being experienced, but it would have been possible to make a start for the completion of the work before another spring repeats similar conditions.

The water that goes to waste under normal conditions is large enough from one end of the year to the other. There are even dry seasons when it would be desirable to have large reservoirs to draw upon to protect the water privileges along the streams but even worse than the wastage is the refusal to take steps to conserve the rainfall. Think what the flood waters, gradually released, would mean during a drought.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Arbor and Bird day. Make the most of it.

Rum handlers should now specialize in loading and unloading at sea.

The man on the corner says: Some people never realized there was so much daylight.

When France sends more troops to Syria it looks as if it had begun to lose faith in Kemal Pasha.

The number looking for dandelions is only exceeded by those who are looking for dandelion blossoms.

The supreme court decision is such as to cause the rum fleet to anticipate even greater possibilities.

Will the court decision be of any assistance to the shipping board in its effort to get out of business?

If there was a price fixed on the extra hour of daylight the demand would probably exceed the supply.

The sugar speculators ought to have known better than to have drove the housewives onto the warpath.

From conditions along the Connecticut and some other rivers no one would gain the idea that it had been a dry April.

When Dr. Mitchell begins his job of studying the Connecticut river shad it is to be hoped he isn't required to count the bones.

The time is propitious now for setting up a filling station somewhere outside the three-mile line. It would not be as lonesome a post as being on a lightship.

A big southern berry crop is reported, but there's a chance for several frosts, a couple of blights and a pest or two before they are thrown on the market or that old fashioned price of three boxes for a quarter.

SO CUTE

"It's just too bad that the baby is asleep in his carriage!" sighed the caller, "I should love to have you see him he's so cute."

"I can go out when you do and look at him," said Mrs. Simmons with interest. "He's quite a big boy now, I suppose."

"Oh, yes, indeed!" replied the caller. "He walks and talks and does the cutest things you ever heard of. And brilliant! He does many things that no other child of his age would dream of doing! You have no idea of his great originality. I took him in the cars the other day. There were a number of very odd persons on the car, most peculiar creatures, and there was one in particular who wore a terrible hat. You know, colors get on your nerves, they really do, and that woman had on a hat with red, green and yellow plumes of the most terrible shades.

"I was looking towards the back of the street car when all of a sudden I heard a scream and looking around to see what had happened. Fancy! That child had actually grabbed that woman's hat and tossed it out of the window! I don't think there is another of his age in the whole city who would have been so very quick and so decided in showing that he did not like a thing. It was such an ugly hat!"

"It may have been the best one she had," suggested Mrs. Simmons. "Anyhow, she thought it was worth something, I presume."

"Apparently," said the caller with indignation. "That crazy woman looked out the window in time to see an automobile run over her hat and then she insisted that I pay for it. It was'ntmy fault that the automobile was there and happened to hit the hat, was it? She didn't look at it that way, and the baby began to cry so hard that I had to give up the argument and pay whatever she asked which bought that hat in Paris, just imagine! Why, it was five years old if it was a day! My poor baby was almost sick with all the noise and loud talking. Noise is so hard on a child, you know."

"Oh, yes, indeed!" said Mrs. Simmons sympathetically. "Noise is hard on children and sometimes older persons."

"Older persons can stand things," said the caller severely. "But the little ones should be protected. The only way to get them accustomed to the noises they must suffer is to let them make noise themselves. There are very few persons who appreciate that fact, so I was not surprised to see that a man on the train from our summer home was entirely ignorant of it. I had bought one of these clever police rattles for the baby to play with on the train and he was as good as gold, shaking it all the time and shouting with fun. It gave me a little while to rest and the first thing I knew I fell asleep.

"I was wakened by a cry from the baby and motherlike, I started right up. Somebody in that car had taken that rattle away from my boy and I was not able to find out who did it, but I strongly suspected the man across the aisle. When he passed me I gave his coat a poke to see if the rattle were in his pocket, but he was too clever and had stuck it somewhere else."

"Of course, there are persons who do not care for children," said Mrs. Simmons. "It is hard to understand."

"They must be very crabbed," said the caller. "And the very worst was the man in the station when we came in yesterday from spending the week with my mother. My husband was to meet me at the station but he was delayed an hour by some business and I had to wait there for him. Usually I have something with me to amuse the baby with, but I had not expected to have to wait, and so I had brought nothing at all.

"He crawled along the polished seat of the waiting room for a long time, until a guard came up and told me to make him get down, when he began to run around the floor. There were three great bags close by and the baby was playing with the handles and locks in the cutest way, so I took a little cat nap. When I woke up my husband was in front of me arguing with the maddest man I ever saw. And what do you think he was cross about?

"Nothing at all, except that my little boy had pulled some old papers off his bags! My husband offered to pay him for them and that crazy man had the courage to say that money could not buy them, they were foreign tags he had gathered from all parts of the world! Think of it! He hadn't a single thought of how cute the baby was, nor how patient to pull those tag things off when they were glued so tight!"—Exchange.

Pani Grabowska, Wife of Stanislaus II of Poland.

Pani Grabowska, wife of the last king of Poland, was, contrary to tradition, her husband's truest sweetheart. Before his marriage, Stanislaus, a gay young man, had had many love affairs, but his wife always occupied the stellar place in his affections. She was his friend as well as his sweetheart, a dual role to which many wives are inadequate.

When the king first met and fell in love with Mme. Grabowska, her husband was still alive. However, a friendship rapidly developed between the two, and when M. Grabowska died, Stanislaus pressed his suit. Soon they were married.

The queen was a beautiful woman with a mass of lovely blonde hair and large, expressive eyes. Her skin was so fair as to be exceptional among the Poles. Her love for Stanislaus was deep and unselfish. Never did she take advantage of her position to gain wealth for herself or favors for her friends. She did not enter into any court intrigue, but was content simply with her husband's love. She remained loyal when he was in unfortunate circumstances, and was constant through all the vicissitudes of his unhappy career. She was intelligent and helpful and always able to advise him when he needed her. Life for Stanislaus was not an easy problem, but it was lightened not a little by the beauty and constancy of his wife.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

West Indies Possessions of British and French.

Keen interest recently evinced by Great Britain and France in their West Indies possessions, and a proposal in parliament that the former power consolidate her islands in a single dominion, recall th day of smugglers, corsairs, privateers and romantic adventure.

"This motley crew was followed by the buccaneers in the seventeenth century and by ordinary pirates in the eighteenth," writes Nell Ray Clarke in a communication to the National Geographic society.

"The buccaneer was a picturesque fellow. His motto usually was, 'A short life and a merry one.' He seldom recognized allegiance to any country or crown, nor did family ties mean anything to him. He clothed himself in gorgeous finery when his purse was full, weighting down his ears with rings, his arms with bracelets, and his neck with chains, only to sell his jewelry and wear his apparel in tatters when his purse was lean, but always retaining in the days of his adversity his gorgeous sash, as a sort of red badge of courage, and his villainous knife.

"He was to be found wandering the streets of the semi-medieval Spanish towns of the new world, elbowing his way among swaggering soldiers, traders, negroes, Indians, fair ladies, and assassins.

"There was practically no colony in the Island-dotted Caribbean which had any scruples against allowing the buccaneers to build, fit out, or repair their vessels in its harbors. Tortuga, off the northern coast of Haiti, and Jamaica were veritable pirate strongholds, while Martinique, Curacao, St. Kitts, and Barbados befriended them and encouraged their trade.

"The nursery of all the English and French colonies in the West Indies was St. Christopher, or St. Kitts, as it is now so often called, one of the Leeward Islands, half way between Porto Rico and Dominica. It was discovered by Columbus on his second voyage to America and called by him after the saint whose name the great discoverer himself bore.

"Off the southeastern tip of St. Kitts lies Nevis, where Alexander Hamilton was born and where Horatio Nelson was married, and to the northwest of it lies the Dutch-owned St. Eustatius and quaint little Saba. The latter, barely five miles in diameter, looks from the sea as if it were uninhabited; but tucked away inside the cone of its single volcanic mountain a seafaring people have built their toy town with white-walled and red-roofed houses, which with a characteristic Dutch mental quirk, they have named 'Bottom.'

"Life was turbulent in St. Thomas in the days when Edward Teach drove his lean pinnaces, filled with half naked cut-throats—black, white and yellow—into the pretty harbor at Charlotte Amalie (now officially known as St. Thomas), built his castle on one of its hills, and scoured the seas for the slow-moving carved and gilded Spanish galleons, which were hauling the wealth of the Indies to the mother country. This adventurer even dared anchor his pirate craft as far north as Charleston, South Carolina, his colleague, while he was still sentimental enough to marry, as his fourteenth wife, a charming creature of sixteen.

"One of the chief points of interest in the picturesque little town of Charlotte Amalie, which has one of the best harbors to be found in Caribbean waters, is the castle of this redoubtable king of his kind, known in the sphere of his influence as Blackbeard.

"Here, so the story goes, the mighty brigand fortified the excellent vantage point from which to spy out any vessel that ventured near his haven. On the opposite hill there is another fortress, which is called Bluebeard's, but the history of this pirate is sunk in oblivion.

"Blackbeard's existence was, however, a vivid reality. He won his name because of a heavy black beard, about which he was exceedingly vain. It is said of him that he twisted this mane into small tails and tied them with ribbon and fastened lighted tapers under his hat to illumine his repulsive features and wild eyes, thus striking terror to the hearts of his victims.

"Between St. Thomas and St. John, hedged about by a chain of small islands that guard it from heavy seas and high winds, lies an excellent harbor, which must have proved a satisfactory refuge for many of the old renegrades. For centuries it was indefinitely dubbed The Sound; but a few months ago the United States Geographic board, upon the recommendation of the United States Coast and Geodetic survey, with the concurrence of the navy department, declared that it should henceforth be called Pillsbury sound, in honor of Rear Admiral John E. Pillsbury, late president of the National Geographic society, to whose scientific research relating to the laws that govern the movements of the gulf stream it is modest tribute.

"Not all the Virgin Islands are named after the saints. There is Tortola, the Isle of the Turtle Dove, and Gorda, the 'Fat Virgin,' and Anegada, the Drowned Island, because it contains a vast lagoon known as Flamingo Pond, one of the few places where this bird of such gorgeous plumage is to be found south of the Bahamas.

"Perhaps no one has ever left his mark so indelibly upon any place as did the French pirate, known as Peter the Great, upon Tortuga. The exploit which placed Peter in the 'Who's Who' of piracy was his encounter with the vice-admiral of the Spanish fleet. The engagement occurred while the latter was sailing majestically through the Bahama channel. Peter overhauled the Spaniard, clambered with his men over her sides, scuttled his own boat to make him and his horde fight with more devil-may-care recklessness, and mastered the prize.

"Peter then took his gorgeous new vessel home to France, where he lived in respectability for the rest of his days. But the effect of his prosperity on the inhabitants of Tortuga was instantaneous. There was a mad scramble for boats, and they thenceforth became scavengers of the sea."

Avoidable Waste.

In a recent industrial survey it was found that the amount of avoidable waste in American production is 25 per cent. In other words, one-fourth of all the time, money and energy put into the gigantic hopper of the composite American factory is wasted unnecessarily.

This seems an incredible sacrifice of values—an apparently unbelievable lack of efficiency and a heavy burden placed on the consumer.

The survey, completed under the supervision of the fabricated production department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, points out that lack of standardization or excess of variety are responsible for a large part of this industrial waste.

This is due to the whims and fancies of the buying public and the endeavor by the manufacturers and merchants to cater to the insatiable demand for something new or something different.

Thus we have a situation in which there is an industrial loss running far into the millions of dollars yearly, which to a great extent may be attributed to mere caprice and fancy.

American manufacturing genius has manifested itself to best advantage in mass production and it should have the continued benefit of standardized output.

It would seem that the education of the public to be less exacting in the matter of varieties and less capricious in continually demanding something new or different, might be the means of saving a very large industrial waste.

As is the case in the solution of all great economic problems, there must be first of all the fundamental of correct public understanding.

In seeking methods of eliminating the large industrial waste in this country the manufacturers could accomplish much by using every possible means to educate the public to less extravagant practices.

Thrift, to a great degree, is a matter of education; and in this field the manufacturers, seeking to curtail production costs have opportunity for the employment of great energy and the accomplishment of much good.—American Thrift Society.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Where to Send Her a Question

Mary is a contrary daughter, though contrary hardly expresses it. It is told of her that when company called the other day her mother wished her to be still, and she made lots of noise, and then she wished her to speak and she wouldn't say a word. But when the mother asked not to be bothered, the child asked to sit on her lap.

It was always thus—the little girl doing exactly the thing her mother wished her not to do—until the six year old brother made this somewhat innocent remark:

An Auto Misaid.

The car had been out only a few days when it was found that it needed a new leaf in the spring. It was taken to the garage to have the work done and the directions were to have the car left in the usual parking place so that it would be ready to go home in.

The owner gave little thought to it after that. Coming out of his office just as a street car was approaching he made his customary winter rush for it, just managed to get aboard and hung onto a strap part of the way home.

After reaching home and sitting with the other members of the family for a half hour after dinner he suddenly remembered about the auto. Instead of going down town again he called the garage and had it taken from the parking place and put under cover for the night.

Yes, He Was First Class.

One morning between 6 and 7 o'clock a second-class passenger climbed over the first class promenade to enjoy a stroll on ship deck. He did some lively walking and some fancy calisthenics. A sailor was scrubbing the deck, and feeling that he should not permit the rules to be broken even at that hour, intercepted the passenger and asked:

"Are you first-class, sir?"

The passenger laid his hands on the sailor's shoulders and replied:

"Thank you, I never felt better in my life."

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS PRESENT FLORAL GREETINGS TO PRESIDENT

Delegates and representatives from eleven of the thirteen Connecticut tents of the National Alliance, Daughters of Veterans, were here Thursday to attend the 41st annual state convention, which opened at the Wauregan house ballroom at 10.30 in the morning.

Welcome to City

The convention was called to order by Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury of this city, state president, and after the singing of America, a welcome to the city was extended by Mayor Milo R. Waters.

Post department commander Orrin M. Price of the G. A. R. expressed the greeting from that organization. Greeting expressed through gifts of flowers were presented to Mrs. Atterbury, the president.

These included a beautiful basket of cut flowers in the national colors presented by Mrs. Jayne E. Seed on behalf of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, a basket of flowers from the Connecticut department W. R. C. presented by past department president Mrs. Anna Clark of New London and a bouquet from the national president, Mrs. Lola D. Elliott of Iowa, who was represented by Mrs. Nellie Orchard of New London, seventh national counsellor.

At the opening of the convention Mrs. Atterbury found upon her table a beautiful bouquet of pink roses from the department secretary Mrs. Lillian E. Brewster of this city, who was unable to be present because of illness in her family.

President's Annual Report

Mrs. Atterbury's annual report showed a very active year in the state, during which two new tents at South Manchester and Willimantic had been instituted and the interest in the organization had been sustained. Mrs. Alice Pulver of Bridgeport, senior vice president and Mrs. Cora Judd of New Haven, junior vice president, also presented annual reports.

Dinner was served at Odd Fellows' Hall by Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps and the afternoon session convened at 2.30.

Afternoon Session

Greetings from a few personal friends were extended to Mrs. Atterbury with a handsome basket of flowers, past department president Mrs. Jessie Myers presented a bouquet from the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, and another bouquet was from department president Mrs. Lillian Babbitt and department secretary Miss Josie P. Warren of the Ladies of the G. A. R. Mrs. Nellie Orchard also received a basket of flowers.

Memorial Service

An impressive memorial service that closed with the singing of Nearer My God to Thee was held for members who have died during the year. It was in charge of Mrs. Mary Yale, department chaplain, white carnations being laid upon the altar. Clara Barton tent of this city has lost two members during the year, its president Mrs. Josephine Hiscox and press correspondent, Mrs. Lillian Jewett.

Letters of regret were read from Department Commander John L. Saxe, W. R. C. Department President Mrs. Bertha Morse, Hartford, Division Commander Charles Stephens of Stratford, Division Commander Norman Buckingham, Sons of Veterans, Department Chaplain Smith and Mrs. Jennie Goddard, president of Sons of Veterans auxiliary.

After nomination of officers for election Friday afternoon, with 76 voting members, the convention adjourned till the business session at 10.30 o'clock Friday morning.

Reception to President.

The evening event of the convention was a reception to the president, Mrs. Atterbury, which was held at 8 o'clock in the ballroom at the hotel with an attendance of about 200. The floral decorations were by Ernst and Mrs. Atterbury carried a beautiful arm bouquet of roses, the gift of Mrs. Otto F. Ernst.

Mrs. Atterbury received with the department officers, Past Department Commander Orrin M. Price of the G. A. R. and Miss Lillian Wolfe, president of Clara Barton tent of this city. Those present were conducted and introduced to the officers by Mrs. Hattie Parsons, marshal, Gladys Newbury, Carolyn M. Howard, Maud Moody, Mrs. Hotchkiss, color bearers, and Lucy Gray McDougall, Ruth Brinkman, Emma White, Grace Stetson and Sarah Botham.

Wedding Anniversary Gifts.

Past Commander Price and Mrs. Price, whose 55th wedding anniversary came Thursday, were delightfully surprised by gifts from the convention, a $10 gold piece for Mrs. Price and a pyrex set for Mrs. Price. They were presented by Mrs. Mary Griswold of Hartford, past department president, with words of affection for "Daddy" and "Mother" Price, to which Mr. Price made suitable response.

Mrs. Genie Evans, chairman of the committee, announced the numbers on the entertainment program that followed, beginning with well rendered selections by a made quartet, Dr. Charles H. Lamb, Robert Gray, Frederic H. Wyant and John E. Vaughn. They sang Mother o' Mine (Burleigh) and Prayer of Thanksgiving (Baker).

Address by Rev. Mr. Ricketts.

Rev. C. H. Ricketts made the address of the evening, speaking upon Some Outstanding Perils to Our Nationalism, and holding the close and admiring attention of his audience as he spoke of un-Americanism, the apparent tendency to disintegration from a homogenous nation, and the outbreaks of lawlessness which are seen in the spirit of defying and disobeying law if it does not accord with personal preferences. He was loudly applauded when he said that every patriotic American should stand by the constitution and that foreigners should be given to understand that they must obey the laws that they find here. It is true religion, he declared, to stand by one's country, and we want ever to keep this the land of the free.

Gift to Mrs. Atterbury.

An interpretive dance, Daisies, was gracefully given by Katherine Adams, with Mrs. Harry Stebbins at the piano, and was followed by tenor solos by Robert Gray. He sang Ninawassa (Metcalf) and My Ideal (Tosti), with Miss Mary Gray as accompanist.

The tragic death of Mrs. Avery E. Park just after she had concluded a patriotic reading on the program caused the other numbers to be given up and the reception came to a close.

The musical part of the program was under the direction of Dr. Charles H. Lamb. The entertainment committee for Clara Barton tent comprised Mrs. Genie Evans, chairman, Mrs. Grace Willey and Mrs. Mary Adams.

TWO CALLS BRING OUT LOCAL FIRE DEPARTMENT

The fire department was called upon twice Thursday, the first call resulting in a false alarm. This call came at 4.34 o'clock when clerks in Grand Sale Remnant Sale store in the Steiner Block smelled smoke. An investigation failed to locate any fire but it was evident that some tenant had been burning papers and a back draft had caused the smoke to come out in the cellar of the store.

The second call came at 6.57 o'clock for a fire under the floor of Sellas Lunch on Franklin Square. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon men in the lunch room noticed smoke issuing from the floor near the cash register but a search failed to disclose where the smoke came from. About 6.30 o'clock the smoke began to come in greater volume and the fire department was called in to locate the fire.

A small hole was found near the end of the counter in the lunch room and wisps of smoke was coming from the crevice but much more smoke was noticed at the northwest corner of the room. The firemen tested the cellar and tore down some of the boards on the ceiling and found a small fire in the sawdust and material that had gathered beneath the floor. The origin of the fire was a mystery but it is believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion. The damage was slight.

SACRED HEART DRIVE NEARING HALF-WAY MARK

The drive for $40,000 to reconstruct Sacred Heart church of Norwich Town is rapidly approaching the half way mark and workers on the various committees are determined to send the figures over the $20,000 mark before Saturday.

At a meeting held Thursday night at the Knights of Columbus Home on Broadway, the committee reports were most gratifying, the workers of St. Patrick's parish reporting $3,744.00 collected during the day, St. Mary's parish workers announcing subscriptions totalling $516.50, a total of $4,261.10. These amounts brought the grand total to date $15813.75 with the campaign but five days old.

It was announced at the meeting Thursday evening that hereafter the workers would be allowed to work in open territory and as there are many people who have not yet been approached it is expected that the subscriptions today (Friday) will be large, sending the grand total well on to the half way mark. The workers pledged themselves to best efforts, that the amount needed may be raised quickly.

In connection with the campaign members of Sacred Heart parish are now in attendance in the vacant store formerly occupied by Disco Bros. on Main street and will gladly receive all contributions. The ladies in attendance Thursday were Mrs. Benjamin Kennedy and Miss Nellie Kingsley.

The display in the store has attracted considerable attention and the attractive display is the work of Morgan Cronin assisted by Nelson Church and John Morrison.

The rooms at the store are kept open afternoon and evening in charge of Thomas P. White and it is expected that any person who has not yet been asked to give and desires to donate for this worthy cause, will come to the store and leave a contribution.

Following the meeting of Thursday evening refreshments were served by the women of Sacred Heart parish assisted by women of the other parishes of the city.

SILVER TEA SERVICE TO MRS. F. C. WILLIAMS

The Choir of St. Andrew's Episcopal church gave a farewell banquet at the parish house of the church Thursday evening at 8 o'clock to Rev. and Mrs. Frederick C. Williams. William Anderson, president of the club, acted as toastmaster and after a short speech presented Mrs. Williams a silver tea service on behalf of the club members. Mrs. Williams responded, thanking the club for the pleasing gift, which she said, would ever be cherished by her. The remainder of the evening was spent in a social hour during which games were enjoyed.

The committee in charge of the banquet comprised, Mrs. Elizabeth Donohue, chairman and Mrs. Alfred Brooks.

Universalist Mission Circle

The Universalist Mission Circle met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. N. Foster a large number being present. Following the transaction of routine business a social time was enjoyed during which refreshments were served.

Pearl oysters of Ceylon and the Persian Gulf have been known to migrate when in search of food.

STORRS HENS AT HIGH MARK AT THE HALF

They are at the half with the highest record of any contest conducted at Storrs during the last dozen years. The grand total for the first 26 weeks is 79,192 eggs as compared with 70,142 for the average for previous years. Thus the hens in the present contest are 9,050 eggs ahead of the expected yield in the first six months of the race and not only this but they are more than 9,000 eggs ahead of the best previous mark. All this is, of course, gratifying to poultry breeders who have sent their birds to Storrs for the ostensible purpose of making high records. In general, a mixed poultry population in a laying contest will produce in the first six months 44 per cent of the number of eggs they will lay for the entire year. On this basis the hens now at Storrs should lay by the end of October, more than 179,000 eggs. The management of the contest, however, now feels less secure in predicting th final outcome because the use of artificial lights and consequent high winter production may upset calculations.

High average yields naturally mean a fast and furious race especially at this season of the year when every pen is doing its utmost. In the closing week of the first half year of the contest, Pinecrest Orchards pen of Rhode Island Reds from Groton, Mass., were in first place with a production of 60 eggs. Hollywood Farm's pen of Leghorns from Hollywood, Wash., was second best pen for the week with a yiel of 58 eggs. Two pens of Rhode Island Reds entered by Miller Brothers from South Manchester, Conn., and Charles H. Lane from Southboro, Mass., tied for third place with 56 eggs each. Lion Head Poultry Farm from Dover, N. J., captured fourth place with a pen of Leghorns that laid 55 eggs. The total yield for all pens for the 26th week was 4,394 eggs or a yield of nearly 63 per cent. The hens have started the third quarter with a number of shifts among the leaders. In the Barred Rock class a Spencer, Mass., pen lost out to Edgar Stoughton of Wapping, Conn. In the Wyandotte group a pen from Bridgeton, R. I., has given way to William E. Moran's pen from Bethany, Conn. Among the Reds, E. Newton Searles from Pomfret Center, Conn., managed to pass a Springfield, Mass., pen that has been hanging on to third place. In the Leghorn division a pen from Mt. Carmel, Conn., lost its place to Hollywood Farm, from Hollywood, Wash.

DANIELSON

About 80 members were present at the Old Times' night meeting of Moriah lodge of Masons Wednesday, and visitors, representing a number of lodges, brought the attendance up to 125. A degree was conferred. Features of the evening included a talk by Fred A. Brown, master of Ionic lodge of Greene, R. I., and George A. Sturges of Woodbury, senior steward of the grand lodge of Connecticut. Prior to the meeting a supper was served by members of the Eastern Star.

This is, in accordance with a proclamation by Governor Templeton, Bird and Arbor day, and it will be observed in fitting manner in the schools in this town. The day brings the suggestion that grownups may improve it by planting trees which may develop to beautify the countryside in another generation and furnish a nesting place for the birds that all love so well. Grown ups, too, have the opportunity of fostering a love for the beautiful in children today thet they, in later years, may plant trees and protect bird life, subjected to so many difficulties of existence in modern days.

Oil for streets of the borough is expected to arrive here at any time, having been ordered, and will be applied upon being received. Oiling of borough streets was undertaken last year with such satisfactory results that it will be repeated. The cost is borne by the taxpayers and borough jointly.

The rapidity with which the safe deposit boxes installed in the fire and burglar proof vault of The Windham County National Bank are being rented is very gratifying to the bank's officials, as customers of the bank are beginning to realize the economical necessity of having a safe deposit box in one of the strongest and most modern vaults in eastern Connecticut, thus assuring absolute safety from fire and theft of all valuable papers such as life insurance policies, fire insurance policies, deeds, mortgages, notes, passbooks, stocks and bonds, the cost being at less than a cent a day. The Windham County National Bank Danielson, Conn.—adv.

In many of the larger towns and cities of the country there has been launched in the past year in the public schools a movement for the purpose of developing a love for good music among the pupils.

Grade four in the Danielson graded school has been doing a little with this music interpretation this year and has with the aid of the Victrola become familiar with some of the best music.

The name of the composition and the composer has been mastered by all, while some have acquired the name of the person or persons singing or playing, and all can recognize the instruments that are used.

At the annual meeting of the Killingly Woman's club Miss Emma F. Pilling invited the fourth grade with the teacher, Miss Elizabeth R. Woodworth, to demonstrate their knowledge or ability to interpret the different selections as they were played.

The children have had nine selections—Ave Maris, Sextet from Lucia, Bacarolle, Narcissus, Spring Song, Humoresque, Serenade by Schubert, Miserere from Il Trovatore, and the Hallelujah Chorus from the Messiah, this last named a Christmas gift to the class.

Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock at his home at Hopkins Mills funeral services for Albert E. Curtis, who died suddenly while hauling home a load of wood, were conducted by Rev. Gilbert B. Cutler of the Rockland Christian church, assisted by Rev. G. A. Arnold of Providence. Mrs. Emma Potter and Mrs. May Wilson Brown sang at the service. Burial was in the Hopkins Mills cemetery. The bearers were John Curtis, Lewis Curtis, Luther Cole, Fred Cole, Fred Simmons and Fred Smith. A. F. Wood was the funeral director.

If the body of Benn Kershaw, the missing Putnam man, is in Alexander's lake the waters had not given it up up to Thursday afternoon. It will be two weeks next Sunday since Mr. Kershaw disappeared while alone at the lake and no one hereabouts has since seen him. That he was missing was not discovered until about 8 o'clock in the evening of the day he disappeared.

Now here is another thing for the taxpayer to keep in mind: The borough assessors—Thomas Bradford, Joseph N. Lavallee and William J. Young—have given notice that the time is near at hand for the filing of lists of taxable property owned within the borough. All such lists must be filed by May 26, or a penalty of 10 per cent will be attached.

The bodies have since been entombed at Bartlett cemetery at East Killingly.

Rev. J. W. Carter of the Methodist church at Attawaugan will conduct the funeral service.

The only surviving member of the family is Byron Larkin, slowly recovering from pneumonia, which for two weeks threatened to end his life, at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. It is his wish that funeral services for his father, his sisters and brother be delayed no longer than Sunday.

A delegation from the Westfield Congregational church of Danielson will be in Putnam next Tuesday to attend the 61st annual meeting of the Windham County Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers. There are to be morning and afternoon sessions and all of the Congregational churches of the county will be represented.

It has been reported to the chamber of commerce that the Eastern Connecticut Power company will investigate in its Danielson territory as to whether it will be possible to reduce rates for electricity, as has been represented would be pleasing to a large proportion of residents here and hereabouts.

Road oil was being applied Thursday to the state highway between Attawaugan and Dayville. A tractor was being used in hauling apparatus employed for covering the oil with dirt.

PUTNAM

Secretary John Corbett of the County Y. M. C. A. made announcement Thursday that the annual track meet of the association in conjunction with the high schools of the county will be held at the Windham County fair grounds in Brooklyn on Saturday, May 19.

The registration and assignment of numbers will be at 9 a. m., and the events will continue throughout the day. All entries must be in the hands of Secretary Corbett by May 16. Entries are to be divided into three classes, according to ages of contestants and their height and weight. Each boy will be required to compete against boys in his own class. The certification will be as follows:

Class A—Boys registering 800 to 900 points; Class B—Boys registering 900 to 1,000 points; Class C—Boys registering over 1,000 points.

A boy's certification is determined by multiplying his age in months by one and one half, multiply his height in inches by four and one half, multiply his weight in pounds by three. Adding the results gives the number of points which the boy registers.

Boys representing any Y. M. C. A. group, any grammar school or any high school in Windham county will be permitted to enter the meet.

In Class A the events scheduled are a 50-yard dash, running broad jump, running high jump, baseball throw and 220-yard relay race.

In Class B there will be a 75 yard dash, running broad and running high jumps and 440-yard relay race and putting 8-lb shot.

In Class C the events are 100-yard dash, running broad and high jumps, putting 12-lb shot and half mile relay race.

There also will be two open events —a mile run and an obstacle race.

Ribbon prizes will be awarded winners in each class. The winners also will have the opportunity to compete in the state Y. M. C. A. meet to be held at Wesleyan university on May 26.

Represented at the meet at Brooklyn will be Putnam High school, Tourtelotte Memorial High school of North Grosvenordale, Woodstock academy, Killingly High school, Plainfield High school and possibly Windham High school.

Childs of Woodstock academy announced.

The public has been invited to this meet and to public spirited citizens it is suggested that they can do a favor on meet day by bringing a number of boys to the fair grounds in their automobiles. Bringing a basket lunch also is a thought for those who plan to attend the meet.

Putnam's Clean-up week is nearly at end. Mayor Victor Chapdelaine said Thursday that he is pleased with the results that have been accomplished. Many have entered into the movement with a whole-heartedness that is reflected in clean lawns and sightly back yards. Others who have not yet given the desired attention to their properties may do so today and tomorrow. There is yet time. It has been found that some have desired the city teams that have been collecting debris to cart off the winter's accumulation of ash heaps. This is not being done, as was announced when the city street department cooperation was assured in taking away waste matter. Citizens must remove heaps of ashes on their own account, but the city teams are available for the legitimate purposes for which they were originally offered.

So today and Saturday offers the last opportunities to be recorded as cooperating in the Clean-up week movement.

Indicative of the fact that agents of the commissioner of domestic animals are keeping close tabs on matters assigne dto their attention is the ordering into court by Officer William Jarvais, Putnam, special deputy commissioner of domestic animals of Victor Andros of Plainfield. Eight counts alleging breaking and entering and theft are included in the information filed by Putnam city court officials with the state attorney against Leon Vannese of this city on Thursday. Vannese was arrested a week ago today and charged with breaking and entering a building on Pomfret street the preceding night. He at first denied the charge, but afterwards admitted his responsibility and also cleared up the mystery surrounding other recent breaks in Putnam by his admission that he had carried them out. It is anticipated that Vannese's case will be disposed of at the present term of the superior court for this county.

CAPTAIN DELAGE MAY RECOVER FROM INJURIES

(Special to the Bulletin)

Putnam, May 3—There was promise Thursday that Captain Remi Delage will recover from the frightful injuries he received in the automobile acident in which his companion, Alderman Honorius Magnan lost his life at Oxford during the early hours of Wednesday morning. Captain Delage is in critical condition, but the hope was held out to Mrs. Delage at the City hospital in Worcester, where he is a patient, that he will eventually recover if some unforeseen development does not take place.

There were no new developments concerning the accident during Thursday. It seems definitely established that the wrecked car was traveling the distance of 250 feet between the accident occurred. It skidded and turned over several times while traveling the distanc of 250 ft. between the part of the bridge abutment it struck, dislodging a large block of rock, and where it came to rest, turned over on its side.

It is believed by many that fog may have been partly responsible for the accident. While it was bright moonlight Tuesday night at midnight and shortly afterwards, there were banks of fog in low places and there is a possibility that there may have been some of it in the low-lying section at the underpass where the accident occurred. Captain Delage will be able to clear up this point later in all probability, but his condition was such up to Thursday that he was not questioned at any length about the details of the accident.

Preparations were being made on Thursday for the funeral of Alderman Magnan. The service will be attended by Mayor Chapdelaine, the members and associates of Alderman Magnan in the city council and other city officials as well as members of social and fraternal organizations with which Alderman Magnan wa saffiliated.

Sergeant George Laird is acting chief of police in the absence of Captain Delage, who will not in any event be able to return to duty for a long time, if ever, though only time will determine that. The captain is so badly battered that it is impossible to estimate what his physical condition will be in the event of recovery.

SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS IN JAIL FOR INDECENT ASSAULT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, May 3.—The trial of John O'Brien, of No. 1012 Main street, Hartford and a former employe of the Woolworth five and ten cent store here, charged with indecent assault, was concluded in the superior court here this afternoon by O'Brien being found guilty. Judge George E. Hinman sentenced O'Brien to six months in jail.

O'Brien was arrested on North Bank street several week ago, following complaint being made to the police by the father of a seven years-old boy.

Gus Gotol of Norwich, charged with keeping a female for purposes of prostitution, pleaded not guilty and elected trial by jury.

The continued case of John Kenzier of Colchester, charged with statutory burglary, was ended following Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield bringing Kenzier into court. Kenzier pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the reformatory, but the execution of the sentence was suspended and Kenzier placed in the custody of the probation officer.

The deed transferring the Elms, the handsome residence of Mrs. Cornelia Osgood Tyler, located at the corner of Pequot and Gardner avenues, to the Home Memorial Hospital Incorporated was received for record at the office of the city clerk this afternoon. The deed shows that the hospital paid Mrs. Tyler $43,000 for the property and of this amount a $30,000 mortgage is assumed by the purchasers. The hospital which is now located on Pequot avenue, near Thames street, will move into its new home in the near future and just as soon as alterations can be perfected.

The residence recently has been operated as a hotel, having been conducted by New Haven parties and was known as the Pequot Manor. It is ideally located, fronting on the Thames river, with an excellent and obstructed view of the harbor and ocean together with a wide area of recreation space in the yard.

The Edward Bloom company, owners of the Bloom Silk mills of Garfield avenue, are to extend their plant, it became known today when the company acquired three tracts of land adjoining the present structure. The properties acquired consist of two tracts from George B. Prest, executor of the estate of Edward Prest, one plot being on Garfield avenue and the other on McDonald street.

The third tract is located on Garfield avenue and was purchased from the Life and Advent church. It is the intention of the Bloom company to erect modern structures on the sites just as soon as their plans can be carried out. The company moved to New London from New York about two years ago and employs about 150 hands. With increased facilities it is expected, that the number of employes will soon reach 300 or 400.

Mrs. Annie L. Hempstead, wife of Frank L. Hempstead of Groton, died at her home today following an illness of less than a week of pneumonia. Mrs. Hempstead was 26 years of age and besides her husband, is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bandro of Groton.

William Gaffe of No. 234 Seventh street, West New York, N. J., arrived in New London this evening in search of his automobile which was stolen from West New York yesterday. Mr. Gaffe visited the police station and provided the police with a description of the machine, which it was believed, was headed this way.

Funeral services for Mrs. George L. Williams, daughter of Samuel Prince and sister of S. Victor Prince, judge of the city court, whose death occurred Tuesday at her home in Westerly, were held at her late residence this afternoon. Burial was in Westerly.

Lynde, formerly a resident of New London, at which time Mrs. Lynde and Miss Lynde occupied an apartment at the Hotel Mohican. Miss Lynde was a brother of the Associated Charities and later a member of the faculty of the Connecticut College for Women. During Mr. Lynde's connection with the Associated Charities, Miss Lynde assisted him in his investigaton work.

A force of carpenters will be put to work within a few days making repairs to the Fishers Island Navigation company's wharf which was damaged yesterday afternoon by the company's steamer Muntawket crashing into it. The crash came when the steamer was docking and when the engine struck on the center preventing the reversing of the propellor when the signal was given. The boat continued into her berth and came to a stop only after crashing through the guard rail protecting the lobster and fish cars of the G. M. Long company and then against the piling of the wharf.

Stanley Tinker of Montville, will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with reckless driving. He was arrested this evening by Motorcycle Officer William Babcock when Tinker was detected driving his automobile through Broad street at a speed that endangered the life and limb of pedestrians.

Another evidence that liquor can be procured without any trouble in New London was most apparent this evening for before the night squad had really got down to duty three drunks were coralled and lodged in cells. They will be given an opportunity to tell their stories of how they procured their drinks to Judge Prince in the city court tomorrow morning.

Boys who are handy with their fists and who have not parental oversight gave exhibitions of boxing in the vacant lot at the corner of Greene and Golden streets this evening. There was a good sized audience to witness their work, and the young pugilists were rewarded for their exhibition from a purse that was collected from spectators at the end of each battle.

The purse did not go above a half a dollar usually. A soldier who was a fad on the sport passed the hat and its contents went to the winner in each battle. A colored lad called "Snowball" seemed to be the champion in his line and finally the sport reached a point where he could get no competitor.

Mrs. John McArdle of Montauk avenue, Miss Marion Roberts of Quaker Hill, John Maynard of Ocean avenue and John Shaprowe of Jay street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were able to return to their respective homes today.

John De Wolf, an Old Lyme farmer, drove into New London and leaving his auto on the east side of North Bank street proceeded to do some shopping. He didn't observe that a sign board close to where he stopped forbade parking vehicles. He was ordered to court and there today he paid a fine of $5. The police can drive a lot of business away from the city by a strict administration of the parking law. The display of discretion in arresting offenders would be of benefit to the city.

A slick thief operated in a Bank street store yesterday. A woman looking at some music there left her pocketbook on a counter nearby where she stood. It contained a smaller purse and in the small purse was a $10 bill. The woman says she did not stir away from the point where she looked at the music, but when she was ready to leave the store she discovered her loss. The cash had been taken from the pocketbook.

An Italian woman, residing in Waterford and who obtains a livelihood by peddling vegetables from a wagon, claims to have been injured this morning by being struck by an automobile, owned and operated by James N. Kelley of No. 62 Washington street, while the woman was driving her team on Douglass street.

The woman reported the alleged accident to Mrs. Kelley and stated that she had been attended by a physician. Inquiry of the physician revealed that the woman had sought treatment for her alleged injuries, but the physician who examined her was unable to find any injuries or even bruises.

An effort was made to comply with the request, but the identity of the woman could not be made.

New London, May 3.—Melvin E. Snow of the motor vehicle department conducted a hearing in the court of common pleas room in the court house this afternoon of several drivers of automobiles with charges of various nature hanging over them. The charges were principally those for evasion of responsibility and driving a machine recklessly.

However, $15 of Bruso's $25 trial fine was returned to the accused. Bruso's automobile was in collision with a car of Samuel Walker of Plainfield several weeks ago and Walker and his wife testified against Bruso.

(Special to The Bulletin.))

New London, May 3.—Plant hall was well filled this evening when a class of eighteen nurses graduated from Lawrence-Memorial hospital. The occasion was one in which the graduates were among their friends and acquaintances and they might well feel proud of the occasion as did their relatives and friends who were permitted to be spectators of the interesting ceremony.

There was excellent vocal and instrumental music, the latter by Miss Dorothy Hubbard and Miss Mildred Seeley. Miss Marjorie Knox was at the piano. Walter A. Towne delivered the address to the class. His speech was a literary gem and thoughts he expressed will linger with the graduates, as well as with the others who heard it, a long time. The diplomas were awarded by Frederic W. Mercer, the president of the hospital association, and Mrs. Nicholas M. Pond presented to each graduate the school pin and companion case.

SULPHUR SMOKE CALLS WESTERLY FIRE DEPARTMENT

Westerly, May 3.—The Westerly fire department responded to an uncertain and needless alarm for a supposed fire tonight at 6.45 o'clock at the Federal Smelting company's plant on Canal street in a small detached wood shed, where some sulphur had been left burning in a sulphur process. The smoke which issued from the shed was thought to be a fire. Water was turned into the building after a door had been pulled off and the damage resulting was slight. The strong sulphur fumes kept everyone at a respectful distance.

GOODYEAR GIRL DROWNED BY FALL INTO POOL

Danielson, May 3.—Mary Gudsic, 1 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gudsic, was drowned this afternoon about 3 o'clock at Goodyear. The child was playing about in the lower village when she toppled off an embankment into a pool of water of considerable depth.

A woman in a nearby tenement saw the child disappear over the bank and rushed to her aid but was unable to get the little girl out of the water. The girl's father brought out the body and every effort was made to revive her, but without avail.

Dr. George M. Burroughs, medical examiner, was quickly at Goodyear, but the little girl was dead.

Y., has been enrolled for a course in music in the summer school, Concord, N. H. Miss Stillwell has been re-engaged for the next school year at Rochester, from which city she will go direct to the summer school and not return to her Westerly home until the first of August. As accompanist Miss Stillwell's services have been in great demand by a number of city soloists and most creditable is her musical standing in Rochester.

The fourth story from the rear of the Brown building, which has been added to the center section of the business block since the Opie department store fire, is completely floored and the roof with its numerous skylights completed. The interior yet remains to be finished.

No greater argument can be made of the desirability of the garbage collection campaign in charge of Town Councilman Thomas Morrison and Col. Charles H. Ledward, who will report to the regular May meeting of the Westerly town council next Monday, than a trip to Pleasant View by way of Winnapang road. Apparently both sides of the road for its length have been used as a public dump, making an otherwise charming sylvian scene an eyesore and public disgrace. It is hoped that every resident with ha sense of civic responsibility will write the above named committee assuring them of their cooperation.

The locomotive attached to the accommodation train arriving in Westerly at 8.10 broke down at Kingston Tuesday. The locomotive attached the pay car brought the train to Shannock where a spare locomotive from Midway took the train the remainder of the trip. Newspapers and mail were delayed two hours.

The most noticeable change in railroad trains made by daylight saving is that the "New England express" from Pittsburgh via Hell Gate bridge, formerly arriving before the east bound 7.30 accommodation, now follows it.

Karl A. Stillman, son of A. R. Stillman, and wife, formerly engaged in the insurance business in Los Angeles, Cal., has arrived at his former home in Westerly and will enter the employ of the C. B. Cottrell & Sons Co.

BIGNESS AND STRENGTH.

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

It is probably a fine thing to be big and strong. It must be, since so many people say so and manifestly admire bigness and strength. Not only admire them but brag about them. Brag about them in themselves or in their children or their cousins or their neighbors.

If a bank has the biggest sum of deposits it boasts thereof. If a merchant sells the biggest amount of white goods, he boasts about it. If a factory turns out the biggest production of percales or sheetings it tells the world of it in no apologetic tones. If a farmer fattens the biggest pig or shells out the biggest acre-bushelage of corn, he even raises the biggest pumpkin he brags about them, not till he gets tired, for that would never happen, but till all his neighbors do.

New York city is fairly drooling at the mouth in its eagerness for the time to arrive when it can proclaim itself the biggest city in the world. Your Uncle Sam has been red in the face for the past three years, shouting to the unlistening stars the statement that the United States is the biggest and strongest nation on earth.

Who are we raw-boned farmers of the back roads, with mud on our boots and hayseed in our hair, that we should venture to question the desirability of bigness and strength? Even if we did, would it do any good, either to ourselves or to others? "Shout with the crowd," said wise Mr. Pickwick. "But suppose there are two crowds?" asked Mr. Snodgrass. "Shout with the biggest," was the great man's instant reply.

Knowing human nature fairly well and appreciating fully all the facts like those instanced above as illustrating its admiration for bigness, John Farmer, nevertheless and notwithstanding, wants to go on record as doubting if not actually denying the whole thing. This may stamp him as a schismatic or even a heretic. But a number of men have been classed as schismatics and heretics in their times, whom the future has canonized and erected statues to their memory.

You see, there's a great difference in the origin and character of bigness. Some things, like mountains and elephants, are big by nature and can't help it. Other things, like diamonds and fleas, are small by nature. Yet it is recorded that these latter "git thar just the same."

A big, strong, genuine he-man is built up of big bones and big sinews and big muscles and a big brain, very likely. One can't blame people for admiring him. But who admires the equally big man whose bigness is simply bloat?

A big, strong nation, big because of the soundness of its heart and the vigor of its digestion and the cleanness of its blood is undoubtedly something for its people to be proud of. But a nation whose size is due solely to unwholesome corpulence and flabby fat and the swelling of pus-filled tumors is an object of aversion, not one for derision.

We farmers can't be all the time thinking about turnips and how feed. It is not only our privilege but our duty to think at times about the country whose existence depends upon our keeping on our jobs, and whose government is or ought to be as much our servant as the servant of the city mob. Therefore, I want to talk a little bit this morning about the fundamental principles which underlie our so-called democracy. Not about anything partisan or political in the modern usage of those words. But about the basic conception and the primary purpose of this government which we still call one "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

Nothing struck me more in a recent reading of Walter H. Page's letters while ambassador to England than his statement of his conception of the American ideal. Please read it:

"The fundamental article in the creed of the American democracy—you may call it the fundamental dogma if you like—is the unchanging and unchangeable resolve that every human being shall have his opportunity for his utmost development—his chance to do and become the best he can." Democracy, he went on, is not only a system of government, it is a scheme of society. Not only must every citizen have the suffrage, he must likewise enjoy "the same advantages as his neighbor for education, for social opportunity, for good health, for success, whether in agriculture or manufactures or finance or business or professional life." The country which most successfully opens all these avenues to every boy and girl, exclusively on individual merit, is the most democratic.

What do you and I say to that? Don't we both of us know that it is simply a modern statement of the ideals the fathers held and the intentions they cherished for their country? It was to be a country wherein no rank of birth or status of inherited wealth should give the possessor any advantage at the start-off, but where every avenue to welfare and success should be equally open on equal terms to every man and woman, to every boy and girl, but exclusively on individual merit. It was for that reason that orders of nobility were abolished and primogeniture forbidden. All the roads to success, to wealth, to power, to fame, to service were to be kept wide open for those who would enter, and for those who were competent to follow through. Every one was to have an equal chance for making his life just what his personal desert rendered possible. He was not to be boosted from behind nor pushed back from in front. His road was to be his, to choose for himself, to follow as far and as high as he could.

The fact that he was born in a log cabin was to be no obstacle in his way to the presidency of the United States—if only he had presidential timber in his build. The fact that he was born in a palace and swaddled in silk and fed from a gold spoon was to be no advantage to him in the race which every man was to make for himself on his own legs and along his own course.

It was to be a country with an even start, a fair show, and a just judgment for every entrant. He was to be unhampered in his labor, unchecked in his performance, free to aim as high as he pleased and reach as high as he could. The starting line was to be the same for all; the rules the same for all; the prizes the same for all. Success was to be made equally easy for all who were able to win it, and failure equally certain for all who deserved it. Either consummation was to depend exclusively on individual merit and not at all on ancestry or inheritance or favoritism. Every tub was to rest on its own bottom, and every man to stand on his own legs.

That, as Ambassador Page saw it, was the meaning of American democracy—not the democracy of partisanship but the all-embracing democracy of the square deal and the fair play, the democracy for which ex-President Wilson declared the world must be made safe.

We also know with equal surety that this big, boastful country of ours is no longer a democracy under that definition. We have made bigness our god and turned into worshippers of bloat. Is New York city the most populous town on earth? Then never mind the fact that its city government reeks with corruption, that its distributing system is the most amazingly inefficient and extravagant on earth, that its business stinks with graft—never mind such details, let's howl ourselves hoarse in gratulations over its bigness!

Is the Woolworth building the tallest business structure? Is the Steel company the biggest industrial enterprise? Does Henry Ford's shop turn out the most automobiles per day? Does Los Angeles make more movie films than all the rest of the world combined? Then sound the loud hewgag and beat the brass drum and ring the bells and fire the guns! Let's celebrate our bigness day and night unceasingly.

That seems to be the sentiment of the times.

What if New York city's controlling majority is made up of a heterogeneous and utterly unAmerican mob of ignorant and prejudiced immigrants? What if in the big shops and factories and mines both employers and employees are being transformed from men into machines? What if in the mad rush after bigness of output all power of initiative is being checked and all individualism smothered? What if, by their own shortsightedness quite as much as by force of circumstances, the avenues to success are being closed to those whose individual merit might have won?—What do such things matter to the modern business mind, so long as we achieve bigness?

It's just because they can't seem to matter any more either to the men who furnish capital or the men who furnish labor in the great industrial establishments that I appeal to the few farmers my small voice may reach to wear ship while it is possible and stand on the other tack.

If the world, if even a majority of our own countrymen go wild in their zeal for false gods, that is not sufficient reason why we should follow.

We have to think things out. We have an inherited reverence for the ideal democracy for which our fathers fought and which they devotedly labored to establish. We knew perfectly well that whether in politics or business or manufacture or farming mere size is no criterion of value, but that quality is always more important than quantity.

We known—at least the most of us know that the Moloch of bigness is just a heartless, soulless and brainless monster. In the name of common honesty and common sense and common patriotism, why shouldn't we say so and stick to it, whether the high priests of bigness denounce us for obstructiveness or sheer at us for old-fogyism?

Let us who so choose brand their foreheads with the mark of the beast or shackle their individual freedom of opportunity with its gyves. Our position permits us to main the old standards and preserve the old landmarks. Why should we forsake the advantage of our position in order to swell the discordant hymning of the idolaters?

I know, as you known, that we farmers are naturally as prone to follow the crowd as any other of the world's workers. We both known that the poison gas of syndicalism is oozing its blighting course towards us. For that very reason we ought, both in our own interests and in regard for the future's welfare, to be on our guard against it. Whether the approach be by some blatant praggart of bigness or by some slinking propagandist of the new labor-serfdom, we ought to be able to recognize him from afar off and halt him before he reaches our intrenchments.

Why should we—aid, why should we fail to oppose every attempt to degrade the glorious democracy of opportunity which we inherited with our births into the service of either an aristocracy or "proletariat?" One is as incompatible with true democracy as the other.

THE FARMER.

The balance of the program will be informal and will consist of demonstrations and educational talks on the grades of wool and plans for handling of the 1923 clip. Professor C. J. Fawcett and Mr. Geo. Smith of Amherst will be present and take part in the program.

The contest will be held rain or shine.

W. H. Card will give his famous illustrated talk on poultry breeds at 4 p. m.

There will be some minor "Ag" exhibits in the greenhouses and the school grounds will be open for inspection to the visitors.

DON'T SOW PEAS TOO THICKLY.

Old-fashioned gardeners always insisted in sowing about three times as much pea seed in a row as could grow well and produce a maximum crop. To add to the waste of seed and peas, they planted these thick rows in double series. Peas are a cool weather crop and the planting season extends from the earliest time the ground can be worked until the end of May at the latest with early fall crops occasionally.

It is best to sow peas in a single row and the individual peas two inches apart. In this way each vine will produce to capacity and will give twice as many peas per vine as in thick planting. These single rows may be planted in double ranks for the sake of utilizing brush or chicken wire support or if space is limited.

Peas must be cultivated faithfully to be at their best as they are a cool weather crop and demand cool roots. The maintenance of a dust mulch in dry spells will do wonders towards keeping them going. They need liberal soakings if an unseasonable dry, hot spell intervenes in June as sometimes happens.

Although the dwarf peas will grow well without support they will do better, even the most dwarfed, if given a width of narrow chicken wire to start them into upright growth. The taller of the dwarf section, those that grow two feet or more high, need this support and some of the finest of the dwarf section attain this height.

AN ALL-YEAR VEGETABLE.

The oyster plant, vegetable oyster, or salsify is now in the market from last year's gardens, being one of the few vegetables that remains in the ground over winter and is harvested as soon as it can be dug in the spring. The oyster plant has a delicate flavor and should be grown more freely and doubtless would be if people were more familiar with it.

One of its disadvantages is that when canned it gives off a milky juice, the root turns black and is unwholesome looking when cooked. This fault is obviated by cleaning and steeping the roots in water in which a little vinegar has been placed and in allowing the prepared roots to stand in cold vinegar water until it is time to cook them when they may be rinsed off and the dark discoloration will not destroy their appearance. They are best either creamed or fried.

Salsify may be sown as soon as the ground can be worked in some out of the way corner of the garden as it needs a full season's growth and even then does not make an overly large root. It is often allowed to grow so thick that the long slender roots have little chance to develop. It should be thinned to six inches apart. It does well in a variety of soils but responds to cultivation. The mammoth Sandwich Island is a favorite variety with larger roots than some of the older sorts.

It may be harvested in the late fall and placed in the cellar, but the root seems tenderer and better flavored when allowed to remain in the soil until early spring. It is used in soups in the same manner as oysters, its flavor being somewhat suggestive of that popular mollusk.

It may be sown as a follow crop to some of the earliest vegetable such as spinach and lettuce and radishes.

SEASON FOR SETTING OUT ORNAMENTAL EVERGREENS

This is one of the best seasons of the year to set out ornamental evergreen trees, like the various species of pine, spruce, fir, juniper, hemlock, arbor-vitae (white cedar), etc. They transplant best before the new growth starts, and while the weather is cool and the soil moist.

Large evergreen trees transplant best where they can be moved with a ball of earth about the roots and where the root system is fairly compact. Little trees of spruce, fir and pine, may be collected by digging them without much of any soil from the wilds—that is, from fields or along banks, streams or roadsides. In the hill towns of western Hampden county there are many sections where these little trees may be found growing wild in abundance. The writer has several times dug up six or eight little specimens of spruce and balsam fir from the roadsides of New England, wrapped them in wet moss, or burlap, brought them in and set them out in a row in his home garden, and in three or four years had them grow into fair-sized, beautiful little specimens, one to two feet high.

Important principles in handling evergreens are: First, to take care that the roots never dry out in handling. In handling large evergreens it is important to move them with a ball of earth, and as many root parts as possible. In nurseries it is customary to root-prune evergreens every one or two years, and to transplant them once in a while, so as to encourage a very compact root system. If evergreens are handled properly, they will stand a great deal of handling and transplanting. In past years nurserymen have imported hundreds of thousands of evergreens from Europe, and in general, because of the compact root system and the splendid packing of the root system to conserve moisture, these have been handled with very small losses, probably no more than one in 20.

More and more evergreens are being used each year, as lawn specimens, as group plantings, and as windbreaks. No other plants can take the place of evergreens. They add a touch of cheer with their varying shades of green, as well in winter, as in summer.

Root pruning is accomplished by cutting a circle to a spade depth or more about the tree in early spring. A straight, sharp spade which is meant to sever roots is pushed into the soil in a circle extending out from one to two feet from the trunk. Where one expects to move an evergreen on the lawn or from one position to another, if the tree has been growing in its position for some years, it is always best and safest to root-prune it in the spring a year ahead of the time when it is to be transplanted.

RATION SERVICE FOR MAY, 1923

By the time this is published many cows will have been turned out to pasture. The spring is rather backward and it is doubtful if pastures will be in first class condition before the middle of May. It is always a good plan to change from winter feed to pasture by slow degrees writes A. R. Merrill, dairy specialist. A little hay, silage and grain may well be fed along with early pasture. Many dairymen will feed some grain along with early pasture. Pasture grass is rich in protein. Many feeders will use the same grain ration with pasture that they have used with hay and silage. This is a mistake in many instances.

For May and June, if any grain is fed, it should be much lower in protein than later in the season. As long as pasture grass is fresh and green a mixture of equal parts bran and corn meal will make a good mixture, as the grass dries up a little more protein should be furnished. The following rations are good for general conditions.

Number One

Grain ration for May and June when grass is at its best:

		Crude Protein
400	Bran	56
500	Corn meal and hominy	53
100	Cottonseed	36
1,000		144 Pounds Crude Protein

100 pounds furnishes 14.4 crude protein.

Number Two

Ration for feeding when pastures begin to dry up during July and August:

		Crude Protein
300	Bran	42
460	Corn meal	41
200	Gluten	46
100	Cottonseed	36
1,000	pounds furnishes	165
100	pounds furnishes 16.5	crude protein. Pounds Crude Protein

In many cases very little grain will need to be fed. If mixture No. 1 is fed one pound to every five or six pounds of Holstein or Ayrshire milk should prove sufficient. For Jerseys and Guernseys one pound to every 3 1-2 or 4 pounds of milk.

Later in the season when ration similar to No. 2 is used the proportions fed may remain about the same although in the case of rather short pastures the milk proposition may be reducted by one pound for the low testing breeds and one-half pound for the high fat testing breeds.

BROOD COOPS.

There are many types of brood coops, but a good one should have the following essentials: Plenty of room for hen and chicks; the coop should be dry; it must have proper ventilation; good protection is needed from weather and from enemies; have one that is rain proof with a board floor; construct it so that it can be closed at night. It is very important that the brood coop be cleaned out and disinfected at least once a week.

Move the coop to fresh clean ground frequently. Give the hen no more chicks than she can keep comfortably warm; otherwise, some chicks will be chilled. The hen must also be kept free from vermine. Get the chicks out on the ground as soon as possible.

The first four weeks of a chick's life are the most critical, and special care must be given during this period. Many chicks are lost each season because of improper feeding. This may be due to four things: Feeding too soon; using wrong kind of feeds; feeding moldy or musty grain, or overfeeding or not feeding enough.

Since the yolk of the egg which is taken into the body of the chicks just before they hatch furnishes plenty of food for that length of time, they must not be fed before they are from 36 to 48 hours old. If additional food is given, diarrhoea and other digestive troubles will result.

Sour milk is the best feed with which to start baby chicks. It acts as a tonic, helps prevent disease, and stimulates the appetite. Chicks should be fed sparingly and often the first week. Feed them five times daily and keep them a little hungry. Do not overfeed the chicks, or feed them anything moldy. There are many different systems of feeding and many kinds of feeds recommended. Use any method recommended by the various agricultural colleges in the New England states.

Summing up the important points to consider in the care of baby chicks: Keep chicks warm at all times; allow chicks to run on fresh ground; keep them dry and free from vermin; do not crowd chicks; give special care to proper feeding, and kill all weak and crippled chicks.

Granby—At the adjourned town meeting it was voted to erect a memorial gateway at the Granby cemetery in honor of the young men of Granby who served in the World war.

HOUSE WITHHOLDS APPROVAL OF PRESIDENT HARDING'S WORLD COURT

Hartford, May 4.—The house of representatives today by a rising vote of 117 to 49 voted to postpone indefinitely the Ayres resolution indorsing President Harding's plan for participation by the United States in the world court.

The federal relations committee reported a substitute resolution commending the president of the United States for his advocacy of participation in a permanent court of international justice at The Hague, the resolution not requesting the United States senators or the representatives in congress to use their votes either for or against it.

Mr. Southwick of Cornwall, house chairman of the federal relations committee, who read the resolution from the table and said he was constrained to say that the committee was divided as to the propriety of reporting the resolution and also as to its usefulness. Mr. Southwick also felt constrained, he said, to elucidate the difference between the permanent court of arbitration and the league of nations. He said the court was not a dead question. The stumbling block was the league of nations, he said, and there was a connection.

Mr. Southwick explained that the permanent court of international justice nominates its judges but as it has no power of appointment they are continued by the council and assembly of the league of nations. Mr. Southwick announced he favored the resolution.

Mr. Ayres of Westport, who introduced the petition that the resolution be adopted, spoke briefly for the resolution.

Suggests Leave to Withdraw.

Speaker Nickerson ruled that the committee report asked for the passage of the bill and that Mr. Buckley's motion was a negative of the motion before the house. Mr. Buckley said he had made it diplomatically, in order not to appear cruel, but being ruled as a negative he would change it to a positive and move to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. Pierrepont of Ridgefield and Mr. Brinsmade of Washington spoke in hearty support of the resolution.

Stays Until Thrown Out.

Mr. Ayres replying to Mr. Buckley said he exhausted unnecessary solicitude for the petitioners; that they were here to stay until they were thrown out, and did not want to be bowed out.

Mr. Averill of Branford spoke against the resolution on the ground that the representatives in congress know more about the situation than the Connecticut house of representatives.

Minority Leader Fenton took issue with Mr. Averill on the question of whether or not the state of Connecticut is interested in the matter. Mr. Fenton spoke briefly but feelingly for the resolution and the principles of settlement of international disputes by arbitration rather than by force of arms.

Mr. Bell of Salisbury said he would vote against the resolution because if the chairman of the federal relations committee, who read the resolution from the table, and said he was constrained to say that the committee was divided as to the propriety of reporting the resolution and also as to its usefulness, Mr. Southwick also felt constrained, he said, to elucidate the difference between the permanent court of arbitration and the league of nations. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET STILL REACTIONARY

New York, May 3—Another heavy selling movement launched by big interests [illegible] of today's business to three to five points in a number of active issues and carried several of the so-called market leaders to their lowest prices of the year. Four successive days of reaction this week, all of which reached their climax in the final hour, have wiped out virtually all of the year's gains.

At the close of business tonight, both the average of the twenty leading industrial and the average of the twenty leading railroads were at low records for the year.

While the campaign of short interests has been based more on the failure of the market to respond to favorable outside news developments and to enlist widespread public support, rather than on any disturbing trade news, today's selling was sentimentally influenced by additional cuts in crude oil and sugar prices. French rejection of the German reparations plan was expected by the financial community and its only visible effect was a slight reaction in the price of French bonds and German exchange.

Sugar and equipment shares bore the brunt of today's selling pressure. Buyers' strikes were held largely responsible for the lower prices of sugar products and sugar securities. Raw sugar dropped 1-4 of a cent today to six cents a pound, cost and freigh. Cuba, or 2-4 of a cent below the year's high. Raw sugar futures dropped 40 to 55 points and prices of the refined product were cut from 1-4 to 1-2 of a cent. Manati sugar stock broke 5 1-2 points, South Porto Rican 5 1-2, Punta Alegre 4, Cuban American 2 1-2 and Cuba Cane 1 7-8.

Baldwin dropped nearly four points to 129 1-4, its low of the year, the American Locomotive, American Car, Pullman, Lima Locomotive and General Electric all closed 3 3-8 to 4 1-4 lower. Some of the other outstanding weak spots were American Can, California Petroleum, Gulf States Steel Republic Steel, National Lead and U. S. alcohol, all off 3 1-2 to 5 points. Pierce Oil prefered was one of the few outstanding industrial strong spots, gaining nearly four points on the day.

Rail shares offered better resistance to selling pressure but most of the leaders closed fractionally lower. Pittsburgh and West Virginia moved against the downward trend, rising two points.

Call money opened at 4 3-4 per cent., eased off to 4 1-2 during the noon hour and thence to four where it closed. The time money market was somewhat easier with loans arranged at 5 1-4 per cent. for all maturities on bot helasses of collateral. Comparatively little new commercial paper came into the market, the prime names commanding 5 a 5 1-4 per cent.

Demand sterling dropped 3-4 of a cent, below $4.63 but French francs held fairly steady around 6.65 cents. German marks broke 4 1-2 points to .0025 cents but rallied later to .0026 1-2.

BOND MARKET

New York, May 3—With the exception of a slightly increased demand for United States government bonds and firmer prices for railroad mortgages, prices in today's trading in bonds were mixed with a majority of the foreign bonds moving to lower ground.

The French issues were offered freely as the result of the French rejection of the German reparations offer, losses ranging from 1 to 1 5-8 points. Chinese bonds 5s were off 1 1-4 and Haiti 6s, 1. U. S. government bonds were up from 2-32 to 5-32 of a point with the exception of the tax exempt 3 1-2s which were off 2-32 of a point and the victory 4 3-4s which were unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Ill., May 3—Notable improvement of wheat crop conditions west and southwest led to selling today that lowered the price both of the July delivery and September, but left May relatively firm. Closing quotations were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 7-8 down, with July 119 1-4 to 119 3-8 and September 117 3-4 to 117 7-8. Corn lost 1-8 to 1-2 a 5-8 and oats 1-8 a 1-4 to 1-4 a 3-8. In provisions the outcome was five to 15 decline.

Although freezing weather in Canada together with scattered rains in the domestic spring crop territory had a bullish effect for a while after an initial downturn in the wheat market, the price gains were later entirely wiped out, and during the last half of the day the new crop months showed losses. The betterment reported in the outlook for winter wheat was ascribed to recent rains. Kansas dispatches that told of the more hopeful prospect thus outlined were given special attention. On the other hand, mentions of a need of moisture further east appeared to be almost ignored.

Nervousness on the part of traders who are short of wheat to fill contracts calling for delivery here this month was responsible for the comparative strength of the May price today. Most of the remaining holders of such contracts were said to be interests that wanted a settlement by actual delivery rather than by any other method. However, deliveries of 824,000 bushels of wheat today on May contracts here appeared to indicate that as yet the shorts had encountered no great difficulty.

Selling of corn and oats to go into storage here had a bearish effect on both the feed grains. About 200,000 bushels of corn and 125,000 bushels of oats were added in this manner today to the elevator stocks in Chicago.

Provision prices were weakened by the fact that for April the western stock of cut meats showed the largest gain for fifteen years.

JEWETT CITY

Sherman Waters of Lisbon has been enjoying a visit from his brother Franklin. The latter is late of Pawtucket where he has been in charge of the motive power for A. F. Shaw formerly of Jewett City, at the Acme Finishing company's plant. Mr. Waters contemplates a business venture in Norwich. He was formerly master mechanic with several concerns, including the A. B. Burleson Co., of this place.

Miss Irene Warner, art teacher in the schools of Griswold, is in Providence, where she will attend the meetings of the Eastern Art association convention.

As has been predicted, the pair of Canadian lynxes, that passed the winter in the vicinity of Pachaug, upon the east side of the pond have moved for the summer to a place where there is a hemlock growth, across the Quinebaug, just opposite the last rise of tunnell hill.

The other night, Frank Moriarty, New Haven telegraph operator at the trolley dispatch station in Taftville, was driving home to Jewett City in his automobile along after dark. At the top of tunnel hill, when his headlights shone brightly across into the hemlocks, he had to stop to adjust some matters about his machine. Before he started, a great screeching set up over in the woods Frank dimmed his lights, the cries ceased, only to begin again, when the glare from another approaching machine shone across the stream. Pachaug people unite with Mr. Moriarty, in declaring that these peculiar shrieks, heard at night, are not soon forgotten.

Old Cluey Watson, hearing about the lynx, has one of his best stories to tell, in the same style that pleased the many Bulletin readers last winter.

"My Uncle Ezra had come to visit us late in the fall of '66. He was then living in New York, and nothing would do but we must go on a moose hunt. These city men are always in for a hunt of some sort.

So five of us started off, Uncle Ez, my brother Dave, a lately returned cavalry man named Brown, Steve Saunders, an old hunter and trapper, and myself. We had two hounds, and about noon got on a moose trail, which we followed till near sunset. During the afternoon, it had clouded up and toward night came on to snow.

"We had better get out of this," said old Saunders, "it's going to be a regular northeaster."

"No doubt," exclaimed Uncle Ezra, shivering, "How far back is it to the settlement for a guess."

"Oh, 'twenty miles, or thereabouts," replied Saunders.

We stood there with the snow sifting down through the bare forest branches and rattling inclemently on the dried leaves. "We've got a long tramp," said Saunders, "so let's be off."

We judged we were somewhere in the town of Grafton, on the head waters of Bear river, a tributary of the Androscoggin.

The morning had promised a beautiful Indian summer day, but winter had now burst down upon us with hail and snow, driven by the cutting northeast wind, which sighed and howled with November dreariness through the leaden colored forest.

For three hours we tramped steadily on. It was past six o'clock and getting dark. Seeing an opening ahead we soon arrived at an old hay barn, used by the logging camps. Any sort of shelter on such a night! One of its great doors was swinging and banging with dismal slams. The great deserted structure loomed up forlornly amid the whirling snow as we stumbled in.

The scaffolds and mows were filled with hay. We divided our cold bite, turned in side by side in the great piles of hay which lay upon the floor. I don't know how long I had been asleep, when I awoke with a start, something was snuffling and scratching down in the hay at my feet. I was sure I felt claws on my boot, it flashed into my mind that it was Uncle Ezra playing another of his jokes I'll fix you old fellow, thought I, so when I felt what I took to be one of his finger nails, pinching up my trousers leg, I kicked out hard at a venture. There was a spit, a growl and a flash of two fiery eyes in the blackness. In my fright I executed a rolling leap and landed plump on Uncle Ez. He jumped up, pitching me down into the hay at his feet.

Halloo, from uncle. What's up? from Brown. Wildcats, wildcats, screamed I, sprawling in the hay. Halloo, from old Saunders, waking up. Catemounts, I yelled.

There was an instant scrabble. Everybody was on his feet in no time. Knowing the creature was on my side, I leaped toward the others, ran against Brown, was taken for the wild cat, and got a knock which sent me sprawling in the hay again.

"Here he is," yelled Brown. "Out with your knives." "Hold on, don't stab, strike a light," yelled Saunders. The house rushed in to complete the uproar. The creature bit and dug away right and left, slitting open pants legs and snapping his teeth, while voices not identified cried all at once. Who you kicking? Avast that knife. Keep that gun off my head, from Brown.

An outrageous panic followed. Uncle Ez was struck, full tilt by the creature and knocked flat. Everybody kicked and struggled at random and amid the shouts, barks, growls and spits, the beast escaped up the side of the mow.

A split was lighted, and the animal, larger than the hounds, was seen crouching on the highest beam.

Saunders shot; and down sailed the wounded beast among us, the split was extinguished, darkness reigned.

Order was restored, another split was lighted, and the creature was found stone dead in the hay.

It was a large specimen of the Canadian lynx, the same as lived near the Pachaug pond last winter. It was probably in the barn when we went in, having gone in, like ourselves to get shelter from the storm.

THE WORLD DEMANDING AMERICAN RAISINS

The American raisin is making a new record in its invasion of the world's markets. The total exports in the fiscal year 1923, which ends 90 days hence, will exceed 100,000,000 pounds against 50,000,000 in the fiscal year of 1922, and 75,000,000 in 1916. The value of the year's exports will approximate $15,000,000 and will also exceed that of any earlier year.

This high record in the quantity and value of our raisin exports, says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York, is especially interesting in view of the fact that the other great raisin field of the world, Levant, has recently resumed its contributions to the world market. Prior to the war, the area fronting on the eastern end of the Mediterranean was a large contributor to the world raisin markets, especially those of Europe. With the reduction in agricultural activities in that area during the war, production was greatly minimized, and raisins from the United States were largely imported by Europe and in some cases supplied to their troops in the field, and thus the world came to know the value of the American raisin.

The growth in world popularity of our raisins is evidenced by the fact that the exports advanced from 16,000,000 pounds in 1913 to 56,000,000 in 1918, the closing year of the war, and 110,000,000 in 1919. With the return of the Levant to raisin production and exportation, however, our exports fell to 53,000,000 pounds in 1920 and 33,000,000 in our short crop year 1921. With the high record of production of 1922, however, which is materially in excess of any earlier year, our exports for the current fiscal year seem likely to equal the high record of 110,000,000 pounds in the calendar year 1919, in which the Levant had not yet re-entered the world markets.

By DAVID CORY

The Little White Mouse

The pretty white clouds, I chase through the sky,
And rustle the leaves on the treetops so high.
I fill the big sails of the boats on the sea,
And dance with the daisies on meadow and lea.
And sometimes, I creep through the keyhole and say,
You'd better come out this beautiful day!"

This is the song that Billie Breeze sang in the last story, only I didn't have room to put it in and I hope you remember where the little rabbits were, but if you don't I'll tell you. They were out riding in the luckymobile with a little white mouse who had a pink parasol with which to keep the freckles off her face.

Well, after a while, whom should they see but the Big Policeman Dog, and oh, dear me! Wasn't that little white mouse frightened! If she had been a little black mouse she would have turned white, only, of course, she was white already, so she only grew a little bit whiter.

"Don't be afraid," said kind Uncle Lucky, "I know this Policeman Dog—he's all right."

"Don't go too fast," said the Policeman Dog and then, all of a sudden, he looked under the pink parasol, which the little mouse had pulled down over her face.

"Goodness me!" said the Policeman Dog," is this the little white mouse that stole the Old Red Rooster's cheese?"

"All right." Go ahead," said the Policeman Dog, touching his cap to the old gentleman rabbit, "it must have been a black mouse."

So the old gentleman rabbit drove away, but the poor little mouse was so frightened that she had to take out her vanity bag and powder her nose to make herself feel well again.

Pretty soon, not so very far, they came to a bridge which was kept by a big black duck, who always said "Quack! Quack!" and made everybody pay toll before crossing over.

"How much do you want?" asked the old gentleman rabbit, taking out his wallet and peeling off a ten dollar lettuce leaf bill.

"That will be enough," said the duck, with a smile, and putting the money in his pocket, he opened the gate.

And then over the bridge went the Luckymobile and if nothing dreadful happens, I'll tell you what the little rabbits did after that.

INCREASE IN COAL EXPORTS, ESPECIALLY IN EUROPE

Announcement that 30,000 tons of British shipping has been chartered for the transfer of coal from the United States to the ports of continental Europe suggest according to the Trade Record of The National City Bank, that our sales of coal to that greatest coal importing market of the world may return to the comparatively high record attained in recent years. Quite naturally our coal exports to all parts of the world fell off during the past year. The 1922 exports of coal were only 13 1-2 million tons against 24 1-2 million in 1921, but the fact that the outward movement in the closing months of 1922 was far in excess of the same months of 1921 suggests that the movement to foreign markets has already been resumed and will be further stimulated by the orders coming from Great Britain, the world's greatest coal mining country outside of the United States.

Europe, which has in the past received its chief coal supplies from mines of Great Britain and Germany developed a marked interest in American coal in the years immediately following the war. Our exports of coal to that continent advanced from less than a half million tons in 1913 to about 4,000,000 in 1919, the year following the close of the war, and 12,000,000 in 1920, but dropped to less than one-half million tons in 1922, in which year our exports of coal to the whole world fell off about one-half as compared with 1921. The fact that the exports of bituminous coal in the closing quarter of 1922 showed an increase of 50 per cent. in quantity when compared with the same quarter of 1921 and those of December, 1922, alone were actually double those of December, 1921, suggests an early return to normality in the outward movement of this article, of which we are the world's chief source of supply. Coal exports from the United States in the decade ending with 1922 are 231 million tons against 115 million in the preceding decade. The value in the 1913-22 period was $1,170,000,000 against $356,000,000 in the earlier decade.

This statement that the United States is the "world's chief source of coal supply" is fully justified by the record of a world [illegible] rical congress which met in Canada in the year preceding the war. It was composed of the most eminent geologists of the world, and its statements accredit to the United States an underground coal supply of 3,854,000,000,000 metric tons, against 1,234,000,000,000 in Canada; 996,000,000,000 in China; 423,000,000,000 in Germany, and in the United Kingdom 190,000,000,000. In fact, the United States has, according to this expert estimate, a little more than one-half of the known coal supply of the world, while the fact that Canada which holds next highest rank in underground supply has imported nearly a half million dollars worth of our coal in the last five years, that China which holds third rank in supply is now buying limited quantities from us, and that Great Britain, formerly the world's chief exporter, is now sending ships for American coal, suggests that our mining and distribution facilities promise an even greater percentage of increase in our future coal exports than that of the past.

The world's annual output of coal averages slightly less than 1,500,000,000 tons of which about one-third is produced in the United States.

Must Start Anew.

Archeological attention is now diverted from Luxor to Yucatan, where a new statue of Chac-mool, the tiger king of the Mayas, has been found in the ruins of Chichen-Itza. Those who have learned to pronounce the name of King Tutenkhamen have a new task to keep up with the times.—Washington Star.

TAFTVILLE

Ernest Burley and E. Partington, machine erectors for the Platt Bros., of England, manufacturers of cotton machinery, who have been employed several months in town at the plant of the Ponemah Mills, have left town en route for their homes in England as they have finished their work here. They sail from New York on the Steamship Cedric Saturday morning. During their stay in town they made many friends and took an active part in the affairs of the Taftville Football and Social Club of which they were members.

The local merchants have decided to close their places of business on Thursday afternoons for the summer months. This schedule has been in force now for several years and the half holiday is greatly appreciated by the clerks and salesmen in the various stores in town.

The Shetucket and Quinebaug rivers are still running high. Although lower than they were early in the week, they are still at high level. The land near the trolley switch at lower Occum, between the river and the tracks was completely under water, and the owner was unable to pasture his cows there as is his custom.

Mrs. Mary Jane Hasler and daughter Miss Annie Hasler of North A Street have moved to Norwich.

The Thursday Evening Basketry Class met this week in the Red Cross Rooms in the Ponemah Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Davis and family of South C Street are moving to the house on North B Street recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. James Hartley.

Council Gagnon, No. 203, Union St. Jean Baptiste met Thursday evening in its rooms in St. Louis Hall.

The social club connected with the Versailles M. E. Sunday School met Tuesday evening. The name of the club still remains a mystery, in spite of the attempts of other classes of the school to discover it.

Miss Ruth Campbell, who has been a patient at the Backus Hospital has returned to her home on Norwich Avenue.

Philip Marien of South A Street has resigned his position in the No. 3 Weaving Department of the Ponemah Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. John B. Benoit and family of Norwich Avenue expect to move soon to a house on Terrace Avenue.

Miss Margaret Quigley of North Third Avenue is a patient at Backus Hospital, Norwich.

Eugene Gouin of South A Street has accepted a position in the Carding Room of the Ponemah Mills.

REV. G. H. EWING GOES TO MAINE PASTORATE

Rev. George H. Ewing of Winthrop, Mass., who had been called to the North Parish Congregational church at Sanford, Me., began his duties there Sunday. He is a graduate of Amherst College and Yale Divinity school. He passed the first seven years of his ministry as a missionary of the American Board (Congregational) in North China. After a brief pastorate in Yarmouth, Mass., Mr. Ewing was pastor of the First Congregational church at Norwich Town, from 1904 until the close of 1918. He passed the following year in Y. M. C. Have You Piles?

Then You Have Something to Learn.

Thousands who have piles have not do the same for you.

learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. H. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine, taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt cured it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from Lee & Osgood today. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands of people, and should do the same for you.

MRS. A. E. PARK DIES SUDDENLY WHILE RECITING ON PROGRAMME

With a suddenness that shocked the audience of 200 in the Wauregan house ballroom Thursday night for the reception to Mrs. D. Louise Atterbury, state president of the Daughters of Veterans, Mrs. Avery E. Park of 77 School street dropped dead of heart disease as she was about to deliver a recitation on the program.

Mrs. Park was attending the reception with her husband and was on the program for two recitations. She had just concluded one patriotic recitation, which she had given with splendid effect, using small American flags as she spoke, and she was about to respond to the insistent applause with an encore. She had announced that her encore number would be "When Daddy Was Initiated" when she was seen to sway as she was about to speak the first lines. As she fell four or five men in the audience rushed forward to her help and bore her from the ballroom to the headquarters rooms for the Daughters of Veterans convention on another floor of the hotel.

Dr. W. T. Driscoll was called, but her death had immediately followed the sudden attack.

A short time later Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve gave permission for the removal of the body to the undertaking rooms of The Henry Allen & Son Co.

Mrs. Park, whose maiden name was Harvey, had lived in this city for many years and was well known among fraternal and church organizations for her talents as an entertainer. She was a member of Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 21, I. O. O. F., and of Sachem chapter, No. 57, O. E. S., in both of which she had frequently appeared upon programs. She had a host of friends who were won by her genial manner, ready sympathy and disposition for helpfulness. In the home she was a loving and devoted wife and mother.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Elmer, who is traveling with a theatrical company, and a daughter, who is the wife of Rev. Henry E. Anderson.

LACK OF QUORUM ON VOTE ON VACCINATION

Hartford, May 3.—The various vaccination bills that have been before the committee on public health and safety and that have drawn a large attendance at the hearings on the same, have been replaced by a substitute bill drawn by the committee. The bill was passed in the senate last week. The bill reads:

Section 825 of the general statutes is amended to read as follows: The board of health or the health officer of any town may require every child to be vaccinated before being permitted to attend a public school under its jurisdiction, unless such child shall present a certificate from a physician practising in the town where such child resides, certifying that, in the opinion of such physician, such vaccination would not be prudent on account of the physical condition of such child. If the parents or guardians of any children are unable to pay for such vaccination, the expense thereof shall, on the recommendation of such board or committee, be paid by the town. Such school board or school committee may exclude from any school under its supervision all children under five years of age whenever in its judgment the interest of such school will be thereby promoted.

The bill came to the front again after having been passed, on the motion of Dr. Erday, who moved a reconsideration. This was for the purpose of voting upon an amendment passed in the senate which had escaped notice. Mr. Kilpatrick of Bridgeport tried to have the bill tabled but the house refused. The adoption of the amendment which strikes out the portion of bill that makes exemption upon the request of the board of education, board of school visitors or town school visitors. Three votes were taken and the chair was unable to determine, the rising vote showed the lack of a quorum and the house was adjourned.

If this bill as recommended fails to pass it will leave the present law unchanged.

Another bill passed is one exempting from taxation, nursery products. It provides that produce or products grown or growing in any nursery, greenhouse or under glass and any shrub, including any forest, ornamental or fruit trees while in a nursery, shall be exempt from taxation.

TIBBETTS SEARCHERS FIND MILK CAN IN WELL

For a time Wednesday there seemed to be indications that Constable Jeremiah Sweeney of Fitchville who has been working hard on the mystery surrounding the disappearance of William Tibbetts, had run onto a clue that would lead to the discovery of the body but later events proved the clue to be only one more that led to failure, and left the mystery as deep and puzzling as ever.

While working at the Rudd farm on the back road running from Norwich Town towards East Great Plain Tuesday afternoon Frank Way of this city noticed a man in the vicinity of an old abandoned well on the property used by Alofsin & Sons for slaughtering purposes and later upon investigating found several things that caused him to suspect that everything was not right at the well.

He notified Constable Jeremiah Sweeney of his discovery and on Wednesday Constable Sweeney with Elijah Abel, George Kahn, and Gilbert Murray went to the abandoned well and a search disclosed an old Providence Dairy 20 quart milk can, to which was attached about thirty feet of rope. The handle on the can was rusted through, however, and it was thought likely that the can had been in the well for many months. This is the same kind of milk can that was used on the Tibbetts farm, and like the one that was said to have been in Tibbetts buggy when it was seen on the way to Norwich on the night he disappeared.

In order to make sure that there was nothing else in the well a pump was attached and more than half the water was pumped out and then grappling irons were used and it was ascertained that nothing else was in the well.

The well is an old one, some distance back from the road and no one would have reason to be in the vicinity of the well unless for reasons only known to himself. It is probable that the man seen near the well will be questioned by the officers to find out his reason for being there on several occasions.

MODERN PIED PIPER CUTS RAT POPULATION

H. R. Pitts of Buffalo, N. Y., the modern Pied Piper, who has been in Norwich this week and is to stay at least a week longer, reports that his campaign has so far exterminated from 9,000 to 10,000 rats and he has calls on file at the health officer's office from about 200 families who want his help to get rid of these pests.

It is the individual householder that Mr. Pitts wants to reach and instruct them how to use the barium carbonate which is a sure death certificate for any rat that trifles with it. The government is behind his drive against these pests, he says, and the work of killing off the destructive rats and mice has its cordial endorsement.

He invites householders to register with the health department office at the court house if they want to get rid of rats and mice and he guarantees that the means he will show the families of Norwich will be effective. Loss and damage by rats in the course of a year reaches a large total and he is out to save as much of this as possible for the mills, stores and householders of every community he visits.

City chambers of commerce which are members of the national chamber, are also entitled to send delegates, and it is believed that the attendance at the convention from this state will be quite large.

TIRED, NERVOUS MOTHERS

are the direct cause of much unhappiness in our homes; their condition irritates and wears upon the husband and often ruins a child's disposition. This condition of the mother is often due to some weakness which makes her entirely unfit to perform her household duties and bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves. Every woman who finds herself in this condition should remember that statistics prove that 98 out of every 100 women who suffer from female ills are helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and lose no time in giving it a fair trial.

BOYS WILL BE TAUGHT IN Y SWIMMING CAMPAIGN

The Y. M. C. A. swimming campaign for boys, 11 to 18 years old, is to begin Monday and all boys in the city are eligible for free lessons.

The campaign will include lessons Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for two weeks (course six lessons). There will be afternoon classes for school boys and night classes for working boys.

The group method of swimming was originated by George Corsan and has been followed with much success. Mr. Corsan now gives his time to conducting swimming campaigns about the country.

The local campaign will be under the direction of Physical Director A. J. Fritz, who has conducted other campaigns and taught many men and boys to swim. He has also had three months special training under George Corsan, the most famous instructor in America, and originator of mass swimming instruction work.

Boys may be enrolled by calling at the Y. M. C. A. for instruction and assignment to class. They must do so by Saturday night. All boys will be required to bring their own towel and attend classes regularly.

COLLAPSE OF SECOND NEAR EAST CONFERENCE IMPENDS

Turks Balk at Special Legal Guarantees for Foreigners—Ismet Pasha Holds for the Italian Draft, Which He Maintained Had Been Approved by the Americans—Conference Broke Up in Confusion Without Fixing a Date for the Next Meeting.

Lausanne, May 4—(By the A. P.)—The United States has been dragged into a cobtroversy that threatens to cause the collapse of the second near east peace conference. The delegates are desperately seeking a solution of the situation to prevent the rupture feared in consequence of radical differences between the Turks and the allies and the Americans over the special legal guarantees to be accorded to foreigners, instead of the former consular courts abolished by Turkey as part of the capitulations.

The controversy hinges on the authority to be granted the foreign legal advisers Turkey agreed to employ, and also upon the possible obligation incurred by the allies in their feverish activities at the last conference, when the French and Italians, aided by the American representative, intervened at the last minute in an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the collapse of the conference.

Ismet Pasha again today offered to sign the Italian formula which was accepted then but which the allies have now withdrawn, the British never ratified it. Ismet declared today during the proceedings that the Americans had distinctly approved the Italian draft.

Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, accused the allies of bad faith. He declared vigorously that Turkey regarded the legal adviser question as closed, and said she must refuse to discuss it again. Sir Horace Rumbold retorted that if there could not be discussion then it was impossible to continue the Lausanne negotiations.

The Turks said tonight that they would make no further concessions and that they would return to Angora if the allies insisted on reopening the adviser question.

The conference broke up in great confusion without fixing a date for the next meeting. The experts are continuing their work, but unless the adviser problem is compromised it is admitted there is danger of a collapse of the conference.

CONGRATULATIONS POUR IN TO CROSS-COUNTRY AIRMEN

The fliers received and sent two interesting telegrams. One, from Ezra Meeker of New York city, was as follows:

"Congratulations on your wonderful flight, which beats my time made 71 years ago by ox team at two miles an hour. Five months on the way. Happy to see in my 93rd year so great a transformation in methods of travel. Ready to go with you next time."

The telegram sent by MacReady and Kelly to Colonel Franklin R. Kenney, former executive of the air service, who presented to them $5,000, won on a wager that the flyers would successfully fly from New York to San Diego, follows:

"To do anything that needs doing is a soldier's plain duty, but when that accomplishment brings victory to a friend it makes it a pleasure. With a grateful acceptance of your splendid gift there is a satisfaction and a knowledge that it pays to be on the army air service."

Colonel Kenney telegraphed the $5,000 this morning.

Both airmen will rest until May 13, when they will fly to Los Angeles to permit the residents of that city to see the ship that now have seven world's record to its credit.

MRS. STOKES DENIES STATEMENT OF NEGRESS

She also intimated that a carefully kept diary in which she recorded events of her married life will be used by her to refute the statements of Mrs. Miller, formerly employed in a New York tea room beneath an apartment tenanted by Edgar T. Wallace, named by Stokes in his action for divorce four years ago.

Mrs. Miller in her deposition said she had taken lunches to Wallace's rooms and had seen Mrs. Stokes there in negligee. She identified Mrs. Stokes she said, from newspaper photographs. Stokes secured a rehearing on representation that he had secured new evidence in the testimony given by Miss Miller. Mrs. Stokes declared her husband had sent his secretary here to coach the witness on what to say. HIGLEY TESTIFYING IN THE MORSE TRIAL

Washington, May 4.—Inquiries into the cause of the break in 1918 between Charles W. Morse and R. P. Higley, of New York, who had held important posts in all of the Morse enterprises, and into the financial backing of the United States Steamship Company, the holding concern for the various Morse companies, occupied most of the time today at the trial of the ship conspiracy case in the District of Columbia supreme court.

Attorney Stanley C. Fowler, of New York, drew from Higley, who again occupied the stand throughout the day, another statement that at no time during his connection with the Morse companies did he come into possession of any fact showing that there was any intention of or conspiracy by the defendants to defraud, delay or thwart the government in its shipbuilding program.

The question was put after counsel had further developed the intimate knowledge which Higley had of the operations of the shipbuilding companies.

Government counsel sought to have Higley identify signatures of Harry F. Morse and N. H. Campbell, two of the defendants, appearing on a photostatic copy of the 1917 federal income tax return of the Hudson Navigation Company which was controlled then by the United States Steamship Company.

Counsel for Henry F. Morse objected not only to identification of the signatures, but to the presence in the court of such a copy and in addition asked that the court inquire how the copy had come into the possession of government counsel. Attorney Rockwood, for Charles W. Erwin A. and Benjamin W. Morse, said his clients had no objection, but the attorney for Harry F. Morse pressed the matter.

Justice Stafford did not rule, the government attorneys excused the witness. Court adjourned until Monday, stopping earlier than usual so that the attorneys might take the deposition of John Barton Payne, former chairman of the shipping board, who leaves Sunday night on his official mission to Mexico City.

The Seneca had just located the British yacht Istar, off Jones' Inlet Commander Camden said, when a big gray seaplane swooped down beside the rum runner and two of the fliers clambered aboard. The Seneca put on full speed toward the seaplane, but before she arrived, a smaller plane which had been circling high overhead, swooped down signalling the other. The gray plane's occupants tumbled back aboard and took the air before the Seneca arrived.

The sounding of the sirens bringing out thousands of Krupp workmen on the arrival of a detachment of French soldiers, is held to have been the determining factor in the clash with French troops that ensued.

Under oath, and supported by workmen summoned as witnesses, the directors testified that the sounding of sirens as a danger signal had been in practice for years and was initiated and controlled by the workmen's council. One of the witnesses said the workmen would have come out anyway as there was intense interest over the expected visit of the French troops.

Forty witnesses were summoned but only a few of them were heard today. The trial, which it was expected would be finished tonight, will continue tomorrow and probably Sunday.

Judge James H. Webb heard three uncontested divorce cases at the session of Windham county superior court held here Friday. The decree were granted in each case. Local parties were connected with two cases. The case of Alice V. Willis vs Dales J. Willis was first taken up. The plaintiff sought a divorce and a change of name. The court decided that the latter request was out of consideration as the plaintiff's name was Willis before marriage.

Alice V. Willis was married to her own cousin and she charged that her husband committed adultery with her brother's wife and it was on these grounds she sought her divorce. She testified that they were married Feb. ruary 24, 1904 and no children were born to them. At one time they lived on Main street in a cottage and on the opposite side, on Mansfield avenue, he r brother, Homer Willis and his wife resided. It was alleged that on Oc ber 4, 1920 her husband left her and did not reappear for nine weeks and about the same time Flora Willis, the brother's wife, also left home.

Stated to the effect that they were going away were left, but did not state that they were going together. Alice Willis' husband left her again on July 12, 1921, and she alleged that she had heard of intimacy between the two since his first appearance. She offered a letter written by the defendant on hotel stationery and addressed to Flora Willis, which contained endearing terms. The letter was accepted by the court.

Homer Willis testified to his wife having been intimate with the defendant. He suspected an intimacy between his wife and his brother-in-law and did not heed Flora's various excuses for leaving.

Later he found an incriminating letter. Mrs. Belle Carpenter who occupied the tenement at No. 14 Mansfield avenue, beneath that of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Willis, testified to the many visits of Delos Willis to see Mrs. Homer Willis while her husband was away.

The decree was granted by Judge Webb on the grounds of adultery.

Intemperance and intolerable cruelty were charged in the divorce case of Goulding Delina Denelli vs Harvey S. Denelli. The couple were married on Monday, December 6, 1922, and Mrs. Denelli was of the opinion that she was marrying a good man, but later became sorely disappointed. They resided with the plaintiff's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoag at South Windham and her husband treated her shamefully, she claimed. Only two weeks after the wedding she had to have medical attention as the result of maltreatment at the hands of her husband.

She alleged that he struck her several times while they were on their honeymoon. She had not as yet recovered from the mistreatment. She further alleged that he abused the whole family. When they were married he was in the U. S. army and located at Fort Wright. She paid the expenses of the marriage ceremony and loaned him money when he left her. He has never returned. Divorce proceedings were instituted shortly after his departure. Dr. W. P. S. Kealing testified to having attended the plaintiff and said that her illness developed after her marriage.

The plaintiff's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoag, testified to the abusive actions of her son-in-law towards his wife.

Judge Webb granted the divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty and the plaintiff was allowed to resume her former name of Matthews.

The last case heard was that of Ruth M. Babcock, formerly of Ontario, Canada, now a resident of Putnam who sought to secure a divorce from her husband, Harold L. Babcock. They were married ten years ago in Ontario. They have been separated for the past five years and they have one child, a girl seven years old. Mrs. Babcock testified to living in practically every state in New England with her husband and she gave a vivid story of the manner in which he abused her.

Mrs. Gladys Ferguson of Pennsylvania attended the court proceedings and testified on behalf of Mrs. Babcock. The decree was granted on the grounds of intolerable cruelty and Mrs. Babcock was awarded the custody of the child.

Only two cases on the short calendar preceded the divorce cases. In the case of Arthur Rondeau vs Ida Plante, a motion for bond for prosecution, the court fixed the amount at $75 to be filed within two weeks. In the case of Arthur King et al, appeal from probate, the same was granted.

Court was then adjourned until Tuesday morning of next week at 11 a. m. standard time.

The funeral services for Mrs. Esther Caroline Dondero were held Friday morning from the late home, 249 Valley street, and were followed by a solemn requiem high mass in St. Joseph's church at ten o'clock. CADILLAC SEDAN WRECKED AT WESTERLY STATION

(Special to The Bulletin

Westerly, May 4.—Mounting the curb, crossing the cement platform and the eastbound track, crashing through two sections of the iron fence, smashing off an iron post set in a cemented tile pipe and across the west bound track at the local railroad station, the new Cadillac sedan with Alberti R. Stillman, former judge of the Stonington town court, at the wheel, stopped when the rear spare tire acted as bumper on the edge of the west bound platform.

Judge Stillman was bringing his son and wife to the New Haven station so that Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Stillman might take the 4.53 express for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Corlton of Hartford.

The machine was swung around to back up to the platform and with car in reverse the motor stalled. Starting the motor it is probable that the accelerator was accidentally stepped on or the control at the wheel touched with the above results. The tire carrier was torn off and the gas tank connection broken. Train blocks showed a train over due in each direction. Flags were sent each way until the blocks could be set by the towerman. Mr. and Mrs. Stillman were thrown about on the rear seat, Mrs. Stillman sustaining a sprained foot, not serious enough to prevent the journey's continuance. A milk truck was used to tow the automobile clear of the overdue trains. Judge Stillman is reported as sustaining no injuries.

Wm. Anderson Declares Tanlac Restored Him To Splendid Health Recently Just As It Ended Stomach Trouble Years Ago.

"I have suffered from indigestion for a great many years but am thankful to say that I have at last found something that successfully sets as a break for my trouble; I have had two distinct treatments of Tanlac, each one with the same remarkable results," states William Anderson, 262 Central Ave., Pawtucket, R. I., well-known auto mechanic.

"I had suffered about every known symptom of stomach trouble, and did everything I knew of to remedy my condition, but got no better until about two years ago when I was induced to try the Tanlac treatment.

"At that time five bottles relieved me completely and made me so much stronger that I will never forget it.

"Well, I rested along paying no attention to my food or regularity in eating, and finally began slipping again. I lost no time in getting Tanlac, and now the treatment has fixed me up the second time. It's certainly great."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Thomas Meighan at Strand Monday.

Sparing no expense to provide a proper setting for Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," Director Alfred E. Green took his company of players to Panama where the principal scenes of the photoplay, based on Rex Beach's celebrated novel, were filmed. The company spent six weeks in the Canal Zone, the result being a picture of extreme interest and novelty.

Scenes for the picture, which will be shown at the Strand theatre Monday to Thursday, were made in Panama City, Colon, in the Canal Zone and on the island of Toboga. Among the interesting places used were the ruins of Old Panama, which was destroyed in 1625 by Morgan, the pirate; the old Cherokee prison, famous in early Spanish history of the country, and the celebrated Union club. Scenes of the Panama canal locks were filmed both from the air by government planes and from ships passing through the locks.

In Panama the Paramount company was so well liked that the president of the republic, Senor Porras, entertained the members at San Cocho, a native festival; and at the Panama race course the Thomas Meighan handicap was run and a Lila Lee cup was presented to the winning jockey.

Those who made the trip to Panama were Mr. and Mrs. Meighan, Director Alfred E. Green and Mrs. Green, Lila Lee and her father and mother, Gertrude Aster, Sid Smith, John Miltern, Lanurance Wheat, Jules Cowles, George O'Brien, Ernest Haller, William Miller, E. Pittzmier, Don O'Brien, Herman Doering, Ed Ellis, George Chennell and George Hinners.

A comedy and news are the other subjects.

At Plainfield Community House.

"Springtime" presented at the Plainfield Community house last evening under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association registered another triumph for theatrical home talent, even surpassing other successes. The tuneful musical comedy of three delightful acts was witnessed last evening by a capacity audience and will no doubt fill the Community house again this evening at the last performance.

The cast includes more than 200 local favorites, a good many of whom were boys and girls and the other representing a carefully selected and faultlessly drilled company of clever amateur performers.

The acting was unusually fine and space alone forbids us to mention each principal. The show abounded in a great variety of dances and song numbers and it is hard to say which pleased the most. The children's chorus was as usual a refreshing touch and these children taking speaking parts proved themselves real actors.

In quality "Springtime" is second to no other amateur production ever staged locally and in size it is far the greatest. Some of the scenes are dazzingly beautiful while others are magnificent in grouping, castuming and color. Those who fail to see the show at its last performance this evening will miss a rare treat. There is dancing after the performance which begins promptly at eight.

Tomorrow (Sunday) at 4 p. m. the men and older boys of the city are invited to attend the rally at the local Y. M. C. A. when moving pictures of "Niagara to the Sea" will be shown. These pictures are full of interest they show the Niagara river below the falls, the cave of the winds, the international bridge and the rapids. The picture trip takes one past Lewiston, Toronto and Hamilton, through the Thousand Islands, the Martello tower of historical significance is also shown.

One reel begins by shooting the rapids and passing through the locks. At Montreal, a view of the city is given, and a near view of Mt. Royal.

In addition to the interesting pictures, fine music will be furnished by Swahn's orchestra, and a brief and appropriate talk will be given.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"The Christian" Opens at the Bijou Tomorrow.

Few novels of this generation have been more popular in English speaking countries than Sir Hall Caine, author of the novel, "The Christian," which Maurice Tourneur has produced as a motion picture for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and which will be the attraction for five days at the Bijou theatre, beginning tomorrow. "The Christian" swept England and her colonies and the United States by storm a quarter of a century ago when it was first published.

It was dramatized and produced with Edward Morgan and Viola Allen as the John Storm and Glory Quayle, scoring a great success. It was screened about ten years ago by Vitagraph, but since then there has been such an advance in screen technique that the new Goldwyn version bears small resemblance to the earlier photoplay. It is now one of Goldwyn's twenty big super-features for the current season and has been produced on a spectacular scale.

Director Tourneur took his principals to England and photographed exteriors in London and on the Isle of Man, with the personal assistance of the author. Permission was obtained for the first time in history, to use Trafalgar square as the background for a film play. The interiors were made at the Goldwyn studios in California. The story of "The Christian," that of a man who renounces earthly love and tries to live as Christ would were He on earth, is dramatic and compelling and Mr. Tourneur has told it in a series of dramatic pictures, always filled with action and against a background of pictorial beauty.

The cast which Goldwyn supplied for the photoplay is replete with noted stage and screen names. Richard Dix and Mae Busch have the leads and are said to give magnificent performances. Other players include Phyllis Haver, Gareth Hughes, Mahlon Hamilton, Harry Northrup, Beryl Mercer, Aileen Pringle, Joseph Dowling, Mitz Devenport, Alice Hesse and Robert Bolder.

Today's bill consists of "The Third Alarm," the latest chapter of "The Timber Queen," and the Pathe News. Special showing this morning for children at 10.30. Continuous from 1.30 to 10.15.

Pretty girls, plenty of them, are announced as a pulchritudinous and necessary feature of "Thirty Days," the new Wallace Reid Paramount comedy-drama which will be the feature of the Broadway theatre for Sunday night next. The comedy was adapted from the stage farce written by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton.

Mr. Reid's attraction for women forms the motivating force of the comedy. It starts fires of jealousy in the heart of a member of the Italian Camorra and it forces Reid to immure himself in jail voluntarily to escape the murderous vengeance of this expert with the stiletto.

As an excellent foil to the beautiful women, however, are the characters of Polenta, played by Herschell Mayall and the Prison Warden, by Kalla Pasha. These players are said to be completely villainous, the villainy of Kalla Pasha being particularly funny because of the luxuries he later showers on Reid when the hero finds that Mr. Warden has been absent $5,000 careless in his accounts. Then bare walls and a board bed are replaced by feather mattresses, breakfasts in bed, a personal valet and velour curtains over the bar.

He's a dn lero prisoner indeed, is Reid, but he loses his relish for the de luxe when he finds that the murderous Polenta is confined in the same prison! It's said to be a particularly rollicking comedy, which affords excellent opportunities to amuse and entertain.

This is the last picture made before his death.

Other short subjects are on the same bille.

CANAVAN TO OPPOSE BOYCE SUNDAY IN OPENING GAME FOR LOCAL CLUB

No better attraction could have been billed for the opening game of the local baseball season than Bill Bergen's Worcester All-Stars with Hughie Canavan doing the hurling for the opposing team. Hughie is always a drawing card in Norwich. He has many friends here who like to see him win, and he also has a whole lot of enemies who glory when he is beaten. Hughie has made the crack that he could beat any Norwich team seven days a week, and twice on Sunday. Maybe he can but he has got to show the fans of Norwich.

When Hughie starts the game at the Fairgrounds Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock he will have a real team in back of him and a real team of sluggers opposing him. Manager O'Leary's team this season is made up of hard hitters, for as was demonstrated early last season, it takes hits to win the old ball games. Not only are his players hard hitters but they are fast on the defensive. Bergen's team is also one that is not to be passed up without a second glance. Old Bill has secured most of Worcester's best baseball talent, and has even gone outside to bring in some first class ball tossers so that Sunday's game will be a corker. Bill writes that he is coming down to administer a whale of a beating to the local team. Maybe he will, but we'll know he's been in a ball game before the last out is called.

With the diamond in the best condition that it ever has been, fast and smooth, the local fans should get a real baseball tidbit Sunday that will list them for some time to come. Manager O'Leary said on Friday evening that he intended to bring in the best semi-pro teams in New England this season, and that he would get a team that would be the equal of any [illegible]. With such teams as [illegible] and Fitchburg coming to town, rest assured of some fast baseball this season. Sunday's game will start the ball rolling in good shape.

There is one thing that the fans should take note of and that is that there will be only one entrance to the grounds this year. The main entrance on the New London turnpike will be used only during the season. So fans who go to the game on the trolley should get off at Backus Corner and go in by the main entrance. Both automobiles and pedestrians will use the main entrance.

The lineups of the two teams for Sunday's game are as follows:

McGOWAN'S SMASHES WIN FOR ATHLETES

New York, May 4—Late inning rallies by the Philadelphia Americans enabled them to defeat New York here today in a ten inning game by a score of 8 to 6. McGowan's home run in the 9th tied the score for Philadelphia, and his single in the 10th drove in Hauser and Miller with the winning runs.

MARQUARD PITCHES BRAVES TO 13-INNING VICTORY

Boston, May 4.—Marquard pitched Boston to a 13-inning 1 to 0 victory over Brooklyn today. The winning run came with two out in the 13th when Marquard opened with a single. Nixon sacrificed. Southworth was walked purposely. Manager Mitchell substituted Henry to run for Marquard. Henry was caught off second by a snap throw, Smith to Johnston. Boeckel walked and McInnis singled to left, scoring Southworth. The score:

NUGGETS CLASH WITH SPENCER'S COLTS TODAY

The Nuggets and Spencer's Colts will clash at the Academy campus today in the first game of the season preparatory to the opening of the Twilight league. This is a practice game for both teams, but from the lineup of the Colts it would seem that they are out to make a cleanup. The Nuggets are undecided as to their lineup but will have a first class team in the field. The lineup for the Colts will be: Mulholland c, T. Simcox p, Szudejko 1b, Zeralski 1b, "Red" Smith 2b, "Red" Simcox ss, Heebner 3b, Keenan or Guinan lf, Spencer cf, Barry rf.

The Nuggets will have "Pete" Manchester for the backstop work and Mike Kelly will do the hurling. Outside of the battery, the lineup is uncertain.

Hughes Goes to Indians.

Cleveland, O., May 4.—Jay Hughes, a semi-pro first baseman, of Oakland, Cal., joined the Cleveland Indians today. He bats and throws right handed and is a son of Jay Hughes, who pitched for Brooklyn about 20 years ago.

FOUR HOMERS FEATURE BROWNS' INDIAN GAME

Cleveland, Ohio, May 4. — Four home runs featured today's game between St. Louis and Cleveland which the Browns won 9 to 5. Ken Williams made his sixth circuit drive of the season, driving in Foster and Jacobson ahead of him in the seventh inning. Durst who followed also put the ball over the right field wall, duplicating his feat of the previous inning.

In the rst inning Speaker hit the first homer of the season on the local grounds, sending Wambsganss home ahead of him.

Durst broke into the game when McManus was banished in the fourth inning for arguing with Umpire Hildebrand when the latter called him out at the plate. It appeared in the press box that McManus had struck at the umpire, but Hildebrand denied this. Score:

THE CROSS COUNTRY LIGHT.

With the endurance flight record theirs, there was reason for believing that Lieutenants MacReady and Kelly would accomplish the feat of crossing the continent in their airplane, the T-2, without stop. It had been demonstrated that they possessed the motive power and the machine for just such an undertaking while their ability as aviators has long since been established.

Aviation has progressed to the point where such an accomplishment was feasible. The distance covered is longer than would have been required to have crossed the Atlantic. The danger of being obliged to descend in mid-ocean did not exist but the peril nevertheless of a forced descent at a point where conditions would be wholly unfavorable was before them, as well as the various air conditions that are bound to be encountered in crossing plains and mountains.

The accomplishment is an important one, and particularly so to the army since it demonstrates how effectively the airplanes can be employed in covering the country in case of necessity. From the standpoint of defense it fixes greater value on the flying machine than ever existed before. We not only have the aviators but we have airplanes and the engines that will drive them for long distant operations. It gives a new impetus to aviation activities, and even though the army is particularly concerned in this record-breaking endeavor its influence upon commercial aviation is bound to be considerable, for what is available for army operations can also be brought into use for the speedier conduct of business.

Such a record doesn't mean that it will be allowed to stand long. Already efforts are underway with the view to greatly reducing the time necessary to cross the continent, but it will give a spurt to aviation and the importance of more aviation fields scattered about the country adjacent to cities that will have a certain lasting effect upon aerial transportation. Every such accomplishment foretells bigger uses for the flying machine.

CHECKING AUTO ACCIDENTS.

Police department heads from many cities of the country have been in convention in New York this week. They have discussed a good many things. Among them the large number of automobile accidents has received much attention and there seems to have been an agreement upon the necessity of finding some method of stopping the large number of fatalities caused by motor cars, either of the pleasure type or the trucks.

They are not the only ones who have been giving much thought to this situation. It has been studied more carefully in some states than it has been in New York. Efforts to bring about a reduction have been much more successful elsewhere. In certain respects, regardless of its size, the number of automobiles and the many accidents, New York has lagged behind others in fighting the slaughter. It has held to the idea that most anyone should be permitted to drive cars and that the many deaths were offset by the fact that it is a large city and state and such must be expected.

The police heads were not satisfied to direct attention to the many accidents and deplore the situation, but they also advanced a remedy, which in their opinion will give material relief if not effect a cure. They believe that there should be established a system that will make it impossible for the careless driver to get a chance at the wheel. Perhaps it is easier to point out such a remedy than to put it into operation, but the need of it has never been a secret. It is not because of incompetence as an operator that many accidents happen but because of a recklessness, bad judgment and a refusal to give proper respect to the rights of others. With the police heads of the country alive to the need of the situation powerful assistance of the right kind should be given to the establishment of greater safety. They cannot do it alone, especially against lax regulations, but they can give powerful aid.

FRANCE'S QUICK DECISION.

There had been the hope that if Germany made an offer for the adjustment of the reparations question at this time that it would serve as a basis for negotiations that would result successfully. That view was partially based upon the offer being made directly to France. Germany has indicated that it would not open negotiations with France directly and the general offer to the allies, including France, bears out that attitude.

When, however, France acts with the speed that it has it precludes the possibility of any negotiations. And yet France was given nothing new in the offer which really called for any greater delay.

Germany had previously made larger offers than it has at this time. It had likewise offered thirty million gold marks before, and inasmuch as there was nothing that approached the French demand and nothing to arouse the confidence of France in the desire of Germany to pay all it could there was no ground for prolonged deliberation.

France regards the offer as inadequate and the guarantees as insufficient. It recognizes the difficulty in Germany's way of obtaining an international loan and it doesn't consider that its occupation of the Ruhr with the opposition that has been offered by Germany, and which it promises to continue, offsets such guarantees as it insists upon. Germany has apparently offered a sum that it can pay but France is far from convinced that it has offered all that it is able to dig up, and it isn't in the mood to accept bargain day prices at this time.

Being convinced that nothing could come from negotiations on the present basis, France figures that time is being saved by its prompt and emphatic decision.

FIGHTING PEONAGE.

Louisiana presents the latest case of peonage. It is not to be inferred that these isolated cases of peonage cover all the cases that might be found in the southern states where others have been disclosed. But disclosures elsewhere have encouraged the bringing of some of the cases to light and it is to be hoped, whether it is expected or not, that it will help to put an end to such conditions.

It makes little difference whether it is in Georgia, Florida or Louisiana where peonage is practiced it is time that different steps were taken to end it. Publicity concerning the deplorable conditions existing in the two first named states has brought the situation into the limelight in a way that reflects adversely upon them. Such efforts as have been made following the disclosures to insure better conditions have encountered stiff opposition. Such reforms as have been instituted only go part way.

Within a short time lawlessness of another type has been disclosed in Louisiana, and the way it has been dealt with doesn't give much encouragement that those who are involved in the practice of peonage there will receive any serious penalty. The chief hope lies in the fact that such acts transgress the federal law and that through such effort as the federal authorities may give to the matter different results may be obtained than would otherwise be secured.

There should be no toleration of peonage any more than there should be of lynching, but the difficulty of eliminating either in certain states is emphasized by the hold which they have upon such commonwealths.

THIS GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

However well intended the effort may have been to have the Monroe doctrine incorporated into a Pan-American treaty, this country is bound to take the position that the chairman of our delegation took the proper stand when he spoke against such a plan and emphasized the fact that the doctrine is a policy of the United States. That is what it was when it was put forth, that is what it has been for a long term of years and that is what it must continue to be.

In connection with the league of nations the attempt was made to have it rated as a regional understanding. There has been no understanding about it, except that it represents the attitude of the United States relative to foreign encroachment upon the affairs of the western hemisphere, but the pronouncement by this country alone of the protection that it assumed for the other and weaker republics. It is entirely altruistic. We sought no benefits therefrom except that which would come from preventing foreign encroachments, and we seek none today. There has not always been manifested an appreciative attitude on the part of certain countries for whom the benefits have accrued and for which they were intended, but the policy of this government has not changed, and there is no reason now for endeavoring to shirk the responsibility.

Mr. Fletcher was entirely correct when he referred with pride to the Monroe doctrine and our position regarding it. His statement should put an end to any move to have it incorporated in a treaty.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Martin Tabert, a Dakota farmer boy, starts out to see the world. In Florida the lad gets stranded and commits the awful crime of stealing a ride on a railroad. He is discovered, arrested and sent as a slave—not to the galleys, as they did in ancient Rome—but to a convict camp as they do in Christian Florida. Here the poor, defenseless boy is slowly tortured by being whipped to death by an inhuman brute, locally known as a professional whipping boss. As the victims fall out under this improved Roman mode of treatment, these convict camps run short at times of slave help to do the work required. To make up the loss caused by fatal whippings, new material is furnished by sheriffs for a large compensation. This is making them unusually active to see that the law is obeyed to the letter. The redeeming feature is Gov. Hardee, who is bringing the full power of the executive to bear upon the national disgrace.

In his report on the conference on training for citizenship and national defense Secretary of War John W. Weeks has this significant message: "Irrespective of whether these young men ever take on military obligation or not, this training helps to equip them physically, and promotes discipline, self control and habits of teamwork which are so necessary in community life." But the secretary goes on to say that the main object is to develop personnel needed in an emergency to fill up commissioned and uncommissioned grades of our citizen army. The report shows that military tactics and discipline can be taught without the expectation that they will ever be needed. It simply means adequate defense if the need should ever arise. It must be admitted that military training is fine bodily discipline. One can hardly fail to admire a marching body of young men, so straight, manly and strong. With war left out this would be a blessing.

Is it not a fact that genius borders on insanity? The funny things that a great man does we call eccentricity, but if an ordinary person should cut up the same antics, we would very likely shake our heads in sympathy, and say in an undertone "the poor fellow is out of house." Those of us who heard Count Illya Tolstoi (and what a wonderful replica is the son of his great father in looks) lecture recently in Slater hall, must have come away impressed that the elder count was eccentric all right. For lesser vagaries than he displayed many an American citizen has been committed to an insane retreat. The lecture was exceedingly interesting and showed clearly how perfectly helpless a genius is in himself, and how much he depends for immortality upon a well-balanced family. If report has it straight that the son—who owns a farm in Southbury, Conn.—carries water a mile for household purposes, he cannot be up to the standard of sanity according to our American ideals.

The ideas that underlie the convict camp contradict those that underlie our democracy, simply because the convict camp is a form of slavery. Officers of the law get all they can per head for those they sell to the camp management. Here they have absolutely no protection. If they are not worked to death they stand in danger of being whipped to death, and nothing worse than this existed under the institution of slavery in the south. But an idea has been tried also in the south (in the state of Louisiana) that is more than a mere hypothesis; something that has proved itself to be a practical working proposition. It is the plan suggested by ex-Governor Parker in trusting to the honor of a convict. There are old rounders who cannot be trusted, but the majority are not, and in treating them like human beings more work is done and stronger appeals are made to them to live upright lives.

One remarkable sample of modern business enterprise is the Sunday edition of one of our great city dailies. One is amazed at the possibility of bringing together so much diffuse matter in so short a time in such excellent shape. It appeals to every possible variety of human taste in reading matter, and it is no lack of appreciation of failure to admire the vast workmanship involved if one devoutly thanks God that he is not compelled to read the whole of it. Of course the modern method of setting type by machinery and the advancement made in photography make these big editions possible. It may be an open question whether these bulky volumes have much educational value, or particularly stimulate the mind. One may go still farther and ask the question if in these days we are not reading too much and thinking too little. In trying to cover so many subjects we are not mastering any.

In order and system there is not only beauty but also economy of space. Take, for instance, a well-arranged library. With books of several volumes, of different sizes, and various colors, all grouped together, each in its own place, and all closely packed, a very pleasing appearance is presented to the eye. More than this only the minimum of space needed is occupied. If, on the other hand, they were thrown together, hit or miss, in irregular heaps on the floor, the appearance would be ugly and space would be needlessly wasted. This idea admits of many illustrations. But I wish to apply it to the unfortunate practice of putting up dwelling houses, helter skelter, within the city limits. Beyond the city line it is another proposition. As the city grows old streets will be extended and new ones built. Houses up anywhere will interfere with this plan.

By the time these lines are in print the daylight saving scheme will have been in general use. Not long, to be sure, but long enough to see the advantage of making capital out of God's glorious sunlight. It won't hurt some of us at least, to see the rising of the sun, which many of us probably would not see, unless this early hour were generally utilized. The advantages of the scheme are numerous. The growing boy, and sometimes, the growing girl, are apt to be sluggards. It is the morning hour that makes the sluggard. Now daylight saving whispers in their ears, "go down to your aunt, you sluggard!" and immediately they rise up and go down to their aunts who have the coffee and poached eggs all ready for them. The crisp morning air gives pep to their young intellects. They throw themselves with great energy into compound fractions and other studies. As a logical result education begins to boom and the schools begin to turn out only Phi Beta Kappa students. All hail the power of the daylight saving scheme!

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Peter Goelet Gerry, United States senator from Rhode Island, who has indicated his intention to renew efforts in the next congress to have taxes reduced on smaller incomes, is an interesting figure in the national legislature, for, while nearly always siding with the masses, he is himself extremely wealthy and of circles in society that are most exclusive in Newport and in New York city. The Goelets go back to the early colonial days of Dutch control of what is now New York, and their fortune has come largely through the increment in land values in property of old New Amsterdam. Senator Gerry after graduation from the Lawrence Scientific School decided to study law, chose Providence for the practice of his profession, and in 1913 won election to congress from the Second Rhode Island district. In congress he soon revealed his superiority to a bringing together so much diffuse matter in so short a time in such excellent shape. It appeals to every possible variety of human taste in reading matter, and it is no lack of appreciation of failure to admire the vast workmanship involved if one devoutly thanks God that he is not compelled to read the whole of it. Of course the modern method of setting type by machinery and the advancement made in photography make these big editions possible. It may be an open question whether these bulky volumes have much educational value, or particularly stimulate the mind. One may go still farther and ask the question if in these days we are not reading too much and thinking too little. In trying to cover so many subjects we are not mastering any.

HOW SUGAR IS PRODUCED.

When the price of sugar fluctuates every American home is affected.

The process by which this universally used commodity is obtained from sugar cane is described by William Joseph Showalter, in a communication to the National Geographic society, as follows:

"In harvesting, the cane-cutters first strip the blades from the stalk; then they cut off the upper part of the latter, which is worthless except for replanting, since what juice it contains possesses very little sugar. One of the strange things about sugar-cane is that the sap of the growing plant has little sugar, while in the mature stalk the juice is rich in sucrose. The action of the sun's rays seems to transform glucose into sucrose—a transformation that cannot be accomplished by human means.

"The main body of the stalk is cut down and loaded into the ox-carts. In these it is hauled to the field station and placed in the waiting cars. Each car contains about twenty tons and each train is made up of thirty cars. This makes six hundred tons of cane to the trainload, and eight to ten trainloads a day are required to keep one of the bigger centrals in operation for twenty-four hours.

"When the cane reaches the mill in the most modern plants, the cars are run, one by one, into a cradle and made fast thereto. A button is pressed and the cradle rocks over on one side. The side of the car swings loose and the load rolls out into a deep trench, at the bottom of which is an endless steel belt.

"On this belt the cane is carried up to the crushing rolls. A man stands before a keyboard and by pressing the several electric buttons thereon regulates the flow through the crusher, which disrupts all the little sap cells and releases a great stream of foamy juice. Then the crushed cane is sent through sets of rollers, each time under heavy pressure.

"Each set of rolls the can passes through presses it harder than the one before. The last set may exert a pressure of a million pounds, and when the 'bagasse,' as the crushed cane is called, issues from them it is almost as dry as tinder. It is carried by conveyers to the fire-boxes of the boilers, where it is used as fuel in generating the steam that drives the big mills and boils the cane juice. The stream of crushed cane flows through the last set of rolls at a speed of seven miles a day.

"Imagine big gear-wheels fourteen feet in diameter, with cogs sixteen inches long, three inches deep, and two inches thick on their face. Such are the trains of gears that transmit the power from the engines to the rolls.

"After the juice is pressed out of the cane it is thoroughly strained and pumped into big tanks at the ton of the building, where a milk-of-lime solution—in other words, plain whitewash—is added.

"The mixture is then heated to a degree just above the boiling-point. The lime neutralizes the acid in the juice and finds affinities in some of the foreign substances. It pulls these to the bottom and plays the same role of purifier in the making of sugar that it plays in the making of iron. The heat causes the other impurities to rise to the surface as scum, so that when this preliminary process is completed in the big settling tanks there is a top layer of froth, a middle layer of clear juice, and a bottom layer of mud-like solid material.

"The clear juice is drawn off and passes through filters of excelsior. It is then pumped to the evaporators, where about half of the water is boiled out of it.

"In the more modern factories there is a chain of four evaporators working together. We all learned in our school days that the lighter the air pressure, the lower the temperature at which liquids boil. The sugar manufacturer makes use of that principle in his factory. By means of air pumps he reduces the atmospheric pressure in each evaporator to a point below that of the preceding one.

"The steam that boils the juice in the first evaporator must have a temperature of 215 degrees Fahrenheit. When this steam falls below that temperature it passes into the coils of the second evaporator, where the air pressure is so reduced that the partially cooled steam makes the liquid boil at 203 degrees. After it falls below that point the steam passes on to the third evaporator, where with a still further reduced air pressure, it is able to keep the syrup boiling until it falls below 195 degrees. The fourth evaporator has the air pressure reduced to a practical vacuum.

"The steam that has lost so much of its heat as to be unable to maintain the boiling-point in the third is nevertheless hot enough to keep the juice boiling in the fourth. Here only 150 degrees of heat is needed to maintain the boiling process. By this arrangement the juice is boiled to the proper consistency with only one-fourth of the heat otherwise required.

"The next step in the making of sugar is to draw the thick juice into vacuum pans. Here it comes into contact with hot steam coils and boils at a very low temperature because of the absence of atmospheric pressure. As the boiling proceeds, the sugar crystallizes into small grains. The man in charge of a big vacuum pan is known as the sugar master. From time to time he adds fresh juice, and its sugar gradually settles on the crystals already formed, which thus are made to grow larger.

"Finally the vacuum pan becomes full of sugar and mother syrup. The sugar and the adhering syrup are then removed to a centrifugal machine that acts somewhat on the principle of a cream separator. Placed inside a perforated basket and whirled around at from 1,000 to 1,400 revolutions a minute, all of the syrup is forced out through the perforations, while the crystallized sugar remains behind.

"This syrup is boiled again, after which it goes to the crystallizer, a huge revolving tank, in which a seed bed of crystals from the vacuum pan has been prepared. There it gradually deposits its sweetness on these crystals, and, when it has given up all that is worth waiting for, the mixture goes back to the centrifugal machines, where its adhering syrup is hurled out from this second lot of crystals. The process is repeated again, and by this time all the available sweetness has been extracted, and the remaining liquor is the 'blackstrap' molasses of commerce.

"The principle of producing sugar is embodied in the fact that water can hold only a given amount of sucrose in solution. As the water is driven out of the cane juice the latter finally reaches a stage where there is not enough left to hold all the sugar dissolved, and, as evaporation proceeds, the sugar, deprived of its water, is compelled to pass out of solution into crystal form."

Stories That Recall Others

It Was Just the Hat.

An enthusiast was shopping tirelessly for a spring hat. One by one the obliging clerk brought forth her wares, and each was rejected. Finally she appeared smiling, with a small black toque.

"This, I think, is just what you are looking for," she said.

"It is," replied the weary customer, "but where is the handbag and the bag of crackers that were with it?"

It was the customer's own hat, which she had laid on a shoecase when she entered the store a half hour before.

Ham, Sweet Ham.

He is a barber and for weeks had been brooding over the difference between packing house ham and the ham, sweet ham of home, sweet home.

"What my palate pines for," he said to some of his associates as many as a score at times, "is a slab of old fashioned country cured ham. I crave the kind that mother drags down from the hook in the smokehouse and, believe you me, I'm going home to get some."

He saved until he had enough money to go, and he went. He expected to be gone, possibly three weeks. In just three days he was back at his chair.

"Tell you, how it was. You remember I kept oratin' about the old fashioned country cured ham. Well, when I got down hom I said to ma: 'Ma I want ham and a lot of it.' And ma says: 'That's just what you're going to get!' But when she brought in a ham with the name of a packing house printed on it—well, that was when I borrowed money from the rural mail carrier and headed back for the old barber shop. The old home ain't what she used to be!"

Wives of Famous Men

Catherine of Braganza, Wife of Charles II.

Fresh from a convent and only just 17, came Catherine of Braganza, a sweet and simple little maid, to become the wife of Charles II of England. Since childhood she had lived a cloistered life, her only companions the nuns and her fellow students and naturally, she knew nothing of life, especially the intrigues of the court. Her mother, the Queen Regent of Portugal, had arranged the marriage as soon as she heard that Charles had returned from exile.

Catherine, before her marriage, had been told that she must always obey and that her duty in life was to make Charles happy. And we find her at 17, utterly innocent and unworldly, queen of a strange and frigid land. Catherine, though not a beautiful girl, had a wistful quality to her small, dark face that spelled innocence and trust to the world.

Charles, by no means in love with his Portuguese bride, was still very kind to her. Of course, it was difficult to imagine any one being otherwise; this naive child could hardly arouse dislike in persons. There was something in her quaint wistfulness that touched the sympathy of Charles, and he tried to, and for a time succeeded, in making her happy. One episode that occurred shortly after their marriage shows rather clearly the attitude of the king. He really regarded Catherine as nothing more than a child, with whom he must be rather gentle, but to whom he must not give in.

A lady of the court, who had formerly been a royal favorite, was appointed to Catherine's bed chamber. The little queen objected but he explained gently but firmly that court etiquette and private feelings were in no way related, and the lady-in-waiting was retained.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK.

The Need of a Revival.

Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—Joshua 1, 9.

It is evident that the revival we most need is one that will stir to its depths the body of professed followers of Jesus, and bring into prominence and prevalence a higher type of salvation. How can this be effected? Much depends, we are persuaded, on the spiritual condition of the pastor. It would be very unjust to say that it all depends on him; for many pastors are dealing with this matter in utmost faithfulness, and find so much resistance on the part of their people that little can be accomplished. But if the great body of the ministry were living on a higher plane the laity would feel it very keenly, and it would not be long before great results would be seen. Each class profoundly affects the other. "Like people, like priest," and like priest like people. But since the declarers of God's truth are especially set apart for this very thing much may be rightly demanded of them, and a large portion of the responsibility for the unsatisfactory condition of the churches may fairly be laid at their doors. With more courage, more self sacrifice, more burning zeal, more disregard of conventionalities. Their message must be a burning one to warm into life the cold congregation. If they have a passion for souls it will be contagious. If they aim above all things to bring men to their Saviour, to win them from sin to holiness, from self to God, it can and will be done. It will not be easy, it will cost much in many ways, but it will pay. When the whole ministry becomes evangelistic in the true sense the whole church will also become such, and the whole community will be permeated by its influence. Personal work will be done, house to house canvasses will be made, new devices will be put in operation, the triumphs of the earliest days will be more than equalled, and the glory of God will march on most signally. "Let Zion's watchmen all awake, and take the alarm they give." Let Zion put on her strength, put on God, add to the form of Godliness the power, exchange worldly conformity for divine, shake herself from the dust of mere diversion, gird herself for the battle with sin, by an absolute surrender to Christ be loosed from all the bands of her captivity and shine forth in the resplendent majesty of her might. Then shall the wilderness speedily blossom as the rose, the waste places burst forth into singing, and the kingdom of the earth be filled with the knowledge of the Lord.

Called and with a holy calling;
Called to tread the path He trod.
Who can keep our feet from falling—
Master, Captain, King and God.

THREATENING RAISE IN PRESTON TAX LIST

There was a hearing given several towns of the state by the state board of equalization, comprising the tax commissioner, the treasurer and the comptroller, this week, in the old senate chamber at Hartford. They were required to show why their tax lists should not be raised, putting them into a different class for the distribution of school money.

The state claimed that they were now less than they should be.

The town of Preston was one of these towns. Preston's present tax list is $1,055,811 and they propose to add to this a little over $500,000. It was shown on the part of the town that in the year 1919 the state board of equalization raised Preston's list over $385,000 and this was done after the state's agents had spent several days examining property in the town. It was shown that now within four years, after the state's appraisal in 1918, there having been no material growth, they propose adding to the present list an amount over half a million dollars. The town claimed this would be unjust and as great hardship to a poor and largely farming town.

It was also claimed that Preston had been stripped for the last one hundred years of the original parts of the town, which portions had increased materially in wealth and population and that there were left only the farms to bear the present increased taxation, which has had very little if any growth. The town of Griswold was first taken from Preston in 1815. In 1857 the Lauree Hill district was taken from this town. Again in September 1895 a large and important portion of the town was taken known as the Bridge district.

It was further shown that for many years Preston paid for one-half of the expenses of all bridges constructed on the Shetucket and Quinebaug rivers dividing the towns of Preston and Norwich, including three bridges built at Greeneville; the old toll bridge was also bought by the towns of Norwich and Preston, each paying one-half of the cost. The present bridge, which took the place of the old toll bridge was also built by the two towns of Preston and Norwich, each paying one-half the expense.

It was brought out in the hearing that there was no property making up the total grand list of the town of Preston outside of the farming interests, except the Compressed Air plant, Hall Brothers' mill and Dawley Brothers. All the rest of the tax had to be paid by the small farms of the town.

If the contention of the board of equalization prevails, it will put the town of Preston in the fourth class, in place of the third class where it is now. It is now getting 45 per cent. of the school expenses for teachers, etc., but if they are placed in the fourth class as the state wishes to do, they would be cut down to 30 per cent.

Decision was reserved.

There were 89 voting members in the convention.

The daughters now have as one of the chief objects the placing of a memorial in the capital at Hartford for Civil war veterans.

An impressive feature of the session was the endorsement it gave to the active and efficient work of Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury of this city as president during the past year, which was expressed in gifts made to her during the afternoon. Mrs. Jennie Finch of Bridgeport tent presented her half a dozen beautiful cut glass sherbet glasses, and Mrs. Jenny S. Newbury, department councilor, presented her a lovely gold wrist watch from the members of the fourteenth annual convention. Mrs. Atterbury responded with a graceful expression of her thanks for the gift and the pleasure and interest she had taken in directing the work for the year, while she thanked the tents for the loyal cooperation they had given in advancing the interests of the Daughters of Veterans in the state.

Mrs. Mary Griswold of Hartford, past department president, spoke of the excellent work done by Mrs. Atterbury as department president and presented her the past department president's pin.

Mrs. Alice Wilson of Hartford, presented the department treasurer, Miss Alice Slater of Hartford, a kewpie and a handsome wrist watch, and the gift of a wrist watch was made to Mrs. Lillian Brewster of this city, department secretary, who was unable to attend the convention because of illness in her family. The presentation was made by Mrs. Jennie E. Newbury.

The convention voted to send a letter of condolence to the family of Mrs. Avery E. Park, who died suddenly while reciting at the convention reception Thursday evening.

In the morning session, which was opened at 10.30 with Mrs. Atterbury presiding, ritual work that was a model for precision and completeness was exemplified by Lisbeth Turner tent of Hartford, and Mrs. Maud Baker, president of the Spanish War Veterans' Auxiliary, brought the greetings of that organization with a beautiful bouquet.

An American flag was presented to Lincoln Todd camp of Willimantic by Ann Rogers Lyon Tent No. 1, of New London, a gift from the oldest to the youngest camp among the Daughters.

At noon dinner was served to the delegates in Odd Fellows' hall by Sedgwick Woman Relief corps, No. 16. Final adjournment of the convention took place about 5.30 in the afternoon, when the delegates department for their homes. They were enthusiastic over the way the plans for the convention had been carried out in Norwich, agreeing that the arrangements had been most complete and the convention one of the most enjoyable and successful held in the state.

The committees of Clara Barton tent, No. 7, of this city, which entertained the convention made careful plans for all the details and carried them out to the great satisfaction of the officers and delegates of the state body.

MINSTREL ENTERTAINMENT BY POWER COMPANY EMPLOYES

Members of Park Congregational church were entertained Friday evening by the minstrel troupe composed of employes of the Eastern Connecticut Power company. Gray of New London, musical director and pianist, assisted by Frederick Russell, violin, and Bruce Rogers, saxophone.

CUTTING TREES AT LAUREL HILL PARK

The beginning of cutting down the trees along Laurel Hill avenue, which will be necessary because of the new cement highway to be laid there, has been made at the Laurel Hill park, where half a dozen trees on the westerly curb of the street will have to go. It is hoped that one or two of the trees on the opposite side of the street across the way from the park may be saved and they will be if the street line does not cut into their roots too much.

Regarding the question of laying the car track in the middle of the street, instead of on the side where it has been, Mayor Waters said Friday that a central location is required to conform to state regulations which provide that where trolley tracks are to be relocated they must be at least five feet distant from all poles. This would be impossible in the present location, where at some points the track is not more than 18 inches from the pole.

The committee workers are now operating in open territory but it is hoped that anyone desirous of giving money to aid in rebuilding Sacred Heart church will not wait to be approached by canvassers, but will go directly to the store formerly occupied by Disco Bros., on Main street, where there is always someone in attendance ready to receive all contributions.

WOMAN DROPS DEAD ON TAFTVILLE STREET

Mrs. Joseph Rebataille of 10 South Third avenue, Taftville, dropped dead Friday afternoon about 5.15 while walking on South B street on her way home from a visit with a friend in the village.

An automobile was secured and she was rushed to her home but was beyond all aid, death being practically instantaneous.

Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve of this city investigated the case Friday evening and found death to be caused by acute heart trouble.

Mrs. Rebataille was born in Canada 59 years ago, her maiden name being Delma Demarais. Since coming to Taftville she had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Rose Albro of 10 South Third avenue. Her husband died several years ago. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Bellerose of Taftville, and several sons and daughters.

PASSES BILL TO CONTROL PUBLIC CLOCK HANDS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, May 4.—A modified bill for the enforcement of standard time was introduced in the house this morning by the committee on agriculture. The bill as reported eliminates the provisions that state and municipal departments must open and close at the same hour throughout the state.

The bill is as follows:

"Section 1. No person, firm or corporation, organization or association shall wilfully display in or on any public building or on any street, avenue or public highway any time-measuring instrument or device which is calculated on or intended to furnish time to the general public, set, run or indicating intentionally any time other than the standard of time as defined by chapter 37 of the public acts of 1921. Any person or any officer of any corporation or organization or association violating any provision of this act shall be fined not more than $100.

The passage of the bill was opposed by Mr. Nash of Norwalk. Mr. Bell of Salisbury defended the bill and, said it was a shame and disgrace the way the law regarding standard time as established by congress and the state of Connecticut was being violated. The law had nothing to do with the hours of opening or closing of business. It makes public clocks show only standard time. Kilpatrick of Bridgeport opposed the bill. Averill of Branford moved the previous question and the debate was closed by London of Salisbury.

The bill was passed and transmitted to the senate under suspension of the rules.

DEMPSEY TO GET $300,000 FOR HIS FIGHT WITH GIBBONS

Chicago, May 4 (By the A. P.)—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will receive $300,000 for risking his title against Tom Gibbons, the St. Paul contender, in a 15 round contest to be staged at Shelby, Mont., July 4th, it was announced here tonight with the [illegible] receipts.

This announcement came when all obstacles for the match were overcome to the satisfaction of Jack Kearns, manager of the champion. Kearns will receive $100,000 in cash tomorrow as a first installment of the $300,000 guarantee and will attach his signature to the articles closing the match.

The referee situation, which caused a deadlock that threatened to be serious, was adjusted to the satisfaction of Kane, who protested Kearns' selection of Jimmy Daugherty of Philadelphia. A compromise was reached whereby Kearns agreed to name another referee in addition to Daugherty. Kearns, if he chooses, could name a man admittedly unqualified to officiate, thereby forcing Kane to accept Daugherty.

Under the terms of the contract Dempsey will receive the second $100,000 on June 15, and will receive the final $100,000 on July 2d—48 hours before going into the ring.

Gibbons will not receive a penny of the receipts until the first $300,000 is in the box office. He will receive 50 per cent of all money over this amount until the $600,000 mark is reached. After this figure is reached, the challenger will receive 25 per cent. of all over $600,000, and also will be given 25 per cent. of the moving picture rights, in addition to $2,500 for training expenses. Dempsey has been allowed $10,000 to cover his training expenses.

The only angle preventing the signing of articles today was the releasing of the first installment of money deposited in a Chicago bank by the Montana promoters.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The trolley management is one organization that is put to extra trouble and expense because of the introduction of daylight saving in some communities it serves on the local line while other communities along the route are clinging rigidly to standard time. Adoption of daylight saving time by some plants while other mills are operating on standard time makes it necessary for the trolley company to run extra early morning and evening trips to accommodate employees of the mills who use the trolley in getting to and from their work. Operation of these extra trips means additional expense to obtain approximately the same amount of revenue.

Mrs. Julian Lansing, a niece of Miss Emma Pilling, spoke at the Killingly Woman's Club on "Roumania". Mrs. Lansing lived in Roumania several years. She told some of the history of the country first. The people are temperamentally like the French and Italians she said. Their language is of Latin origin. The feudal system of land holding was used later than in most countries, the speaker said.

Mrs. Lansing said that Roumania entered the recent war on the allied side but after a time signed a separate peace with Germany by which it doubled its territory and population. She told of the beautiful Carpathian Mountains and an ancient castle there recently given to the queen. Roumania has excellent roads, modern bridges, the reason being that military service is universal and necessitates good roads. The speaker stated that the plains are very fertile, wheat and corn being the chief crops. She spoke also of the very rich oil lands and valuable salt mines in Roumania. It was of interest to note that fresh eggs may be bought for 30 cents a hundred and watermelons for 5 cents each.

Mrs. Lansing spoke of the vineyards on the mountain sides, a sight worth seeing in late summer or fall.

There are two classes of people in Roumania—the peasants and the upper class. The former are superstitious but intelligent people although they are under nourished, while the upper classes are much like the French people. They read French literature, though the early writing of Roumania was Slavic, Mrs. Lansing stated.

Before the speaker of the afternoon was announced Miss Woodworth with a few of the pupils of the fourth grade demonstrated how she has taught them appreciation of good music. Certain records were played, such as "Spring Song" by Mendelssohn; "Bacarolle" by Bach; "Ave Maria", by Schubert and the "Sextette from Lucia". The pupils listened and were able to tell correctly the names of the pieces played.

The third annual military ball of the Service Battery, 192nd Field Artillery, drew a large attendance at the state armory Friday evening and the affair was one of the most enjoyable of the spring season. Military uniforms and the beautiful gowns of the ladies made a picture that was particularly attractive. The concert was from 8 to 9 and dancing from 9 to 1. The ball was a success in every respect and from a financial standpoint will add considerable to the treasury of the organization.

Before Justice Thomas Ryan in the town of Thompson, Victor Andros of Plainfield was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail, the jail sentence being suspended, for bringing horses across the line from Massachusetts into Connecticut without having a permit from the commissioner of domestic animals of Connecticut to do so. This is the first case of this kind that has attracted the attention of the courts in eastern Connecticut for several months, but the prosecution is evidence of the alertness of the agents of the bureau of domestic animals, who are keeping close tabs on all border sections of eastern Connecticut to see that none of the state statutes with the enforcement of which they are concerned is violated.

John T. Smith, for many years overseer of weaving at the mills of the Wauregan company, has resigned his position. Mr. Smith contemplates locating in southern California.

Henry A. Wilkenson of Lowell was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Friday.

There doesn't appear to be any chance at this time that Danielson will adopt daylight saving this season, this being due chiefly to the fact that important manufacturing interests are opposed to the plan.

The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered at the morning service at the Methodist church in Attawaugan Sunday.

PUTNAM

A congregation that included city officials, members of the police and fire departments, civic and fraternal organizations gathered at St. Mary's church at 10 o'clock Friday morning to attend the funeral services for Alderman Nonorius Magnan, who lost his life in an automobile accident in Oxford, Mass., early Wednesday morning. Mayor Victor Chapdelaine and members of the common council were among those at the services.

Rev. W. Arthur Routhier was the celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem, Rev. Charles F. Bedard deacon and Rev. Adrian Dykemans sub-deacon. The Gregorian requiem was sung by a choir of male voices.

Burial was in Grove street cemetery, where many beautiful floral remembrances were banked on and about the grave. The bearers were Alderman Jerry Labby, Alderman Pigeon, Armand Benoit, Louis Beausoliel, Napoleon Dusseault and Arthur Rayno.

Active work for the organization of committees in neighboring towns will be undertaken during the coming week by J. J. Whitehead who is earnestly engaged in creating the fund to be used for the erection of a nurses' home at the Day Kimball hospital, an institution that serves all of eastern Windham county and many other sections of it.

It is hoped to increase the fund to $10,000 during the present month that the actual work of construction may be undertaken during June. Several thousand dollars already have been contributed to the fund. The urgent need of a home is a feature that has made the campaign for funds hold such an appeal for many, and it is anticipated that the response from the work to be done in nearby towns will be very gratifying.

A condition that was regarded as somewhat alarming had developed in the case of Captain Remi Delage, it was stated Friday forenoon by the assistant superintendent of the City hospital at Worcester, where the injured officer is a patient. The fact that Captain Delage began spitting up blood late Thursday has aroused the fear of hospital authorities that he is internally injured, but his condition is such that a thorough examination has not been possible to determine positively if this is the case.

Captain Delage has but two fractures, one of the thigh and one of the jaw. His skull is not fractured, as was feared was the case when he was first admitted to the hospital. At the hospital Friday he was regarded as still on the dangerous list of patients and it was not then regarded as probable that the outcome of his injuries can be determined for a few days.

Putnam men who visited Captain Delage at the hospital during Thursday found him resting as comfortably as could be expected. He was able to converse at some length with one visitor from Putnam and while this visitor was present that captain took a drink of water with evident relish.

Supt. J. W. Titcomb of the state fish and game commission is coming to Putnam May 17, for the purpose of instituting the Eastern Connecticut Fish and Game club, the membership of which has been recruited to 150 since plans for its organization were first made known about a month ago. This membership is regarded only as a start and likely will be doubled within the next few weeks, as a complete canvass of the territory in which it is to be active has not been made. Putnam, Woodstock, Thompson, Pomfret, Eastford and Ashford are the county towns from which membership is being recruited. The club will further the propagation and distribution of fish and game in eastern Windham county streams and fields and it is expected to be the means of making better fishing and hunting conditions throughout this territory.

This has been a week of much progress by the builders who are engaged in constructing additions to the plant of the Adams Manufacturing company on Main, near Providence street. The brick work for the new part is now up to the second story level and at the rate construction is going on the big addition will be ready for roofing during the present month. Laying of the floor and putting in of the windows will constitute the principal work to be done thereafter and it is now indicated that the addition will be completed during the early days of summer. No definite time has been set as yet for the beginning of manufacturing operations here. The Adams company is continuing to do business in the mill it is going to vacate at North Scituate, R. I., this plant to be razed in making way for the reservoir building operations, a project being carried out by the city of Providence that it may have an adequate supply of water.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock the funeral of Theodore Peloquin, 41, was held from his home with services at St. Mary's church, the officers of the solemn high mass being Rev. Charles F. Bedard, Rev. Adrian Dykemans and Rev. W. Arthur Routhier. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. The bearers were Joseph Caisse, Louis Miller, Henri Guertin, Samuel Jolic, Eugene Dupre and Armand Benoit.

Mr. Peloquin died Tuesday following an operation for appendicitis. He had been a resident of Putnam all of his life. He leaves his wife.

Sister Paula, who for years was Mother Superior of Notre Dame de Bon Secours, a boarding school for girls conducted in this city in the Marshall street convent of St. Mary's church, and who is very pleasantly remembered by a large number of Putnam people, on April 4 celebrated at West Hartford the 50th anniversary of her entering the novitiate in Providence, R. I., of the Sisters of Mercy. The golden jubilee observance was conducted at St. Mary's Home, West Hartford, of which Sister Paula is assistant treasurer.

Many friends, Sisters, and former pupils of Sister Paula, called at the home during the day to extend their congratulations and best wishes. Sister Paula, despite her long service, is still active and energetic and intensely interested in the affairs of hundreds of women who received their early training from her. There are any number of such women now resident in Putnam and vicinity.

The jubilee celebration was begun at the community mass which was celebrated by Right Rev. Bishop Nilan. The bishop addressed the community and spoke feelingly of the gospel of the Good Shepherd, and he drew a happy analogy between the lessons of that text and the event which the Sisters were celebrating that day. He ended his discourse by making appreciative application of Sister Paula's long and useful career. A solemn high mass was sung at 9 o'clock.

Sister Mary Paula Van de Pitte came to America from Belgium in 1870 in company with several Revered Fathers from Louvain, Monsignor Gabriels, Father Vandevyvere and Father Desmet.

She entered the Sisters of Mercy Novitiate in Providence and was stationed in Pawtucket where she taught music. At the division of the diocese in 1872, she came to Hartford, where she was professed April 14, 1872, by Right Rev. Bishop McFarland. She was among the first group of Sisters to open St. Patrick's convent, Norwich, in 1874, and shortly afterwards became Superior there.

On the death of Mother Josephine, Sister Paula became Superior of the Putnam convent, and held that position till 1913. During that period the boarding school increased and flourished to such an extent that a waiting list of pupils was kept. Her greatest joy was to see so many of the pupils become religious. Besides the large number of pupils who entered Hartford Community, others went to the Sisters of Mercy in Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Maine, and still others became Sisters of St. Joseph, Sisters of Providence, Presentation Nuns, and Carmelites.

AND COOKING WAS DIFFICULT

France in the Middle Ages—and visions of troubadours and fetes, of lilting tunes and dancing feet.

It was a brave time, with every lad a gallant knight and every lass a lady fair, and life a careless song!

We think of fragrant gardens and enchanted groves; of stately chateaus and crowded market places. It was a vivid, colorful time with romance and adventure riding gloriously over the land.

But flowers droop and fade when autumn comes, and castle walls are not proof against the icy finger of Winter. The French chansons and the twinkling feet would have been silenced and halted without life-giving heat.

The reverse side of the gay French life of the Middle Ages is not so pleasant. Their efforts to capture and bring inside the glow of the Summer sun strike us as pathetic.

Instead of a mid-summer revel on the country-side, think of a mid-winter evening in a home. Those same maids and youths who danced on the green are huddled close to an inadequate stove. Those bending trees and prodigal gardens outside are covered with snow, and now food must be cooked in that same imperfect range.

There it stands in the middle of the room, giving off, reluctantly, a little warmth and taxing the ingenuity of those wonderful old time French chefs.

The stove of those blithe days was only a short step removed from the brazier of Rome. In the Eternal City the brazier was simply a stand with a metal top on which charcoal was burned. Unpleasant and unhealthy gases escaped from the charcoal, as the brazier was carried from room to room, striving desperately to warm the atmosphere.

The French rechaud was modeled after the Roman warming pan. Here it had a fire box, into which the charcoal or fuel was put and lighted. At the bottom were openings for drafts and on top were arrangements for cooking.

But there was no pipe to carry off the smoke and the sparkling eyes of the girls were often dimmed by the fumes and steam.

These days of romance are gone, and with them the inadequate stoves. The days of science and invention supplanted the rechaud with the Sterling Gas Range, a plumed knight of the modern kitchen.

Cooking is no longer drudgery. The Sterling, built scientifically by men and women who know, has turned it into delight—a speedy, clean process which releases the housewife from the kitchen in a minimum of time. The Sterling is the armored knight which comes to the kitchen of every prudent housewife and by its magic power snatches her from the witch, Slavery, and sends her out to the garden and groves.

And it is economical. This Sterling Gas Range with its roomy cooking and oven space, with its "Instant Lighter" which lights any top burner by simply pressing a button, with its automatic oven temperature regulator which keeps the oven at any heat you desire regardless of fluctuations and gas pressure.

Yes, it is truly a plumed knight which frees the modern housewife from kitchen drudgery, shortens kitchen hours and helps her stay young and happy. Furthermore, any Sterling Dealer will offer such easy terms of payment that this wonderful range will practically pay for itself by the savings it effects.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Work on St. Patrick's church is progressing rapidly and plans are being made for the laying of the cornerstone about July 1st.

Monday, April 28, 1873.—The D. R. Holmes Steam Fire Engine company of Greeneville, together with the C. W. Tubbs cornet band, made a street parade Saturday afternoon. Their appearance was attractive and excellent. The band, which made its first street parade, played remarkably well, considering the short time that it has been organized—about six months. The band will soon have new uniforms and by the time of the parade of the fire department it will rank with any band hereabouts.

Henry Ward and W. W. Bishop, well known among Norwich people started for San Francisco on the 18th instant. Mr. Ward who had spent some 15 years in the gold regions, returned to Norwich about five years ago, but now finds the lure too strong to resist. They take the best wishes of their many friends with them.

Yesterday marked the 80th birthday of Rev. Dr. Alvin Bond, former pastor of the Second Congregational church. There was a large attendance at the service which was led by Dr. Bond who told the story of his life in the ministry, beginning in the year 1820 at the age of 25 years until the present day. Since the resignation of Dr. Bond the senior pastor of the town is Rev. Mr. Stanton, and in the city Rev. Mr. Dana.

Tuesday, April 29, 1873—Uncas lodge No. 11, I. O. O. F., celebrated the 54th anniversary of the institution of Odd Fellowship in the United States, last evening in its elegant lodge rooms. The ceremonies opened with the singing of the opening ode, to the good old fashioned tune of "Greeneville." The story of Uncas lodge, No. 11 was then told by J. L. Devotion, P. G. M., who traced the history of the lodge from the day of institution, March 19, 1843, until the present day. It was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by the lodge.

Wednesday, April 30, 1873.—A large force of men are busily engaged upon the foundation of the cathedral on Broadway which is to bear the name of St. Patrick. The basement walls are nearing completion and the corner stone will be laid with impressive ceremonies about July 1st. The material for the cathedral is procured in Meosup and carried to this city by rail to the Falls and thence carted to its destination. The cathedral will be by far the largest and finest church edifice in the city. The architect is Murphy of Providence. It is about a two years job to complete the structure and the cost is estimated at about $300,000. The Catholics in the city are contributing liberally toward the cost and no work on the structure is under taken until the money to defray the expense is forthcoming.

We learn that the ground floor of A. C. Hall's new building on Main street is to be used for a reading room. JEWETT CITY

Mrs. A. H. Vaughn of Norwich, at the invitation of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational church gave on Thursday evening a description of The Passion Play as she saw it presented in Oberammegau last year. The platform in the vestry was decorated with pots of cactus and begonia and vases of cut flowers and forsythia. Screens were placed at the rear of the platforms on which were postcards of views in connection with this production.

Mrs. L. G. Buckingham gave at the opening and close of the address. Her opening number was There Is a Green Hill Far Away, and the closing number The Cross on the Hillside. Both songs were eminently fitting both in theme and melody.

It was a privelege to hear the account of this play as seen by an eyewitness, a very different matter compared to reading the same story. It was most interestingly written and vividly described. The committee who were in charge were Mrs. F. E. Robinson and Mrs. E. A. Faust.

Sidney Melvin is showing his friends a copy of the Masonic Digest, a publication for the craft, printed in Los Angeles, Cal. It made a journey around through the Canal and was presented Mr. Melvin by an old navy acquaintance at the Submarine Base in New London. Among the attractive stories, the paper tells about how the Masons of the west help the boy scouts.

The handsome forsythias in bloom about the borough lend attractiveness to many lawns and gardens.

Early risers Friday morning were witnesses of an unusual fog display. At 5 with the mercury at forty-one, the weather was clear with a cloudless sky, at 6, a dense fog made even near by objects almost indistinguishable. At 7, the fog disappeared as if by magic.

"Bill" Christopher, captain of The House on Wheels, is back on the job as usual in charge of Mr. Gilbert's construction interests.

All sorts of preparations are going on in the borough, with an eye to home gardens both large and small. Some of those who stood by the colors during the war and worked hard to raise every kind of garden produce, have relinquished activities and are letting George do it. But they were on the job when war needs were imperative.

Interesting school news is given by Superintendent F. H. P. Clement, in charge of the schools of Griswold. The names of those nearing the ten highest marks in the class of 323 at the Riverside Grammar school, follow in order of record:

Miss Prior will be valedictorian and Miss Burdick, salutatorian. An unusual coincidence is noted in the fact that these two young misses are respectively president and vice president of the class of '23.

State road workmen are sweeping and sanding the state road in this section. Then will come the oil tanks, followed by the "wipe your feet" order, from the boss of the ballwick.

The New York and New Haven railroad has acquired recently a number of Maine Central locomotives. These have two outstanding excellencies, big numbers and big whistles. It is the delight of the company to run these machines in the night; and a no less apparent pleasure to the engine driver to exercise the unholy whistles in the night. Along after midnight Friday morning one of the Aroostook county wonders, stopped here to do a little switching. Both flagmen were "blown" out, then recalled, then when he got the "highball" he blew a couple of toots that would start the teeth in a cross-cut saw. One of those that were aroused from slep, remarked, that it was took bad there wasn't a double iron here so he could have blown his one long and three short and crossed over.

General interest was manifested in the prize spelling and speaking contest, held in Union hall, at Voluntown Thursday evening. The first mark of merit was awarded Miss Flossie Bebo; the second mention went to William Lintberg.

The judges on speaking were Superintendent F. H. P. Clement, Frank Mell and Walter Lund, and on agriculture, Charles Latham, Benjamin Gallup and Walter Clarke; on problem and project methods, Mr. Lund.

The program of unusual interest, which all enjoyed, follows:

Opportunity, Sill; To the Boys of America, Roosevelt; An American in Europe, Van Dyke; Lady Clare, Tennyson; The Leak in the Dyke, Cary; Horatius, Macauly; Martyr Chief, Lowell; Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech.

The speakers were: Elizabeth Duffy, Ida Rhode, Mildred Kinne, Isabelle Generous, Bertha Hall, Genevieve Gaudette, Flossie Bebo, Alice Conlan, Doris Bliven and William Lintberg.

The agricultural demonstrations were:

Selecting and Storing Seed Corn and Testing Seed for Germination by Fred Congdon, Lloyd Barker, William Lintberg; Planting the Tree by Bertha Hall and Lloyd Barber; Hot Bed and Cold Frames by Alice Conlan, Theodore Corlty, Helen Bullock and Floyd Bitgood; Planning and Planting a Garden by Joel Bitgood, Ella Bromley, Flossie Bebo, Rosario Russi; Propagating Plants by Emey Lamoine, William Magrey, Floyd Magrey, Victor Magrey; Storing Vegetables, by William Ritchotic, Leo Derosier, Euclide Russi, Lorraine Robinson.

The leader in this contest is now eligible to enter the district contest, where she may compete for recognition in the final state contest.

An automobile party from here, will enjoy a unique outing Sunday. It is the plan to go to Weir village, near Taunton, Mass., to witness the remarkable herring run. A man who had seen the wonderful exhibition of the thousands of fish, obedient to the spawning instinct, passing up the Weir, told the story, with absolute truth to his friends. Some showed evidence of slight scepticism. "Hal" will prove his statements by taking them to see.

Mrs. Sarah Edith Maine Miller, the wife of Elmer E. Miller, died at her home in Griswold, Friday, following an illness of but a few days. The Miller family has owned and lived on what is known as the John C. Hawking farm in Griswold for two years.

Mrs. Miller was born in North Stonington, Feb. 12, 1870, the daughter of Lester and Thankful Eccleston Maine. She married Elmer E. Miller, New Year's day, 1895, at her home in North Stonington. She was a member of the Congregational church at Preston City. She was much interested in agricultural affairs and was a member of Pachaug Grange, P. of H., and also of the National Grange. The place she occupied in her home, where every instinct of the loving wife and mother was apparent, can never be filled.

No call of the needy, for any assistance she was able to render, ever went unheeded, she was ready, at any and all times, to lend a helping hand. Her best interests were ever in her home, and she was always alert to benefit by any condition that could concern its welfare.

She is survived by her husband, and three children, Everett A., of Jewett City, and Ruth Ethel and Hubert L., who live at home.

EAST LYME WOMAN NAMED FOR NEW LONDON APPOINTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, May 4.—Mrs. Alice Hunt, wife of Harry Hunt of East Lyme, and connected with the state farm for women at Niantic, will probably receive the appointment of policewoman in New London in accordance with a vote of the city council at its session last Monday night. At any rate, Mrs. Hunt can have the appointment if she wants it, for it has been tendered her, and all that remains is for her to patrol the streets, visit the restaurants, dance halls and other places where females congregate.

City Manager Barlow tendered the position to Mrs. Hunt prior to his going to New York Wednesday, and on his return Monday it will probably be definitely known whether Mrs. Hunt will accept the job, and if she does her appointment will be made and she will assume the duties of the office as soon as she can arrange to vacate the position now held by her.

Another woman, and an out-of-towner also, who is a receptive candidate for the position is Frau Moll of Mystic, a former instructor of German at Bulkeley High school.

Joseph Caughey of New London and Mrs. Frederick Buddington of Norwich, who pleaded not guilty of the charge of adultery in the criminal superior court here last Tuesday, changed their plea to that of guilty just before court adjourned late yesterday afternoon. Judge George E. Hinman imposed a sentence of a year in jail for Caughey and Mrs. Buddington was placed in the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

Following the imposing of the sentence, Mrs. Buddington's husband applied to Judge Hinman for a divorce under the statute permitting the granting of a divorce at the same criminal session in which a person guilty of adultery is sentenced, and it was granted.

Caughey has a wife and several children residing in New London, but for two years he has been employed on a New York newspaper as a linotype operator. He was formerly employed as foreman of the composing room of the New London Telegraph prior to that paper suspending publication.

Frederick LaBain, an 11 year old youth residing at No. 197 Montauk avenue and a student at the Harbor school, was reported at the police station late last night as missing from home by the boy's mother, who stated that the lad departed for school at 1 o'clock and had not returned. About midnight, however, the boy put in an appearance at his abode and the mother informed Police Sergeant Samuel Hick, who resides near the LeBain family, of the return of the youth.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss will not open their Pequot avenue cottage this season.

The submarine base has always provided fire fighting facilities but to make the reservation as safe as possible against fire, and the personnel of the place more efficient, fire drills have been ordered, and this afternoon the fire fighting squad, together with the truck used in connection with the combatting of flames, were put through a long drill. During the drill one of the trucks struck and injured a driller, knocking him down and running over him. The victim was taken to the base hospital, where it was said that his injuries were not believed to be of a serious nature, although he will be under treatment indefinitely.

An automobile operated by Miss C. W. Latham of Noank and a machine owned and driven by John T. Hooper of No. 57 Ocean avenue were in collision late this afternoon at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Broad street. The machines came together with considerable force and as a result both were extensively damaged.

Jeremiah Twomey of New London, who was injured in an auto crash near Norwich a week ago, is still at Backus hospital in Norwich. He was so badly shaken up that it has been deemed unwise to remove him to his home in New London, as it was feared such a course might develop pneumonia. Mr. Twomey is well past 70 years of age, so it was decided to be wise to take no chances.

Norwich Free Academy ball team will be in New London tomorrow, where it will have the team of Chapman Vocational school as an opponent on Morgan park. This is the second game of the series for Chapman. It lost the first game to Stonington.

No trace has been secured of Albert Taylor, who escaped from New London county jail in this city over a week ago. He was reported to be in this city for several days, and the report was undoubtedly true, but that he is here now is not likely.

The Groton fire department was called out at 7 o'clock this evening in response to an alarm for a fire at the home of Albert Latham of No. 33 Baker avenue. The fire was located in a chimney, where a quantity of burning soot threatened to make its way to the partitions of the structure. The fire was subdued by the application of chemicals and little or no damage resulted.

Joseph Crossman and John Sullivan went to the baker shop of Nathan and Jacob Hochmah of No. 117 North Bank street this evening and engaged in a row with the two proprietors, the row ending when Crossman and Sullivan administered a beating to the two Hochmans. Patrolmen George McCaskey and Walter Rehn placed the fighters under arrest and they were later released upon furnishing a surety on a bond of $75 each for their appearance in the police court tomorrow morning on a breach of the peace charge.

Residents of Hartford continue to purchase real estate at Ocean Beach until now there are almost as many Hartford residents at the shore during the summer as there are New Londoners. Today M. Seigal of Hartford acquired the residence on the board walk owned by Benjamin L. Armstrong.

Annie M. Richmond has sold a house and lot on Crescent street to Benjamin and Mary Roberts.

Green street, between State and Golden streets, will be one of the most brilliantly lighted streets in the city within a night or two for today the Connecticut Power company caused a light to be installed on a pole midway of the block, which with an arc light on the corner of Green and Golden and a cluster light on the corner of States and Green streets, will give that section of the city plenty of light. Another light was installed on Green street, between Cross and Golden streets.

The additional lights were made possible through the petition of James F. O'Leary, proprietor of O'Leary's hotel and restaurant, to the city council, Mr. O'Leary declaring that Green street and Golden streets were not safe for pedestrians, as the darkness was so great that it afforded ample opportunity for users of the street to be attacked by ruffians.

SUMMONING PETIT JURY FOR CRIMINAL COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, May 4.—The petit jury will be in attendance at the session of the superior court in this city next Tuesday with Judge Hinman on the bench. No business has before been presented for them at this term of the court. Sheriffs have been summoning the jury today and will conclude that duty tomorrow.

Two manslaughter cases and a case of alleged abuse of a minor female child are assigned for Tuesday. The order in which the cases will be taken up has not been decided by the state's attorney today as that will depend upon the preparation of the cases. A murder case is to follow the cases named. Probably the most sensational of the trials will be that of the state against Grace McSheffrey and John Guinan.

Dr. John N. Dimon of New London is to be triad for manslaughter in causing the death of Eugene Partlow of Groton who he ran down on a Bank street sidewalk with an automobile which Dimon was learning to drive.

It is probable that the murder case against John Wilbur, a Salem farmer, will not be reached next week. That is the only murder case the jury will hear.

OCEAN AVE. HOUSE THREATENED BY BLAZE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, May 4.—A fire that did not cause extensive damage, but threatened to seriously damage the residence of Mrs. Deborah Sagan of No. 479 Ocean avenue, occurred this morning about 9.30 when a store house in the rear of the Sagan home was discovered ablaze. An alarm was rung in from Box 514, corner of School street and Ocean avenue, summoning the greater part of the city's fire fighting equipment.

With the arrival of the firemen, the fire was burning briskly for it was fanned by a strong wind and the flames were communicating to the rear of the Sagan residence. A stream of water, however, quickly subdued the fire, but with the demolition of the store house. The house was but slightly damaged. How the fire started is not known. Recently the department was called to the rear of the Sagan home to subdue a grass fire, which threatened to reach the buildings on the property.

CORONER DESMOND COMPLETES FATALITY INVESTIGATION

New London, May 4.—Coroner Jeremiah J. Desmond of Norwich concluded his investigation of the death of Mrs. Leo Brogan, formerly of No. 8 Park avenue, Groton, who was struck and fatally injured by an automobile owned and operated by Milton Card on the Eastern Point road several weeks ago, when he obtained statements of such witnesses this afternoon that he had not interviewed before. Included among the witnesses interviewed this afternoon were Card and Mr. Brogan, husband of the dead woman, who was walking along the highway with his wife when the accident occurred.

Coroner Desmond will shortly render his finding and if criminal responsibility is found, Card will be arrested and arraigned in the Groton town court, charged with manslaughter. Card, who suffered a severe nervous shock following the accident, and who was unconscious several days, has now recovered much of his former health, and was able to discuss the fatality intelligently with Coroner Desmond.

OUR FOREIGN TRADE SHOWS INCREASE

Latest figures of the foreign trade of the United States indicate that the fiscal year 1923, which ends with the month of June, will show larger totals than in the fiscal year 1922 despite the doubts which had been expressed as to the buying power of other countries or quantities of merchandise which they would be able to send to us.

The Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York reports that imports for the six months of the fiscal year 1923 show an increase of 42 per cent. over the corresponding period of 1922, while the export record for seven months for which figures are available shows an increase of about 5 per cent. when compared with the corresponding months of last year, but in the single month of January, the latest for which details are available, the gain is 20 per cent. when compared with the same month last year.

The increase in November imports occurs in merchandise arriving from every grand division, while the January exports show increases to all the grand divisions except Asia. From Europe, whose buying and selling power had been a matter of especial interest, the imports of November, the latest month for which details are yet available, show a total of $95,000,000, against $70,000,000 in the same month of last year. In exports to Europe the January figures, the latest recorded, totaled $190,000,000 against $149,000,000 in the same month of last year.

This increase in the imports from and exports to Europe occurs in the record of nearly all the European countres except Russia. From the United Kingdom the November imports are $11,000,000 in excess of those in the same month of last year, from Germany an increase of $4,000,000, Belgium 1 1-2 million dollars, Netherlands 1 1-4 million dollars, Sweden nearly $3,000,000, Norway $1,000,000, and Italy $1,000,000, though the trade from France is about 2 1-2 million dollars below the same month of the preceding year. The January exports to the United Kingdom show an increase of $18,000,000 over January of last year, to France an increase of 5 1-2 million dollars, Italy $6,000,000, Netherlands 2 1-2 million dollars, Belgium $3,000,000, and to Germany an increase of 2 1-2 million dollars, comparing January, 1923, with the same month of 1922.

In the trade with the non-European world the imports of November, the latest month for which details are available, show from Cuba an increase of $7,000,000, from Canada $6,000,000, from Argentina $4,000,000, Brazil $3,000,000, India $4,000,000, Japan $13,000,000, and China $7,000,000. Exports to Canada in January show an increase of $12,000,000, to Cuba $5,000,000, to Argentina, $3,000,000, Brazil 1 1-2 million dollars, and China $1,000,000. To Japan, India, and New Zealand the January 1923 export figures are less than in the same month of last year, the fall off in exports to Japan being extremely heavy, dropping from $28,000,000 in January 1922 to 13 1-2 million dollars in January 1923.

A large part of this January fall in exports to Japan is presumably due to a reduction in the quantity of cotton sent that country, as the December export figures, the latest for which details are shown, showed a fall of over 40 per cent. in the quantity of cotton sent to Japan in December, 1922, when compared with the same month of 1921, this reduction in quantity being apparently the result of the advance in export prices, which averaged over 25c per pound in December, 1922, against slightly less than 20c in December, 1921.

JOHN ALDEN FLOUR

Here's a Recipe For Delicious Muffins

Delicately browned muffins are as much a part of New England tradition as the immortal story of John Alden and Priscilla.

The recipe given here is a combination of the experiences of women who have been looked upon in their neighborhoods as expert cooks. No need to wonder what kind of luck you'll have if you follow these directions to the letter.

The secret in making muffins you will be proud to serve lies largely in the use of John Alden Flour. This flour, milled especially for you, is always of the same high quality and uniform texture.

Like the Priscilla of Pilgrim days you will be won by merit—the whiteness, purity and wholesomeness of John Alden Flour.

Sift flour one time before measuring and use level measurements. Do not fill the muffin pans too full, as they rise in the baking and will come over the edge of the pan.

2 cups John Alden Flour,
2 tablespoons sugar,
3 teaspoons baking powder,
½ teaspoon salt,
1¼ cups milk,
2 tablespoons melted shortening,
2 eggs.

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add milk to well beaten eggs, then shortening. Mix thoroughly with dry ingredients. Fill gem pans two-thirds full and bake in hot oven about 20 minutes.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

OUR THOUGHTS ARE MUCH ACCORDING TO OUR INCLINATIONS.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY. OUR RAILROADS.

He stood in the station, she by his side
(She is a fair, young, amazing bride),
On their honeymoon they're starting now;
It always follows the marriage vow.
He looked at the flaring railroad maps,
At the train of cars and his baggage traps,
And whispered: "Pettie, how shall we go—
By the Kankakee or the Kokomo?

"These railroad maps confuse the eye
There's the C. B. Q. and the R. N. Y.
And this one says your life's at stake
On any road but the Sky Blue Lake.
The N. E. R. L. P. Q. J.
Have sleepers on the entire way,
But I've heard the trains are much more slow
Than the Kankakee or the Kokomo."

She murmured: "Sweetie, I've heard that way
What a fine old road is the P. G. K.,
But mamma seemed to disagree,
And prefers the X. S. H. O. P.
This chart says, dearie, the views are fine
On the Texas-Cowboy-Mustang line;
But still, perhaps, we'd better go
On the Kankakee or the Kokomo."

A conductor chanced to pass them by,
And the bridegroom caught his gentle eye,
And he said: "O man with the cap of blue,
Inform me quickly, inform me true,
Which road is the best for a blushing, pure,
Young, timid bride on her wedding tour?
And tell us quickly what you know
Of the Kankakee or the Kokomo."

The conductor's eyes gave a savage gleam;
These words rolled out in a limpid stream:
"There's the A. B. J. D. V. R. Z.
Connects with the Flip-Flap-Biff-Bang-E,
You can change on the Leg-off-Sue-ville-Grand,
And go through the Pan-cake-Ace-Full Hand.
That road you name is blocked by snow—
The Kankakee and the Kokomo.

"The Pennsylvania Pittsburg Through
Connects with the Oshkosh Kalamazoo,
With a smoking car all the afternoon—
Just the thing for a honeymoon;
And the Central-Scalp-Tooth-Bungville-Switch
Goes through a vine-land country rich.
Of the road you named I nothing know—
The Kankakee and the Kokomo."

The bride said: "Honey, 'tis best, by far,
Like the dollar, we return to pa.
(That's a pun I heard while on a train
On the U. R. N. G. Jersey main)."
The conductor smiled; his eye-teeth showed;
He had spoiled the trade of a rival road.
He knew in his heart there was no snow
On the Kankekee or the Kokomo.

And the bride and groom returned to pa;
Who heard it all and then said:
"Pshaw!
If you found you couldn't go that way,
Why didn't you go on the Cross-eyed Bay?"
The bridegroom gave a howl of pain;
The railroad names had turned his brain.
He raves, insane, for evermore;
In a madhouse, chained unto the floor.
He gibbers: "Tootsie, shall we go
By the Kankakee or the Kokomo?"

THE DAYS OF OLD.

O days of old, forever past, what is the charm you hold
Which turns your sorrow into joy, your silver into gold?
Oftimes your sky was overcast, fierce storms swept o'er your way,
But with a pang of keen regret we think of you today.

Ah me! it was the promise of young life's morning hours,
The glamour of Hope's magic spell which paved the way with flowers;
She showed us all the bliss of earth—it seemed within our grasp—
Alas! it turned to worthless dross when held with eager clasp.

Life's path has wider, smoother grown, the winds are soft and sweet
Which gently touch the fading cheek, as day and twilight meet,
But oh, to know one hour again when all that life can give Seemed waiting for our hand to take, and it was joy to live!

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES.

HEPATICA: Your name has been added to the Social Corner list.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS.

May 9—Club No. 1 meets in Franklin hall, Willimantic.

TAKING TIME FOR THE CORNER PAGE.

Dear Editor and Friends: It is a very busy time but thought I would take the time to send a few lines.

Delia Deal: Many thanks for the picture and wish to say that the bell flower is perfectly hardy, but comes up a little later than some other kinds and it also seeds itself some times. Sorry you can not get out much. We miss you.

Theoda: Received the parcel; many thanks. We missed you, too.

Club No. 2 had a fine day Wednesday and a large attendance. Think the hostesses must have been very tired as they did every thing possible for our comfort.

With many thanks for the yellow slip.

SAVE STRENGTH WHERE POSSIBLE.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I am sure we are all glad to welcome the month of May on this morning of its first day in this year. The suggestions offered by Sister Potato Bug regarding helps and hints in their season, will appeal favorably to all. I think now that many are busy with house cleaning, and repairs, there are numerous ways and means that will prove helpful. Here is one suggestion. When painting or varnishing stairs that are in use every day, apply the coating first to every other step and when it becomes thoroughly dry, then finish the other alternate steps. In this way the whole flight may be done with little inconvenience to the family. We realize it is dangerous [illegible] or small children on which to step, especially on stairs, besides having to daub over the spots after boards are removed. The method of cleaning the pantry, one shelf at a time, is the best way I have found by experience. If we try to do the easiest way, and which accomplishes the work just the same, why not help ourselves all we can? Our strength is limited and we must be careful. I often think what an old lady told me, in my early days of housekeeping, which was "Never stand up to do certain kinds of work when you can sit down just as well."

For instance, some women stand up to pare a dish of potatoes, for they think it looks fizzy to sit down by a table. I believe we owe to ourselves the saving of physical strength and energy we can obtain better results every way, and every day. We never pass this way but once.

USING RHUBARB.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: I am in sympathy with Ethelyn in regard to seasonal recipes. I like to have those in mind which I can use as the new fruits and vegetables come into market.

To help the idea along I am sending two which may aid others for rhubarb will soon be here.

Little Rhubarb Pies: Cover inverted patty pans with good pastry, prick over the surface with a fork that it may puff evenly in baking. The oven should be hot at first to set the pastry; then reduce the heat and let bake until delicately browned and crisp. Remove from oven and carefully shake the shells from the tins; when cool brush the edges with slightly beaten white of egg and dip in finely chopped pistachio nut meats, almonds or shredded cocoanut. For the filling use bright red rhubarb and cut lengthwise in one-fourth inch slices; cover one pint of the pre-pared rhubarb with boiling water, bring quickly to the boiling point, drain and press out as much of the water possible. Over the rhubarb sprinkle one cup of sugar, sifted with three tablespoons of flour and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Cook the rhubarb mixture in a double boiler fifteen minutes, then add one egg beaten until thick and lemon tinted and one tablespoon of lemon juice; continue cooking two minutes, then use to fill the pastry shells. Spread each little pie with a meringue, return to the oven and finish with a marzschino cherry set in the center, with nut meats sprinkled around the cherries. The meringue may be omitted and each pie garnished with a cherry. These little pies make a delightful dessert at a bridge luncheon.

Baked Rhubarb with Hard Sauce: Cut fresh tender rhubarb in one-half inch pieces crosswise without peeling. To one pound of prepared rhubarb add three-fourths cup of sugar and one-third cup of cold water. Let stand until sugar is partially dissolved; cover and bake in a moderate oven until soft. One-half cup of sultana raisins may be cooked with the rhubarb, mixing them in with the sugar. Serve hot in individual sauce dishes with a rose of hard sauce set above each portion.

Haven't we been fortunate in having a cool spring for our housecleaning? I am about through and am looking forward to a delightful May.

Best wishes to the Corner.

MARY J.

SOME NEW RECIPES.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I am sending same household recipes.

Shoe Fly Pie: This requires three cups flour, one cup brown sugar, three-quarters cup butter, lard mixed, one teaspoon baking powder. Mix these ingredients together into crumbs and reserve about one-half cup of the crumbs to sprinkle over the top of the pies. Mix one cup molassese, one cup boiling water and teaspoon baking soda. Pour over the crumbs and mix lightly. Line pie plates with crust, pour in the mixture and sprinkle dry crumbs over the top and then bake. This quantity will make three pies.

Rhubarb Shortcake: Beat the yolks of three eggs until light and lemon colored. To them add three and one-third tablespoons lemon juice, one cup sugar and the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Beat thoroughly. Sift one cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder and one-quarter teaspoon salt together and fold into egg mixture. Bake in two layers and serve with a filling and topping of rhubarb sauce.

Maple Nut Cake: Cream one-third cup shortening with one cup light, brown sugar, add two egg yolks; mix well and add three-quarters cup milk. Sift together one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt and two teaspoons baking powder; mix in one cup finely chopped nuts, preferably pecans, and one teaspoon vanilla. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven 35 minutes. Cover top and sides with maple icing as follows: Add one-half teaspoon butter to two tablespoons hot milk, add one and one-half cups confectioner's sugar to make smooth paste, add one-half teaspoon maple flavoring and sprinkle with nuts while icing is still soft.

WHEN SEEDS ARE NOT TOO OLD.

Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: Now that spring is really here at last, many of the sisters will be preparing to plant a garden. In looking over your box of seeds you may find some that you are afraid are too old to grow. Always date the package containing the seeds that you save as well as any that you may have left over of those you buy.

The following schedule, noted from actual experiments, give the age from which you may expect seeds to grow freely: Asparagus 4 years, beans 2 years, beet 5 years, Brussels sprouts 3 years, cabbage 4 years, carrot 3 years, cauliflower 3 years, celery 3 years, corn 2 years, cress 3 years, cucumber 5 years, eggplant 2 years, kale 3 years, lettuce 3 years, melon 5 years, onion 2 years, parsley 3 years, parsnip 1 year, peas 3 years, peas (wrinkled) 1 year, pepper 2 years, pumpkin 4 years, radish 4 years, rhubarb 1 year, salsify 2 years, squash 5 years, spinach 3 years, tomato 5 years, turnip 5 years.

Some varieties will keep longer than the time mentioned, but their strength will be greatly impaired. Cucumbers, melons and squashes produce larger crops from seeds three years old than from new, from the fact that they make less growth of vine.

Best wishes for the health and happiness of each and every Social Corner sister and brother.

GRANDMA.

PLEASED WITH CARDS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I want to thank all the sisters who were kind enough to remember me with cards on my birthday, and especially Kitty Lou for the pretty little birthday gift and funny wishes she sent me. And I assure you they were all fully appreciated.

I am hoping to meet you all again when the "good old summertime" comes, and that this may be a banner year for the good old Corner.

DOM PEDRO.

HELPING CORNER TO TAKE CARE OF ITSELF.

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: If we are each one interested in Corner and tell of things that we are interested in, give suggestions that have been helpful to us and tell those that have written recipes, etc., how much they have benefited us, the Corner page will take care of itself. There will be no trying to keep it full if each member writes once in a while. I wish to thank E. L. M. and others for the way they plant pansies. I will try your way and report results. I think I will have some nice ones if I follow directions. I do love flowers and think they are a great blessing. And how much good cheer they carry the sick and shut-ins!

I wish to mention that Sister L. H. K. has been seriously ill and would love to hear from the sisters who have time to send a card. She is on the gain now but not able to get out for some time and had been under the doctor's care for some time before she was obliged to take to her bed.

One sister wrote she doesn't believe in signs. I agree with her. Many are afraid to do certain things because of certain signs. I have heard of some all my life and I am trying to forget them. I remember when a small child I was told if I cried on my birthday I wouldn't grow for a whole year. It made me then try hard not to cry, but if I did accidently, it didn't stop my growth. Then I was told the thirteenth was unlucky and seeing the new moon over the right shoulder would bring good luck. How many times have I dropped knives or folks but no one came. There is a saying if you see a pin, pick it up and all the day have good luck. I may see a pin and pick it up and have one to use when needed, one lady said her mother-in-law noticed last winter that the hired man left the shovel in the back hall after shoveling the walk, and the daughter asked after a little what made her so nervous. She said it was a bad sign to leave the shovel in the house. The daughter told her the heathen that knew nothing of civilization are superstitious but we ought to know better. The poor man had to shovel so much snow she didn't blame him for leaving the shovel handy. It did no harm to the house or folks either.

I think the letters are all so interesting and helpful. I hope all the sick will soon be well again. I would suggest that each one write and make note of the date of her birthday about two or three weeks before it comes. Then we can notice each week those just coming and send cards to them. If mentioned too far ahead to forget, or I do, unless we have a book with dates in to refer to.

Best wishes to all.

SPRY BIRD.

GREETINGS FROM OLGA.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Will try and answer the call for members to write.

Well, I have attended three gatherings this year, and had a most enjoyable time at each one.

About two months ago in company with Jennie I called upon Kitty Lou, and had such a pleasant visit.

Kitty Lou is a most charming person, and made us so welcome, and when we left gave each some lovely flowers, and to myself a fancy holder to put my clippings in when sewing, which I find so helpful. She also served us the most delicious cookies, which she had made. I fell in love with her and hope some day you may all have the pleasure of meeting her.

Jennie: I did not attend the March meeting in Willimantic. I was confined to my bed with the grip. It kept me a prisoner there four days.

Ma of Greene Gables: I feel as you do about being out doors, and as I have plenty of veranda room can do so. I hate to bring my chairs in, in the fall.

Iola: I do love to read your letters, and about the little red schools, etc. I was not living in the country then, so missed all those good times.

Must thank all who sent me such lovely Easter cards and also birthday cards. I really do not feel worthy. But am pleased just the same. Thanks, Nanny Lou, Student, Bonie, Mabel, Red Rose, Jennie, Anna Mell, Mollie Make Believe, Grace, Lavender, Red Clover, Effie M., Retta M., Anna A. T., Delilah Deal and Hope Cobweb.

Delilah Deal: I do wish I lived nearer, I would certainly go and call on you. I have never forgotten the lovely day I spent with you when you entertained The Corner sisters.

Betsy Bobbitt: I did enjoy reading the account of your trip.

Theoda and Nanny Lou: My love and sympathy goes out to you in the loss of your dear ones.

Anna Mell: Am glad you are so nicely situated; will try and call on you before very long.

Good afternoon.

OLGA.

HOME MADE EXTRACTS FROM FLOWERS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: As it is nearing the time for violets and roses I am sending recipes for home-made extracts from flowers which some of the sisters might like to try.

Fill a gallon jar with rose leaves, being particular that no insects are hidden in their midst. Take about one pound of nice, sweet butter and drop into the jar with rose leaves. Cover all with a strong brine. As butter is susceptible and easily corrupted by a bad odor, in like manner it absorbs and retains a sweet one, imparting the most delicate rose flavor to anything which it is put into. A small piece the size of a hickory nut will give an apple pie a delicious flavor. The same with a cake; using of course a larger piece. A little experience will soon enable a person to judge the right proportions. This if kept carefully covered with brine will keep for a long time. The brine is just salt and water and the strength of the salt and water in an always well filled jar is the talesman which keeps it pure and sweet.

Violets treated in like manner will yield the same results. Either of these extractions form delicious flavoring for candies.

FRECKLES.

A TEAPOT HOLDER.

Dear Corner Sisters: It is with regret that I cannot furnish Delilah Deal the directions she wants. I have the directions for a teapot holder which she might like nevertheless. It is called the ear of corn holder and is made of yellow Germantown wool and green silk on quite coarse knitting needles.

Cast on 45 and work with two yellow threads. Row 1: Knit 3 sts with one thread; take the other thread and draw it tightly across the back of the knitted stitches to produce a curved effect like a kernel of corn. Knit the next 5 sts with the second thread and draw them up with the first thread. Use these two threads alternately in this way across the row.

Row 2. Knit back, taking first the thread which was used in making the next to the last kernel. Knit as in preceding row, except that you must keep the thread on the wrong side of the work, which in this row is next to you. The secret of success in knitting this holder is the drawing of the threads to form the kernels. They must be drawn tightly and not allowed to slip. Knit back and forth till you have 25 rows of kernels, then instead of casting off take a yarn needle and draw the knitting threads through the stitches pulling them up and tying tightly. Draw the other end together to correspond in shape.

Finish by adding a tassel of green silk at one end and a crochet ornament as follows which will give a green top to ear of corn: Pick up a loop through the end kernel, make three ch, and one double, very loose, in each of the remaining eight kernels. Three ch, 2 doubles between every double underneath, and fasten to 3 ch. I never knew anyone to fail in making this holder, if they were careful about keeping the thread tight. It is very pretty when finished.

TESS.

MAKING YOUR OWN CLOTHES.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Doing things in a hurry doesn't mean getting all fussed up. It means to make every motion count.

How many try to make their own clothes? I used to try and fix up my clothes when I was a child. My mother died when I was very young. While she was living I had everything nice. I was 10 years old when she passed away.

I used to get out my pattern and cloth, lay one on the other and discover I hadn't noticed if the goods had a nap or an "up and down." I'd lift the pattern, examine the goods, and when the pattern was on once more I couldn't find my scissors. Usually they would be discovered under the goods, and by the time I'd get them where it would do the most good it would be time to go to bed, and I'd fold up the pattern and lay aside the goods for another day.

But I kept at it. I learned by every mistake I made. Everything costs something, and the price of "knowing how" is summed up in the things you do or don't do, till you know which is correct every time. When you have cut for one arm several times running you will be careful not to make up anything that has right and wrong side till you are sure you are right.

If you cut a velvet gown (as I did once) without due regard to the "run" of the pile, you'll find yourself developing resourcefulness when it occurs to you to put the whole thing into the washtub and by the simple process of washing and ironing evolve a gown of "mirror velvet" which will be just as good if not better than throwing the wrongly cut fabric away.

As Jennette says, personally I learned ages ago if I wanted to wear good clothes, I'd have to make them myself —and it's worth learning.

After a time I took a dress to remodel. I thought if I spoiled it hopelessly there was nothing really lost. Persevering is our best watchword. When sewing for yourself it's a game. Don't let your slowness discourage you. Learning to make your own clothes sometimes means the right to stay by your own fireside when otherwise you would need to join the army of wage earners.

I think with most women of today that the modern young woman should be trained to earn her own living. However, I am old-fashioned enough to believe that if all girls were trained to make or remake the clothing they must have, there would be a better chance for the girl who would rather stay home but must work for her clothes, and an easier life for the girl who has to work anyway for small pay.

It's a long step from the fussy, half fearful attempts I recall with amusement to looking into a shop window or the page of a magazine and making up what I fancy with only that pictured ideal in my mind's eye. But the distance you travel means the difference between your clothes and every woman's.

I learned that if I couldn't afford exclusive models, I could have them specially designed by myself, because I could put a touch of embroidery, the bit of beading on the collar of real lace that only my taste could supply.

And once you get interested in making your clothes you will want to learn to embroider, to bead, to braid. Perhaps you will even carry your ambitious self into the public library some day and learn from books on lace making how to make Venice, Irish and needlepoint, pillow lace, and all the real laces that mean the elegant touch when used on the plainest gowns. But if you go that far, here's hoping you can conquer pillow lace. I learned the other but had to "pass" the pillow stuff.

With best wishes for all.

KITTY LOU.

RECIPES SUGGESTIVE OF SPRING.

Dear Sisters: All these recipes are tested and all serve six people for breakfast: Stewed rhubarb, omelet and bacon, variety corn cake, coffee.

Wash (don't peel) your rhubarb, cut up in little cubes; now put in your double boiler one of water, let sugar dissolve, now add three cups of rhubarb, cooking until soft and the syrup thickens.

Omelet and Bacon: Fry one dozen slices of bacon until crisp, remove bacon from the pan and pour off grease, leave about one teaspoon of bacon fat, add one teaspoon of butter, then beat eggs separately, adding six tablespoons of hot water to six eggs, stirring hot water in yolks, put in one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, one teaspoon of salt, beaten into the egg yolks with the hot water, turn the whites after beating into the yolks; have your omelet pan hot and pour your eggs into the pan while open and let get a golden brown on each side. Close omelet pan and set off stove three minutes, the steam furnishing the cooking. Serve while hot with bacon and lettuce.

WHITE WINGS.

ALL HAVE A PART TO DO

Dear Social Corner, One and All: Another moon has rolled around and we are preparing for the May day dinner. We are looking forward to a pleasant time. Calla Lilys advice was timely and good. We must all look to oil that the interest in the Corner may be kept up and that means that all have a part to do. You have heard me say many times that each one must come prepared to sing a song, tell a story, or dance. My recent birthday gave me the evidence that my friends in the Corner had not forgotten.

Scottie: Your yard was received with pleasure and the sentiment was uplifting and hopeful.

Student: Again I am under obligation and pleased to have another link in the tie that binds.

Lou: Very welcome was the birthday card, but I will have to meet you to recall the pen name.

Grace: Will have to give me something more definite before I can locate you. Thanks, just the same.

While I am quite a Yankee I am unable to guess who is in North Franklin as that is the postmark, but it is just as gratefully received.

STILLWATER.

PLEASED WITH CARDS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I will write a line to tell you I am better. I had the grip and a cold and was sick several weeks. I went to the conference in New London and enjoyed the sessions very much, but got more cold and was sick and had the doctor three times. Now I am feeling quite well again.

I want to thank the sisters for the birthday cards on April 26. I had 20 cards.

Wishing all success to the editor and writers of the Social Corner, I am as ever,

SALLY SYCAMORE.

WHICH HAVE THE BEST CHARACTER, MEN OR WOMEN?

Dear Cornerites: "He knows the world and does not known himself." Individually we do not know our real selves. We are made up of two personalities—one good and one bad. The former we idealize for own self-gratification, the latter we ignore as far as we can. Yet each one of us would be the better for knowing our weaknesses as well as our strength, and if we dared ask a competent judge whom we would confidently believe, most of us would like to do so.

Whether women or men as a whole have better characters it is hard to say. Women, I think, are more sympathetic and men are more just. Men have a great deal of their sentiment knocked out of them during the stress of their daily life. If the sad truth must be told, business is apt to breed a spirit of distrust in one's fellowman. Yet in spite of this one finds, perhaps, more genuine friendships among men than among women. I don't mean to say that men are more sincere and less prone to dissemble their feeling than women. It seems to be true, at any rate, that you will find violent open antagonisms among men, while you rarely find them with women. A man who hates another rarely troubles to hide the fact, yet if one is to believe half of what one reads it is common enough for women who detest one another to embrace like the best of friends. And smile as sweetly at each other as if they were in entire sympathy.

There is another aspect of the discussion which is equally interesting—whatever is good or bad in our character, be we men or women, not only affects ourselves but those around us. A tactful person can make a whole roomful of people feel happily conveying to them individually a tacit recognition of their individual accomplishment. To tell a girl that is a little shy that she is charming is to transform her and make her exercise her charm.

To tell a man if he is dispirited that he is courageous and clever is to put into him such an infusion of strength that he will be on the high road to success. Sometimes as we get our faith in ourselves shaken. Things go wrong, quite by themselves: it seems as if the cause must be our own limitations. If we know that this was not so we should quickly overcome our troubles. Then it would be like a sincere friend with us continually giving us hope and encouragement.

So it is that accurate self-knowledge is a good thing individually and collectively.

ETHELYN.

CANNING RHUBARB WITHOUT SUGAR.

Dear Cornerites: With the price of sugar soaring and no immediate relief in sight there are some who may feel that the canning which they had planned for the summer months will therefore be seriously reduced. Canning is not done for the sake of the sugar, but for the fruits which are preserved. As there is nothing to take the place of fruit in the diet as a good source of natural sugars, mineral and acids, as well as the bulk which it provides, it is important to hold to canning, sugar or no sugar.

It may seem early to be talking about canning, but gardens will very shortly be given first material in the form of rhubarb. Rhubarb, because of its large amount, of cold, may be preserved without the use of sugar, and without processing. The method, known as the cold water canning follows: Wash rhubarb thoroughly. Dip it in boiling water, then pack in clean jars immediately. Fill the jars with cold water and seal it. When the rhubarb is used next winter some sugar will have to be used to sweeten it, but by that time a reduction in sugar price is probable. Use a granite kettle when cooking rhubarb because of the acid.

Of course, if preferred, the cold pack method may be used. Blanch one or two minutes; cold dip; pack in jars and process 15 minutes in hot water bath, or 5 minutes under 5 pounds steam pressure. Canned rhubarb may be used as sauce or in pie, short-cake, bread-pudding, or dumplings. Canned rhubarb may be used to make conserve when the season is most favorable for the other ingredients. Later in the season rhubarb juice may be canned, as it makes an excellent drink either alone, or as a foundation for grape, orange and other fruit drinks.

Large life and a full page for the Corner.

MAY PARTY FOR CLUB NO. 1.

Dear Social Corner Pals, Club No. 1 meets at Franklin hall, May 9, to which I trust you'll all lay aside cares and worries, and come. Bring plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon, and all the pleasant, smiling faces.

We need you Sis Hopkins, Cretia, Remember Me, A Pleasant Guest, and all the rest, whom we haven't seen for several meetings.

To those who are ill or shut in I extend cheerful greetings and best wishes for a speedy recovery. Please bring pieces instead of cake, this time, or money (a quarter or more, as you feel that you can give); also a pencil.

Will have entertainment if YOU stay and help make it at this May party.

"Sighs and moans soon sorrows become and are not good for the best of us; smiles and trials make sinners saints and therefore may be good for the worst of us."

Yours for a good time.

HOPE COBWEB.

MAYTIME.

Dear Social Corner: Surely everyone must be a little happier in May, which is the very best month of all. It is a good time to make a new start in life when nature is beginning all over again. We are never tired of watching for the birds to arrive and feel joy to see the flowers and trees awake from their long sleep.

For some time I have been interested in reading The Corner letters and would like to join.

Of Those Who Have Been Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I had a bad pain in my left side and I could not lift anything heavy without having a backache. I tried different things. Then I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and began taking it as the directions said. I feel very good now and can do all my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to all my friends, and you can use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. HATTIE WARZON, 870 Garden St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I had some female troubles that just run my health down so that I lost my appetite and felt miserable all the time. I could not lift anything heavy, and a little extra work some days would put me in bed. A friend had told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I gained in every way, could eat better and felt stronger. I had found nothing before this that did me so much good."—Mrs. J. GRACE, 291 Wolfs Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

MARKET FLUCTUATED.

New York, May 4.—Short covering operations and extensive purchases by so-called "bargain hunters" late today checked the reactionary trend of stock market prices. The decline was not halted, however, until after professional speculators for the decline had again undermined the market with their selling orders and carried more than two score popular issued to their lowest prices this year.

Bankers generally have not been disturbed by the bear campaign. In some quarters it has been regarded as a healthy correction of a weakened technical condition. Hundreds of weak accounts have been wiped out and stocks generally are believed to be in much stronger hands.

The general unsettlement of prices extended to the commodity markets. A break of over one cent a pound in cotton carried it five cents below the year's high and to the lowest levels of the year. Raw sugar was offered at 5 1-2 cents a pound, an overnight drop of 1-2 a cent. Wheat prices also yielded slightly.

Among the prominent stocks to sell at the lowest prices of the year were United States and Bethlehem steels, Texas company, Pan American B. Corden, Baldwin locomotive, Marine preferred, U. S. Alcohol, American Ice, National lead, Lehigh Valley, New York Central and Lackawanna railroad. The extreme losses in these issues ran from one to nearly five points but a few of them actually closed at small net gains on the day.

One of the most erratic fluctuations took place in Stewart Warner speedometer, which dropped 12 1-8 points from yesterday's high to 90 1-2 and then rallied four points from its low figure. Other large losses were recorded by American Ice, Ann Arbor preferred, Atlantic Gulf, New York Air Brake, Union Bag & Paper, Federal Mining & Smelting, Eastman Kodak, and Jersey Central, all off 3 1-3 to 4 1-2 points. American Can closed nearly three points higher and Fleischman Yeast 8 3-2.

Call money opened at 4 1-2 per cent, and advanced to 5 in the last hour. The time money market was somewhat easier with an increasing number of 60 and 90 day loans arranged at 5 1-4 per cent. Commercial paper also displayed a somewhat easier tone, most of the prime names commanding 5 per cent.

Foreign exchange rates were irregular. Demand sterling declined nearly one-half a cent to $4.62 1-2 and French francs half a cent around 6.66 cents. German marks were quoted around .0027 1-4.

BOND MARKET.

New York, May 4.—Firmness of the active U. S. government bonds in today's trading which sagged throughout the general list strengthened belief that the liberties are being purchased heavily for the account of Great Britain, to meet interest payments on the English debt to America, the government bonds being acceptable at par. Gains in the U. S. government issues ranged from 1-32 to 11-32 of a point.

Seine 7s recorded a gain of 1 point, while City of Prague 7 1-2s and Marseilles 6s each dropped a point. The Mexican bonds continued in demand with fractional gains.

Railroad mortgages turned definitely heavy in today's trading, losses of from 1 to 1 3-4 points being registered by New Haven 7s (Francs), Denver & Rio Grande Refunding 5s, Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio 6s, Norfolk & Western convertible 6s, Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5s, and New York railways refunding 4s.

While there was considerable selling in the industrial list, the losses generally were small and a few of these lists showed net gains on the day. Punta Alegre sugar 6s were up 1 1-4 and New England Telephone & Telegraph 5s, 3. Eastern Cuba Sugar 7 1-2s and Union Oil of California 6s each dropped 1 1-4 points and Northern States Power Refunding 5s were off a point.

Total sales (par value) were $11,641,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, May 4.—Halting of demand for wheat resulted from stock market weakness today, and wheat prices toppled down. Wheat closed heavy, 3-4 to 1 1-8c net lower, with July 1.18 1-4 to 1.18 3-8 and September 1.16 7-8 to 1.17. Corn finished unchanged to 1-2c decline, oats 1-8c to 1-2c 'a 5-8c off, and provisions at the same as yesterday's finish to a setback of 7 cents.

Before the influence of breaks in the stock market began to take effect on wheat traders' nerves, the price of wheat had an upward tendency, helped by an unexpected advance in Liverpool quotations. Buying of wheat quickly subsided, however, and the value of wheat began to shrink when word spread that numerous stock quotations had touched a new low price record for the year. The early gains in the wheat market were soon more than wiped out, and as prices continued to descend a good deal of selling was done by houses that of late have been conspicuous on the bull side.

About the only buying of wheat near the end of the trading session came from speculators who were recent sellers and who were in a position to collect profits. Bearish sentiment was further emphasized by reports that Minneapolis flour mills were running at 40 per cent. capacity and that flour shipments were much below normal. On the other hand, crop damage advices from parts of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the result of dearth and sufficient moisture, were virtually ignored after the course of the stock market put other factors in eclipse.

In the corn market, persistent buying on the part of cash houses helped to uphold values fairly well in the face of the late weakness of wheat. Elevator interests gave some support also to oats. Provisions were governed more by the fluctuations of grain than by the hog market.

STONINGTON

The boat-house belonging to E. S. Darrell of New York, is the latest break discovered. A canoe was stolen from the property. The shutters were pried off and the window raised, and it was then easy work for the thieves to then open the front doors and take the canoe. It is blue and can be easily recognized.

The moving pictures shown for the benefit of J. F. Trumbull, W. R. C., Thursday evening drew a large number and the proceeds will go toward the purchasing of a monument to be placed in the G. A. R. lot in Stonington cemetery.

Miss Lucretia Staplin, is nursing a badly injured knee, due to a fall on the sidewalk while leaving the house of C. B. States on Grand street. Children had tied a cord to the fence and hydrant and it tripped her up causing her to fall to the sidewalk.

A tea was given Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wells R. Fowler on Elm street in honor of Miss Ruth Bindloss of the borough whose engagement was announced to Edwin Davis Hawke of Waverly. Miss Bindloss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Bindloss of Stonington.

HOUSE PASSES SALARY BILLS FOR OFFICIALS OF THE COURTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, May 4—Among the appropriation bills passed in the house today was one of $10,000 for the armory at New London. $9,000 at Norwich.

Salary bills passed were the following: Clerk of court of common pleas of New London county $1,200 and assistant clerk $1,500; clerks of the superior court for New London county $8,000 of which the assistant shall receive $3,000; a sum not exceeding $1,500 per annum may be taxed for expenses; State's attorney for New London county $3,000; messenger of supreme and superior court at Norwich $1,500; sheriff of New London county $5,000; clerk of superior court for Windham county $3,000; in Tolland county $3,500 of which $500 shall be paid to the assistant clerk. $1,400 is allowed for expenses in Windham county. The state attorney in Windham county is to receive $2,300 and in Tolland county $1,900. The sheriff of Windham county is to receive $3,500 and Tolland county $3,300.

The sum of $1,000,000 is appropriated for repair and construction of state aid highways and the same amount for construction of trunk line construction.

Divorce Law Amendment

Among other bills passed was one amending the divorce law in full it reads:

Section 5386 of the general statutes is amended to read as follows: If the plaintiff shall not have continuously resided in this state three years next before the date of the complaint, it shall be dismissed unless the cause of divorce shall have arisen subsequently to the removal into this state, or unless the defendant shall have continuously resided in this state three years next before the date of the complaint, and actual service shall have before been made upon him, or unless the plaintiff was domiciled in this state at the time of the marriage, and before bringing the complaint shall have returned to this state with the intention of permanently remaining.

Opposed Windham Sheriff's Salary

When the salary bill was reached and the motion to adopt was put by the speaker, Mr. Hyde of Brooklyn arose and sought to introduce an amendment reducing the salary of the sheriff of Windham county. After a long parliamentary debate as to the admission of the amendment the vote was reconsidered and the amendment was read. Mr. Hyde gave a long story of the short comings of the sheriff and thought an increase of his salary was a waste of the people's money. Mr. Darbie of Killingly said that a few weeks ago the member from Brooklyn was complaining about the county commissioners, but he has shifted his grievance to the sheriff. The sheriff of Windham county is a capable officer and has performed the duties of his office. At the last election he received the largest majority ever given any candidate for that office.

The amendment was rejected and the bill was passed. A rising vote would have disclosed lack of a quorum.

The gasoline tax bill eliminates the payment of the tax on gasoline used for the propulsion of motor boats.

The bill concerning granting a license to practice surgery and medicine was taken from the table on motion of Mr. Buckley. He stated that the committee on the judiciary had held a consultation with the state medical examining board and had received assurance from that body that Doctor Moriarty would be given a fair and impartial examination without prejudice and on his motion the matter was indefinitely postponed.

State Hospital Treasurers

An act reported favorably by the judiciary committee repeals sections 1706, 1718 and 2213 which in effect abolishes the office of treasurer, at the state hospitals at Middletown and Norwich.

Hope to Close Business Thursday

House Leader Buckley announced that it was hoped that all business before the legislature might be accomplished by Thursday of next week and that a recess be taken till June 6th.

Representative Southwick of Cornwall in a graceful speech presented a large cluster of carnations to the chaplain. It was responded to in a tender way by Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Fenton of Windham was called to the chair and presided with ability.

SENATE

An unfavorable report was received in the senate today from the committee on roads, rivers and bridges on the bill, introduced by Senator Ells, for the appointment of a three-headed highway commission. Senator MacDonald of the committee said the committee was very much surprised at the small attendance at the first hearing, notwithstanding the fact that all the selectmen of towns in the state had been notified of the hearing. At the second hearing only two persons appeared in favor of the bill and over eighty against it. Senator MacDonald said the committee did not think the highway commissioner should be hampered by a division of authority. During the 16 years the highway department has been in existence there have been only two commissions a record which no other state in the union had. On the motion of Senator MacDonald the report of the committee was accepted and the bill rejected.

Insurance Agents' Bill Passed

The bill, favorably reported by the committee on insurance to require that the qualifications of insurance agents shall be established before agents are allowed to solicit insurance was taken from the calendar for consideration, and passed.

AUTO ACCIDENT INCREASES CALL FOR SAFETY CAMPAIGN

In view of the alarming increases being noted in automobile accidents in the state of Connecticut, the department of motor vehicles has announced that on May 15 it will begin an intensive safety campaign throughout the entire state.

Both fatal accidents and less serious accidents during the month of April far exceeded last year's figures. The weekly report of the department issued for last week shows that one hundred and forty-five serious collisions took place in the seven large Connecticut cities upon which the statistical bureau keeps detailed records. These cities are Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, New London and Meriden.

Taking into consideration the population and the total automobile registration, Hartford is named as the worst city in the state for the past week. The Capitol City has fifty-one serious accidents chalked up against it, one of them a fatality.

New Haven had thirty-four major accidents, and follows second on the list. New London is again the best city in the state with but three collisions in spite of an ever-increasing registration list.

The department of motor vehicles further reports that the general accident situation in the state is becoming worse and worse, with both fatalities and less serious accidents increasing by leaps and bounds. Up until May first there were 3,300 major automobile accidents that had been reported to the accident division of the state department. This figure is nearly twice as large as the figure given out on the same day last year. Fatal accidents have also taken an alarming jump, April's list being larger than any other April since 1919, and larger than the combined records of January, February and March of this year.

During the first three months of 1923 there were sixteen fatal accidents in Connecticut. During April alone there were nineteen, an alarming number even for a summer month when all the cars in the state are in use.

In view of this situation, the department of motor vehicles has announced that a safety campaign will be begun on May 15 and will continue until the situation is materially improved, probably lasting until early in the fall. The campaign will be carried out on the same lines as last year's campaign, but will be much more extensive. Co-operation is being asked by the department officials from the police departments in the various cities, big automobile owners, business clubs, newspapers, and all other agencies interested in the prevention of the loss of Connecticut life and property.

The reports on the seven cities last week show a material increase over the same week last year, one hundred and forty-five being the number this year and one hundred and six being last year's figure.

The individual cities are listed as follows:

City.	This Year.	Last Year.
Hartford	51-1 Fatal	33
New Haven	34	17
Bridgeport	23-1 Fatal	25
Waterbury	17	10
New Britain	11-1 Fatal	5
Meriden	7	5
New London	3	7

EVERGREEN TREES PLANTED AT TWO FIRE STATIONS

Through the courtesy of the board of park commissioners of the city two of the fire stations have received small evergreen trees to be planted outside the station. One has been planted in the center of the grass plot at Central Fire station, two at the Thamesville station. No. 6. Other local stations have no grass plots where trees could be set out or they would also have been taken care of by the park commissioners. The trees were grown in Mohegan park and are perfect specimens.

CROWD AT OPENING OF ELKS' ANNIVERSARY FAIR

Norwich lodge of Elks, No. 430, opened its five-day silver anniversary fair Friday night on the grounds at the Elks' home with an attendance of over 1,500 and a program of attractions that filled the evening with features.

At 7.30 a parade with 300 in line marched from the home to Washington square and back, headed by Swahn's band, with James M. Osten as marshal. Mayor Milo R. Waters and members of the common council were guests of the lodge in automobiles in the parade, and when the line had returned to the home the men filed into the spacious grounds at the rear of the building which had been fitted up for the fair.

ARTHUR F. CAMPBELL
Exalted Ruler

His honor the mayor and the common council members were seated on a stage at the rear of the building, from which Exalted Ruler Arthur F. Campbell voiced the lodge's welcome to the assembled crowd and introduced Mayor Waters for the formal opening of the fair.

Mayor Waters commended the pure Americanism that is a distinctive principle of the Elks and wished them success even beyond their expectations as he declared the fair formally opened.

This was followed by the excellent vaudeville program of the evening, every one a top-liner, and including the Three Kelly Sisters in singing and dancing, the Franklin Brothers in acrobatic acts, the Misses Emerson and Omega, a novelty musical duo, and the Nonpareil Trio, young men who were kings of harmony. The same performers will appear again this (Saturday) evening, and Swahn's band will play on the grounds both Saturday and Monday evenings.

The grounds in the rear of the home were gay with an arrangement of a score of booths in white and purple, with streamers of flags overhead, brilliantly lighted by electricity. A great variety of beautiful, useful and attractive wares were offered to suit all tastes, while four automobiles, a Reo, a Nash, a Durant and a Ford, that will become the property of some of the patrons of the fair, attracted admiring attention as they were displayed side by side on a platform.

During the next four days while the fair continues the Elks promise to make it the most notable entertainment feature that the city has seen for a long time and the promise is that the grounds will be thronged each night.

Dancing is arranged for in the hall in the Elks' home, which was filled all the evening, and a popular program was furnished by Herb Smith's orchestra which had the snappy music that the dancers liked.

By DAVID CORY

A Call on Professor Crow.

Well, nothing happened as Uncle Lucky, Little Jack Rabbit and Miss Mousie crossed over the bridge, although I was afraid something might as I mentioned in the last story, and when they reached the other side the tollman at that end, who was a big, yellow rooster, said:

"Cock-a-doodle-do!
The sky is lovely blue.
The daisies smile on field and hill
And Jack has gone to school with Jill,
And all the hens are in the nests.
With snow-white eggs beneath their breasts,
And, by and by, you'll hear a peep
When, through the shells, the chicks will creep."

"Call me up on the 'phone when they come out of their shells," said Uncle Lucky. "I'll come over and bring them some lollypops," and away he went with Little Jack Rabbit and Miss Mousie.

"Stop at that little green house, please," said Miss Mousie, after a while, "for my aunt lives there and she always has a piece of cheese on her pantry shelf." Then out jumped the little mouse and the two little rabbits left her there to eat the cheese with her nice kind aunt.

"Now, where shall we go?" asked Uncle Lucky.

"Let's make a call on Professor Crow," answered Little Jack Rabbit, so the old gentleman rabbit turned down a lane that led into the Shady Forest and by and by, after a while, they came to the pine tree in which Professor Crow had his home.

"There he was, sitting on a limb, with his little wisdom book wide open, and when he saw the two little rabbits he said: "Listen and I will read you something from my Wisdom Book."

"Never break the Golden Rule
Always get in time for school;
Don't be cross and don't be pert.
And never cry when you are hurt."

After that the wise old bird closed his book with a snap and off dropped a pine cone to the ground.

"That's a very good lesson you've just read," said Uncle Lucky. "Wait a minute and I'll copy it down in my note book. It may remind me some day to be more patient when things go wrong."

Then Uncle Lucky tooted his horn three times and a half and drove away and after a while and maybe a smile, the Old Brown Horse came prancing down the road. Oh me, oh my, he seemed as frisky as a two year old colt.

"Hello there!" shouted Uncle Lucky. "Look out or I'll run over you!"

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

POETRY

LOVE'S ROSARY.

All day I tell my rosary
For now my love's away;
Tomorrow he shall come to me
About the break of day;
A rosary of twenty hours,
And then a rose of May;
A rosary of tattered flowers,
And then a holy day.

All day I tell my rosary,
My rosary of hours;
And here's a flower of memory,
And here's a hope of flowers,
And here's an hour of tearful wife pain
For old forgotten years,
An hour of loss an hour of pain,
And then a shower of tears.

All day I tell my rosary,
Because my love's away;
And never a whisper comes to me,
And never a word to say;
But, if it's parting more endears,
God bring him back, I pray;
Or my heart will break in the darkness
Before the break of day.

All day I tell my rosary,
My rosary of hours,
Until an hour shall bring to me
The hour of all the flowers . . . .
I tell my rosary of hours
For O, my love's away;
And—a dream may bring him back to me
About the break of day.

—Alfred Noyes.

TWILIGHT.

When I was young the twilight seemed too long.
How often on the western window seat
I leaned my book against the misty pane
And spelled the last enchanting lines again.
The while my mother hummed an ancient song,
Or sighed a little and said: "The hour is sweet!"
When I, rebellious, clamored for the light.
But now I love the soft approach of night,
And now with folded hands I sit and dream
While all too fleet the hours of twilight seem:
And thus I know that I am growing old.

O granaries of Age! O manifold
And royal harvest of the common years!
There are in all thy treasure-house no wars
But lead by soft descent and gradual slope
To memories more exquisite than hope.
There is the Iris born of olden tears,
And thrice more happy are happy days
That live divinely in the lingering rays.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM CURTLY REFUSE TO CONSIDER GERMANY'S REPARATIONS OFFER

Have Sent a Joint Note to the Allies Announcing Their Determination to be Paid in Full—Will Not Consider Any Proposal Until German Resistance in the Ruhr Ceases—The Reply Makes No Counter-Proposition and Leaves the Question at a Complete Deadlock.

Paris, May 6 (By the A. P.)—France and Belgium have categorically refused to consider Germany's recent offer of thirty billion marks as reparations.

The refusal is contained in a joint note sent the allies yesterday and delivered to the German ambassadors in Paris and Brussels this evening.

The note criticizes point by point the German offer, and in doing so announces the determination of France and Belgium to be paid in full and not to consider any proposal until German resistance in the Ruhr ceases.

Surprise is expressed at the German pretensions, which, the note says, would mean tearing up the Versailles treaty. In the final paragraph it remarks: "The German government, if it will only look into its own heart, will not be astonished that such a bargain should be refused."

After mentioning a number of objections to the German proposals, the note continues: "The French and Belgian governments should add that the present proposition of Germany is altogether unacceptable from several points of view. Germany's offer does not represent even one-fourth of the sum fixed by the reparation commission and recognized by Germany as the amount of her debt to the allies. France and Belgium have declared on several occasions, and they are led to repeat now, that they cannot accept a reduction of their own shares and although they are ready to offset them with inter-allied debts they are obliged to collect the remainder to repair the terrible disaster the German invasion inflicted upon the two countries."

The note lays strong emphasis not only on the inadequacy of the money offer, but condemns the vague terms, and rejects the idea of an international commission replacing the reparation commission and the allies as a final tribunal. It also emphasizes German failure to offer security that her obligations as enunciated in the new note would be met, remarking that under the German plan with all its shortcomings it would amount "once again only to some words on paper."

The note denies the truth of the German assertion that France and Belgium violated the treaty by entering the Ruhr, but, on the contrary, asserts that the German offer, in several essentials is incompatible with the treaty. The document sets forth how the treaty procedure was followed in a legal way by fixing reparations, which Germany formally accepted, and adds: "Since then she has not kept the engagements she made; a partial moratorium was granted her, but she has not even fulfilled her reduced obligations."

France and Belgium, it is pointed out, hoped for pacific co-operation in the Ruhr on the part of the industrialists, but Berlin prevented this, for "it was not the population, but the German government that willed and organized resistance."

The note further says: "The treaty obligates Germany not to consider as an act of hostility any penalty imposed after the reparation commission has declared her in default." It recites phases of German resistance and then repeats the declaration: "The Belgian and French governments cannot take into consideration any German proposal so long as this resistance lasts."

It is set forth that France has advanced one hundred billion paper francs, chargeable to Germany, while Belgium has advanced fifteen billion, and "there remains for each of them, besides their pensions, more than half of their damages to repair."

"The economic interest of France and Belgium, the economic interest of the whole world, and justice itself," continues the note, "require that the ravaged countries shall not be condemned to ruin themselves longer to promote enrichment of their debtors."

The note refers to German building in the Ruhr and elsewhere, while the devastated regions suffer, and declares: "Belgium and France are resolved not to suffer this iniquity."

It analyses the thirty million mark offer, quoting the German note's phrase that part of the sum is "elastic," and remarks: "The figure you indicate would, according to the German government, be the maximum, and it would be easy for Germany again to put it in controversy before it became a reality."

The note recalls the German protests against the uncertainty of reparations as damaging to her credit, asserting: "Germany said and repeated that what prevented her from keeping her engagements was that she did not know the final figure. Now she reduces the fixed part of her debt more than three-fifths, reduces the indeterminate part more than seven-eighths, but retains the indeterminate feature."

It asks if the allies have not some reason for believing that Germany may again revert to her original contention and declare that only the fixed part of her debt can be paid, under the pretext that she does not know her total obligation. It is pointed out that twenty billion gold marks payable to 1927 means a four years' moratorium, and that that sum, discounted at six per cent would be worth only 15,220,000,000.

"These uncertain propositions," adds the note, "are accompanied by reservations that will enable them to be put in question in a few months' particularly as even this payment is not guaranteed in full, the balance unpaid being subject to interest at 5 per cent."

Even less assurance, according to the French, is given for the payment of the two amounts of five billion each, as these depended upon the decision of an international commission as to whether they should be paid.

"Such conditions," continues the note, "make impossible any serious estimate of the real value of the offer, and besides, the French and Belgian governments in common accord at Paris rejected the idea of replacing the reparation commission with international commissions, as the treaty established the reparation commission, and France and Belgium will not abandon their rights under the treaty."

The German terms respecting security for payments are described as "most vague and obscure," and although the reparation commission and the allied governments had long tried to induce Germany to attempt to stabilize her currency and reform her finances, yet Germany was still silent on the measure she proposed to take.

"Quite as vague and quite as visionary are the indications given by the German government regarding the guarantees of security she is ready to offer France," the document continues. "She does not speak of Belgium, and that oversight seems to all at least strange, when it is recalled how Germany acted toward the country whose independence she promised to protect."

The note reviews the German requirements for the evacuation of the Ruhr and in general the restoration of the status quo ante as a basis for negotiation, and repeats the French and Belgian declaration that "the newly occupied territories will be evacuated only proportionately as payments are made; there is nothing to change in this resolution."

The German note, it is declared, "from beginning to end, is a badly veiled systematic revolt against the treaty of Versailles; if it could be considered, it would result certainly in the total and final destruction of the treaty, in the necessity of negotiating another and in the moral, economic, political and military revenge of Germany."

The joint note sums up all of the German expressed and implied conditions with their unfavorable effects on France and Belgium, and says: "The return for all these sacrifices France an Belgium would receive once again some words on paper."

In commenting on the German suggestions for international procedure looking to peace, the note declares: "France and Belgium cannot content themselves with the new German declarations; they must have certainties."

HOW FRENCH REPLY IS REGARDED IN ENGLAND

London, May 6.—(By the A. P.)—The French reply to the German note was officially communicated to the British foreign office today and seems to close the door completely on any concerted action by the allies, at any rate for the present.

The French government is considered to have treated the British government with somewhat scant courtesy; it paid the compliment of imparting the contents of the proposed Franco-Belgian reply twenty-four hours before the reply was actually delivered, but clearly without the slightest idea of such procedure leading in the direction of a joint allied reply.

Briefly, the Franco-Belgian reply charges the German government with fomenting passive resistance in the Ruhr and declares that any resistance to any penalty imposed because of the German default is in violation of the Versailles treaty, and it declines to entertain any German proposals so long as that resistance continues, moreover, it repeats previous declarations that any reduction of German reparations can only be considered as an offset to inter-allied debts.

The reply makes no counter-propositions, and therefore leaves the question at a complete deadlock. It is understood that the French government intimated to the British government that it would be ready to cooperate whenever some definite reparation program had been drafted and fixed, but that while France and Belgium have been left to act alone in an effort to compel Germany to honor her obligations, they consider themselves entitled to act alone in the present matter.

While it would be difficult to find a single English paper ready to endorse the terms of the German note, it would be almost equally hard to find a paper justifying the curt French rejection. There is much sympathy for France in her just demands for adequate reparations, but none whatever for the view that the other allies are not concerned in the negotiations, especially since Germany offered to submit the question to an international commission, to enter into a Rhine pact under the treaty, and otherwise displayed general willingness to participate in any reasonable negotiations.

The French reply will probably be raised in the discussion on the foreign office vote in the house of commons Thursday, while Chancellor Cuno is expected to reply in the reichstag Friday on the third reading of the budget.

KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY EN ROUTE TO ROME

Modane, Franco-Italian Frontier, May 6.—(By The Associated Press.)—King George and Queen Mary of England passed through here about 8 o'clock this evening on their way to Rome, where they will be the guests of the Italian sovereigns at the Quirinal Palace. The engine was driven by the chief engineer of the Italian railways and was decorated with British and Italian flags.

STRIFE AT THE CHURCH CONCLAVE IN MOSCOW

Moscow, May 6.—(By The A. P.)—Internal strife has developed in the church conclave. Krassnitsky, head of the living church council, refused to attend the ceremony this morning at the cathedral, where, with even more spectacular rites than at the conclave meeting, the Priest Vedensky was formerly installed in the presence of a great crowd as archbishop of Moscow.

Krassnitsky, whose group outnumbered any other single group in the conclave, expected to play the leading role. Instead, he was overshadowed by the combined forces of the Siberian Metropolitan Peter, Mentropolitan Antonin, head of church, regeneration, and Vedensky's apostolic group.

In the seclusion of his monastry cell, while the leaders of the other factions were enjoying banquets in celebration of Vedensky's elevation, Krassnitsky said that owing to "influences which could not be overcome," the living church group had been prevented from holding a caucus. Before the conclave opened it appeared as if the Krassnitsky group, which had accepted the communist party programme, was strong in the favor of the government.

LAPSE OF MEMORY WAS CAUSED BY DANCING

Bridgeport, May 6—An "end to this dancing foolishness", attributed as the cause of a nervous breakdown that brought on a lapse of memory and sent to Chicago Miss Elizabeth Colt, 22 years old, of Litchfield, last Monday, when she was expected at her Litchfield home, resulting in a three day nation-wide police search for her, will be insisted upon by Charles H. Colt, president of the Litchfield bank, the girls father, he declared today. Miss Colt made her home during the winter with an aunt in Montclair, N. J., expending her energy, her family said, in assisting teaching aesthetic dancing.

On her return trip from Chicago, Miss Colt was aided by R. M. Stuart Worthey, Jr., 26 years old, a salesman employed by the Sprague Meter company of 30 South avenue, this city. He was in the Harvard class of 1919, is a grand nephew of Rear Admiral Schley and the son of Ralph M. Stuart Worthey, vice president of the Fifth Avenue Building company, 200 Fifth avenue, New York City.

PASSENGERS AND SEAMEN TAKEN FROM AN ICE PACK

North Sydney, N. S., May 6.—Battling their way for 13 miles over ice packs, 53 passengers and seamen of the ice bound steamer Kyle reached shore late today. When the adventurers came to the edge of the ice pack they discovered it was drifting seaward. Fishermen observing their plight put out in dories and took them ashore.

The Kyle, which left St. Johns, N. F., nearly a month ago, is stuck in heavy floes about eight miles off Cranberry Head. Today it was decided to send a party across the ice for provisions. Twelve of the 53 passengers, anxious to reach land, accompanied the seamen on the rough voyage over the piled up floes.

The vessel after fighting ice for 18 days in Fortune Bay left Port Aux Basques, N. F., last Sunday and was a full week at sea on her way to this port, a distance ordinarily covered in a night's sailing.

MANY PERSONS WATCHED MAN DROWN HIMSELF

Thompsonville, Conn., May 6.—Within sight of many persons strolling along the banks of the Connecticut river near here this afternoon, Mark E. McQuillan, 44, manager of a boarding house, took off his hat and coat and leaped into the river at the foot of the Enfield dam. He swam rapidly to mid-stream, threw up his arms and sank.

Because of the swift current and the flooded condition of the river men who ran to the scene were helpless to effect a rescue. McQuillan's body has not been recovered. Police expressed the opinion that he had committed suicide although his family declared there was no reason for his act.

He is survived by a widow and two small children.

ADRENLIN HYDROCHLORIDE FAILED TO SAVE INFANT

Dallas, Tex., May 6.—The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ginn, seemingly dead at birth, its latent life vivified by an injection of adrenlin hypochloride by physicians at Baylor hospital Friday night, yielded finally in the struggle for existence, dying early today.

Use of the heart reagent was at first thought to have aided the child sufficiently to give it a chance for life.

Raid by Bandits Near The Shantung Border

Peking, May 6.—(By The A. P.)—Bandits killed one foreigner and carried off 150 passengers in a raid near the Shantung border on Tienstin-Pukow railway today. Miss Aldrich, of New York, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and daughter of former United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich was among the passengers but her fate is unknown.

The foreigner killed is believed to be a Rnussian. The minister of communication late today telegraphed General Tsao-Kun and the civil military governor of Shantung asking that troops be send to surround the bandits.

The express train was north bound from Soochow when attacked by the bandits who disarmed soldiers estimated at 1,000 strong and tore up a stretch of the railroad track. Fifty first class and second class passengers were carried off, it was reported here. Six foreigners escaped.

MISS ALDRICH WAS A RESIDENT OF PROVIDENCE

New York, May 6. — Miss Lucy Aldrich, sister of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., left New York last winter on atenur of the world accompanied by a traveling companion, it was said today, at the home of her brother, Winthrop W. Aldrich, Wall street lawyer. No word had been received for her recently, it was stated.

Miss Aldrich was a resident of Providence, R. I. Most of her time in the United States was spent at the family country place in Warwick.

Her brother, who is a member of the law firm of Murray, Prentice and Aldrich, attorneys for the Rockefellers, said later that she had been out of the country about a year and he was under the impression that she was soon to leave China for Japan with several Standard Oil officials who have been touring the Orient. One of those traveling with Miss Aldrich, he said, was a Miss McFadden. Miss Aldrich was accompanied by a maid.

RECLUSE MURDERED IN SHACK NEAR DANBURY

Danbury, Conn., May 6.—State police investigating the disappearance of George Hultz, aged recluse whose four room shack was burned early Saturday morning, declared today that they had found enough evidence to convince them that the man had been murdered and had been thrown into a pond near his home in Topstone, eight miles from here. When Hultz's burned house was first discovered, a trail of bloodstains leading from the ruins to Umpawaug pond was found while in the blood soaked vest was later discovered.

Today state police announced that a human tooth had been found in the bloodstained grass while the imprint of a heel on the edge of the pond near the mooring place of a rowboat. It is the theory of the police that Hultz was killed, his body dragged through the grass to the boat and then towed out to the middle of the pond and sunk. It is believed that the house was fired to cover up traces of the crime.

Umpawaug pond was dragged today without success but the officers working on the case were not satisfied that the pond had been thoroughly explored because of its great depth in places. The ruins of the shack were also searched again but no traces of Hultz's body were found, and police are convinced that he was not burned.

Efforts to determine whether Hultz had a large amount of money in the shack were made on the theory that he was murdered for his money. He is said to have kept his life savings in the shack and is known to have drawn pay from his employer a short time before the fire was discovered.

State police said that in many ways the case was similar to that of William Tibbitts of Fitchville, who disappeared a month ago. In both cases the men lived alone and in both cases a trail of blood led to a body of water. Police are also investigating the activities of a gang of men against whom Hultz testified in a murder case some years ago.

Defendant In Suit For "Freedom Of The Air"

Photograph © International, N. Y.

Hundreds of thousands of radiofans, the country over, are interested in a trial which soon will decide the question of the freedom of the ether to radio amateurs. The plaintiff in the suit is Edward Mc-Williams, banker, of Dwight, Ill., and the defendant is C. Wylie Bergman, also of Dwight, nationally known as an amateur radio broadcaster. The suit is entered to restrain Bergman from operating his station on the ground that it interferes with the operation of other radio apparatus in the town. The case is the first of its kind and its decision presumably will set a precedent that will govern all amateur radio operation in the future.

MACHINES COLLIDE AT CORNER IN WILLIMANTIC

Willimantic, May 6.—The first of the usual quota of Sunday afternoon automobile accidents during the summer season occurred about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the corner of Jackson and Union streets when one car crowded into the rear of another machine. William A. Jeacks of South Windsor was driving his Overland machine down Union street, headed east, and Miss Ellen Marchelle of Danielson was coming down Jackson street in a Studebaker car.

Another car intercepted Miss Marchelle's view and when she came to the intersection of the streets she did not see the Jencks machine until it was too late to avoid an accident. Both rear wheels of the Overland were demolished, but the Studebaker escaped damage. The matter was reported to the police department and Miss Marchelle agreed to pay the damage to the Jencks machine.

WAR BETWEEN DAYLIGHT SAVERS AND "DIE-HARDS"

Willimantic, May 6.—Advocates of daylight saving time had better step lively in Willimantic or else they will lose their cause to the "standard timers," who have been unusually active within the past week, and have secured enough adherents to warrant the calling of a special city meeting by Mayor Charles A. Gates to reconsider the vote taken last Monday evening, when it was voted to change the local clocks by a majority of about 25 out of a total of 500 votes cast, it is said. It is claimed that about 300 signatures of standard time advocates will be presented at the special city meeting, and it is expected that strong opposition will be met from the daylight savers, many of whom stated that they would not be outdone. All in all, anything but a quiet meeting is anticipated.

Legal arguments will also be heard, as many claim that the laws of Connecticut forbid the changing of clocks, as the result of an act of the senate and house of representatives in the general assembly, approved on March 24, 1921. An effective point brought out by the daylight savers is that Willimantic people are going to find things inconvenient unless they adopt daylight saving in conformity with surrounding towns.

The petitions mostly represent the employes of local mills who can live more or less independently of the hours outside of the city, but there are hundreds of school children, business men and commuters to whom an hour's difference may mean a great deal and who have already felt the handicaps of the opposition to a change here.

STAFFORD SPRINGS LIQUOR FINES TOTAL OVER $800

Stafford Springs, May 6.—Louis Yacavone, Angelo Titano and Patsy Exposito, who were captured in the big liquor raid at the Harding place Friday afternoon, were unable to pay the fines assessed by Judge Heald in the borough court and were taken to Tolland jail Friday night. Early Saturday morning friends from Springfield, Mass., came to the rescue and paid the fines and costs, amounting in all to $805.26, and the men were liberated. Yacavone's fine and costs amounted to $269.42, Titano's and Exposito's $219.42 each.

The raid was the biggest ever pulled off in this section, and the state police under the direction of Officer Harmon had a busy day in dismantling the stills. The paraphernalia was on exhibition at the borough hall Saturday and a good many people went to the hall to see it.

When the officers went into the building they found the four stills in operation; each one set upon a brick fireplace and coal was used for fuel. Rubber hose and force pumps were being used to transfer the 3,000 gallons of grain mash into the huge copper boilers, from which the vapor passed into the coolers, which were supplied with water from a large water tank in the attic.

The water had been piped from a spring on the hill a quarter of a mile away. As soon as the distilling process was completed, the finished product was bartered ready for market. The moonshiners had a complete distillery and were doing business on a large scale.

The finished product tested at 120 proof. That they had intended to protect themselves from intrusion is evidenced from the fact that a small arsenal was maintained near the stills. The state police with Deputy Sheriff Hayes pounced on them unawares and the moonshiners were obliged to threw up their hands.

In addition to several rounds of cartridges, the officers found a 44-40 rifle, a single barreled shotgun and a .38 caliber rifle, all loaded and ready for action, near the stills. The property in which the moonshiners operated is on the hill northwest of the village of Staffordville and is owned by Joseph Bruce and although it was an old abandoned house prior to its occupancy as a distillery, Mr. Bruie was collecting $50 a month rent for the place. Mr. Yacavone, who was the leader of the moonshining gang, said that Mr. Bruie never went near the place and did not know for what purpose it was being used.

Mrs. J. B. Aborn of Ellington has been engaged as organist at the Congregational church. Mrs. T. F. Mullen will be the soprano soloist. The other members of the quartet will remain as at present: Mrs. Irene Schaff, alto; Alfred Long, tenor, and Harry E. Burwell, bass.

Mr. and Mrs. John Foster, who have been at Lynn Haven, Fla., all winter, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Cooley and daughter Jean and Mrs. William Mortrail are spending two weeks at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lazzerin have gone to South Bend, Ind., where Mr. Lazzerin is employed as assistant designer in a woolen mill.

TOURING CAR HITS GIRL AT WESTERLY

Westerly, May 6.—On her way home Mildred Armming of Willimantic, returned and reported to Officer Fred T. Mitchell an accident in Stillmanville at 6.15 Sunday night. Driving a seven passenger touring car from Pleasant View she was passing 122 Canal street where Mary Giradino resided at that number, was bounding a rubber ball on the sidewalk in the pursuit of which she rushed into the street. The driver pulled over to the left hand but the Giradino girl ran into the right hand fender.

In company with Medical Examiner Michael H. Scanlon and Officer Mitchell the Giradino home was visited. Dr. John Ruisi had been called and reported examinations showed injuries were a badly bruised left arm and left leg. Accidents of this nature are almost daily happenings.

Despite the prominence of the female volunteers in the ranks of the militant "fascisti" of Italy, nearly all women of that country are home bodies.

Why we Feel Achey, Stretchy, Indolent & Weary in the Spring

DURING the winter months our bodies are constantly being subjected to sharp and sudden changes of temperature which act as shocks to all of our organs. We rush from the bitter cold and biting winds of outdoors into our over-heated and ill-ventilated homes or places of employment, then back again into chilling snow or cutting sleet.

But the temperature of our bodies remains the same during all the sudden changes that we make from very cold to very hot surroundings, because an even temperature of our blood is absolutely necessary to a normal activity of our organs. So it must be clear that whenever we pass from a hot and poorly ventilated place into the cold fresh air of outdoors, we impose an enormous stress on the delicate mechanism that keeps the temperature of our bodies the same, year in and out. It must also be clear that there is bound to come a time when we will feel the consequences of this stress in one way or another.

So we need not be surprised, then, that when spring arrives and the mild weather tempts us to open the windows and admit an abundance of fresh air or to take walks in the warm sunshine, we feel a bit achey, stretchy, "happy" and lack energy. These symptoms simply mean that the organs of our bodies are slowly adjusting themselves to the new and more favorable climatic conditions, and that in doing so they are forced to show some signs of the burdens that were placed on them during the long months of sudden and severe changes of temperature. The symptoms that we generally experience when spring arrives are the same symptoms that most people experience when they migrate from one country to another; we have to become acclimated when we move from one climate to another, and during this adjustment to new atmospheric conditions there is bound to be some interference with the functional activity of our organs. In other words, we have to become acclimated to Spring, and this accounts for the fact that we usually feel indolent and weary while the adjustment is taking place.

But sometimes the stress imposed on our organs during the trying months of winter leaves them in a debilitated condition, so the adjustment of the body to its warmer surroundings is inevitably slow. When this is the case, we should assist our organs by taking a good general tonic and restorative. We should take a preparation that enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and invigorates all the organs of our bodies. A preparation that contains the elements that are necessary in the production of vital forces will hasten the adjustment of the body to the new climatic conditions, and it will flood the body with fresh energy and robustness. Such a preparation is Wincarnis.

For almost fifty years Wincarnis has been used by those who feel achey, stretchy and weary when the mild weather comes. A great many physicians prescribe it for those who lack stamina or feel nervous or debilitated. It is an excellent tonic for men or women who are in a run-down condition.

Begin taking Wincarnis today. You will be surprised how quickly your system will respond to its extraordinary invigorating virtues.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

During the filming of exterior scenes for Rex Beach's novel in Panama, Director Alfred E. Green sent William Miller, cameraman, into the air to get certain scenes of the locks for use in the picture. While at a high altitude, Mr. Miller was able to get a shot which gave a glimpse of both the Atlantic and Pacific.

In making other air views for the picture, seven DeHavilland planes and two Martin bombers, all furnished by the U. S. army in the canal zone and piloted by army flyers, were used. The army officers who helped the Paramount company in making these scenes for The Ne'er Do Well were Major F. Walsh, Captain Smith, Captain Minter, Captain R. Quinn, Lieut. Leland Miller, Lieut. Moon, Lieut. Webster and Lieut. Fred Clark. All of these officers are stationed at France field, canal zone.

In The Ne'er Do Well Mr. Meighan is seen as the shiftless son of a man of wealth who is disowned by his father after a certain escapade in New York which results in the young man being shanghaied on board a steamship bound for Panama, where he is left penniless and thrown upon his own meagre resources. Here he meets Chiquita, a beautiful Spanish girl, played by Lila Lee, and their love romance is not only prolific of highly dramatic developments but ends in the regeneration of the young American ne'er do well. The supporting company is excellent.

An added extra comedy feature is the Christie comedy Babies Welcome. The usual news weekly will also be on the program.

Broadway Theatre.

An excellent and diversified program of B. F. Keith vaudeville is promised for the first half of this week at the Broadway.

Max Zimmer offers a novelty balancing equilibrium act; Tom Kerr and Edith Ensign offer a comedy singing and talking act called Fiddle Up; De Land and Blair appear in a comedy sketch; Carl Nixon and Gussie Sans offer a comedy riot, Assorted Chocolates; James and Edith James appear in a musical surprise which is a pretty musical novelty.

Katherine MacDonald and her associates of The Woman Conquers cast experienced all sorts of Klimatic difficulties during the filming of some of the important snow scenes in the First National attraction which will be seen for the first time in this city at the Broadway commencing today.

The actors were not greatly concerned because of the fact that the snow near Truckee, in the northern part of California, was eight feet deep on an average, but they protested volubly and vehemently when they found the weatherman was against them and their efforts to the extent of ordering climate of the blizzardly variety almost every day during their stay in the snow county.

However, as Tom Forman, the director of The Woman Conquers, asserted, after having seen the photographic results of the trip:

"It's great stuff, all right, but it's the last snow picture I'll ever make. It's too much like what Roosevelt used to call the 'strenuous life' to suit me. But it's a whale of a picture, and no mistake!"

NORWICH TEAM SLUGS CANAVAN HARD AND WINS EASY GAME FROM WORCESTER

Hughie Canavan, pitching for Bill Bergen's Worcester All-Stars, against Bill O'Leary's Norwich club, found himself up against a bunch of sluggers Sunday afternoon and was forced to take a bitter pill of defeat, the local club winning by a score of 12 to 1. Hughie's mastery of the ball was completely gone and besides passing three, and hitting one batter he allowed 14 hits, many of them going for extra bases. Never has Canavan been hit so freely on the local diamond and his boast that he could beat any Norwich team any time was an idle waste of words.

The local team looked strong and was the best team that has been on the local grounds in many a day. Boyce, former Boston pitcher, hurled a nice steady game and allowed four hits. He was supported in superb style, especially by Danny Silva, former Pittsfield second sacker. Lester Lee, Fitchburg outfielder, and Shorty Faulkner at short. Faulkner pulled the sensational catch of the game in the ninth inning when, after Canavan had hit for three bases, he speared Lavigne's line drive with one hand, ending the game. Not only did Faulkner play a good fielding game but he also hit well, getting a triple and a single.

In the first inning Carr was safe on Faulkner's error and was sacrificed to second. Keegan and Drumm flied out. Norwich started off strong in their half of the inning. Faulkner was thrown out at first, Canavan passed Spillane and Hart hit Eddie Hart. Hart was forced out at second and Spillane went to third. Spillane and Silva scored on Lee's two-base drive to left field. Lee went to third on Canavan's error on Drohan's grounder and scored when Hughie heaved the ball over Bergen's head to the backstop. Galvin was an easy out.

Worcester scored their only run in the second inning when, with two out, Hendrickson hit to left for two bases and Bergen duplicated, scoring Hendrickson. Bill died on second, ending the Worcester scoring for the day. The Worcester team did not have a chance at scoring until the ninth when Canavan had his ripple.

Clabby, the first man up in the second inning, hit one of Hughie's fast ones on the nose and drove it into right field for three bases. He scored on Boyce's single. Faulkner hit to Canavan who threw to Carr to get Boyce. Hughie could have made it a double but he held his throw too long. Spillane drew his second pass and Hart singled, filling the bases. Danny Silva hit for two bases, scoring Faulkner and Spillane. Hart and Silva scored on Lee's long sacrifice fly to center field.

There was no scoring in the third inning by either team but in the fourth on singles by Faulkner and Spillane and sacrifices by Hart and Silva two more runs were collected by the Norwich team.

In the fifth Galvin, catching for the local team, drew a pass and scored when Shorty Faulkner drove out a triple to deep left. The final score came in the seventh inning when Harry Galvin hit for two bases and was advanced to third on Clabby's single. Clabby overran the base but was touched out in returning. Galvin scored on Boyce's hit.

In the first half of the ninth Canavan, the first man up hastily redeemed himself for his poor pitching when he hit the first ball pitched for three bases. After reaching third Hughie was destined to rest there. Hart took Hendrickson's roller and Galvin captured Bergen's high foul-fly. Then Faulkner pulled his sensational catch of Lavigne's liner, ending the game. The score:

THE PAST WEEK AMONG THE MAJORS

New York, May 6.—The Browns and White Sox, unsteady in the opening series of the major leagues season, shook themselves into form during the week and appear, alongside Detroit and Cleveland, well prepared for the first invasion of the west by eastern teams, beginning Tuesday. In the National league the Giants, consistent in all departments maintained their stride and climbed to a substantial lead in the league race.

The Cubs, whose earlier games saw a great amount of heavy hitting, slumped a bit. Pittsburgh held to an even keel, while the Braves, in hitting mood, joined the gathering of dangerous clubs. The Phillies, Reds and Robins continued on the losing side. The Phillies hit heavily, but had poor hurling. Brooklyn and Cincinnati were on the short side of close scoring, their errors being costly.

Washington had a poor week, due to pitching weakness. The Yankees nosed into first place Saturday and held it today, while both Cleveland and Detroit were losing. The Athletics took the last game of the series from the Yanks today, marking the first series they have won in several seasons from the New Yorkers.

Cleveland's hitting power dimished. Detroit broke even in the week's games, including the defeat of today. The Athletics and the White Sox had the best week of any teams in the American.

ATHLETICS HAND YANKS ANOTHER DRUBBING

New York, May 6—The Philadelphia Americans made it two out of three from New York here today, winning the deciding game, 5 to 1. It was the first series Philadelphia has taken from the Yankees in years. Witt and Ruth did most of New York's hitting.

Jones lost his second game of the series, but was handicapped by poor support. Philadelphia bunching hits with New York errors.

ACADEMY LOSES GAME TO CHAPMAN TECH.

The Academy baseball team lost another game Saturday afternoon when Chapman Tech of New London won at Morgan field in New London by a score of 11 to 3. The game was close up to the eighth inning when the New London boys knocked Seigal out of the box, getting five hits and scoring six runs. The Academy boys knocked Linkletter out of the box in the fourth inning and he was relieved by Dwyer who held the local team for the remainder of the game. Walz, McNamara and Seigal featured for the local team while Dwyer, Farnham and Brown were the shining lights for the technical team. The score:

NUGGETS BEAT SPENCER'S COLTS IN FAST GAME

At the Academy campus Saturday afternoon the Nuggets trimmed Spencer's Colts 5 to 1 in a fast and cleanly played game. The game was largely a pitchers' battle between Tommy Simcox, local semi-pro pitcher and Mike Kelly, veteran hurler of the Nugget team of last season. Kelly had a little on the local boy in the pitching end and had 10 strikeouts to his credit while Simcox had seven.

George Madden was the star of the game, connecting for two doubles and a single in four times at bat. "Red" Simcox poled out the long hit of the game, driving one to the center field fence for three bases.

Whiz Bangs Win.

The Thamesville Whiz Bangs defeated the Pearl Street Stars by the score of 14 to 13. The battery for the winners was H. Dierman and E. Hamill. Ulrich featured with a home run for the winners.

CARPENTIER KNOCKS OUT NILLES IN EIGHTH ROUND AT PARIS

Paris, May 6—(By the A. P.)—Georges Carpentier knocked out Marcel Nilles in the eighth round of their scheduled fifteen-round bout for the French heavyweight title this afternoon.

Although he won, Carpentier, according to ringside observers, added nothing to his reputation. It was noticeable that the old Carpentier spirit was lacking.

Georges was in difficulty as early as the second round, and weathered the third only through the inexperience and lack of combativity of his opponent. The experts opined that Carpentier's attempt to stage a comeback, although it ended in a victory for him, failed to demonstrate any of the fighting qualities required of a champion, and that had the former idol been been facing a real battler the fight would have ended in the second round, with Georges the loser.

In the second Nilles had the former champion groggy with body blows, but he lacked the initiative to finish his man who, with wide open mouth, looked the picture of defeat.

Forty thousand persons, despite the counter-attractions of the final of the French association football competition and the University Athletic meet, saw the two heavyweights crawl into the ring. They gave Carpentier a great ovation; his popularity seemed greater than ever. Georges appeared to be in much better condition than when he fought "Battling" Siki. Evidently he had trained hard for the fight, but he appeared to lack the confidence he had in the former encounter, keeping on the defensive throughout the first round, instead of assuming a Tiger-like offensive.

The first round was a succession of clinches, with Nilles playing for the body and Carpentier missing several hard swings. When the gong rang the men were about on even terms.

Nilles also had the better of the third round, and should have ended the fight in this period. He seemed to be waxy of Carpentier's right.

In the fourth round Nilles kept playing for the stomach. Carpentier, evidently in great pain, slowed up and covered, clinching whenever possible. It was Nilles' round.

In the fifth Carpentier got in a left to the jaw, but the blow was without any particular steam. Also Carpentier lacked his former speed. Nilles jabbed Carpentier four times with lefts to the face without return and won the round on points.

Carpentier rushed out of his corner in the sixth and uppercut Nilles, the blow landing on the body. Nilles dropped to the floor, claiming a foul. The referee, Leon Bernstein, would not allow the claim and Nilles, after he had taken a count of nine, rose and ended the round. Apparently in great distress. He clinched continually until the bell.

The blow from the ringside appeared to have been a fair one, hitting Nilles in the region of the solar plexus. Nilles never recovered from its effect.

When the men came up for the seventh round Nilles apparently was still in great pain. Carpentier swung lefts and rights to the head, opening cuts over both his opponent's eyes. Nevertheless he was unable to bring Nilles down, his blows lacking the necessary force.

The end came in the eighth. Nilles rushed into a clinch and Carpentier pushed him off and swung his right to the jaw. Nilles dropped and was counted out amid mingled cheering and hooting from the spectators.

FOURNIER MAKES HIS DEBUT WITH DODGERS

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 6—Andy High's clean up double with the bases full drove Weinert out of the box today and aided materially in Brooklyn's victory over Philadelphia by 7 to 4. Cadore pitched his first game of the season and was steady until the ninth when he gave three bases on balls. Fournier made his debut with Brooklyn, relieving Schliebner, when Manager Fletcher sent in Winters, a right handed pitcher.

AMERICAN GOLFERS START BATTLE FOR BRITISH TITLE

Sandwich, England, May 6—(By the A. P.)—The visiting American golf players tomorrow will begin their battle for the British amateur golf championship at Deal in a field where the warriors with wood and iron clubs will aggregate almost two hundred of the most skillful players in the United Kingdom.

When the sun sets beyond the club house of the Royal Cinque Ports Golf Club tomorrow evening at least one of the fourteen Yankee players will have fallen by the wayside, beaten by a compatriot. By the luck of the draw, Robert Hunter of California will meet H. S. Lake of Hartford, Conn., in the first round.

But it is almost certain that some of the Americans will keep going for several days, perhaps even to finish on Saturday; for the American team is regarded the strongest set of invaders that ever came across seas in quest of the honor of the English fairways.

There is a general feeling that the threat to take the title across the Atlantic to the United States has a good chance of success. It would be a success which has been achieved only once before—in 1904, when Walter J. Travis, who thrice had been amateur champion at home, added the British title to his string. Englishmen, who like to think they know a good golfer when they see one, are candid in saying they believe Francis Ouimet of Boston is the best bet of the Yankees. They assert that they would not be surprised if he achieved this week the ambition, which began bringing him across the ocean as far back as 1914.

Regard for the affable Bostonian has been high in England ever since the day ten years ago when, as a boy of 19, Ouimet, after tying Vardon and Ray for the American open championship, defeated these two old timers in the playoff for the title. The estimate of Ouimet rose higher still when last week he won the Royal St. Georges cup after three days of steady, sure and sound play.

By the same experience, the English learned to admire Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, Ore., from whom Ouimet won the cup by a single stroke in the playoff of a tie. But they have not yet conceded willing parity with such stars as Ouimet, Robert Gardner, captain of the American team, and Jess Sweetser, the American amateur champion. They know what Gardner can do, for he carried Cyril Tolley, the Sterling English player, to the 37th hole in the final of the 1920 championship.

Sweetser since arriving in England has been erratic—brilliant one day, and merely a good golfer the next. He took a dislike to the course at Deal when first he saw it; but, whether he has learned to like it or not, he, at least has learned to know it, as his practice rounds of Saturday and Sunday sharply reveal.

With the exception of Hunter and Lake, the Yankees are well scattered through the draw, which is considered a happy circumstance. Dr. Willing, who has a first round bye and will not begin play until Tuesday, is in their upper half. So is Ouimet, but Sweetser and Gardner are in the lower half, and if all goes well with them the first four days they will meet one another in the sixth round on Friday—the round before the semi-finals.

The other Americans in the upper half are John F. Neville, San Francisco; Reginald Lewis, of Connecticut; George V. Rotan, of Texas; Maxwell R. Marston, of Philadelphia; Guy Standifer, Washington, D. C., and Lake and Hunter. In the lower half are Harris R. Johnston, St. Paul, Minn., F. J. Wright, Jr., Los Angeles and S. Davison, Herron, Chicago.

Among the strong English players in the upper half are Roger Wethered, Cyril Tolley, Bernard Darwin, C. C. Aylmer and Dr. Tweedale, none of whom will meet an American in the first round; and E. W. E. Holderness, the British titleholder, Dr. H. G. Gillies and Mackenzie.

BRITISH RUM RUNNERS.

Up to the present time this government has not been able to get much satisfaction from the British concerning the cooperation which is desired from them for the purpose of checking the rum runners. It is realized that outside of the three-mile limits the rum runners are not actually violating the law of this country, although they are even at that point aiding and abetting others to violate the Volstead act.

Efforts haven't ceased to get Great Britain to direct those of its subjects who are engaged in this business to stop. Just how much they will be upset by the recent supreme court decision concerning liquor on foreign ships coming into our ports has not as yet been reflected, but no little sentiment has been favorable to action by both London and Canada in checking the efforts to violate the laws of this country.

Concerning the idea of changing the three-mile limit to twelve, the Manchester Guardian says: "As far as it is yet possible to foresee reactions to such a change, we think the American government can rely on the general assent and sympathy of the English people. Whether Americans were wise or not in adopting prohibition is not our business. The matter was and is wholly theirs to decide. But every decent Englishman is ashamed of the spectacle of gangs of less decent Englishmen aiding citizens of a friendly neighbor to break that neighbor's laws."

In a similar vein the Ottawa Citizen says: "The fact that much of this rum running is carried on by vessels flying the British flag is not pleasant to the law abiding citizens of this country and Great Britain. . . What is important is that friendly governments should aid in every legitimate way to prevent the present barefaced violation of American law by citizens of their own country. If American ships pursued a similar practice outside a dry Canada, the people of this country would doubtless consider they had a grievance against the United States government if it looked on idly and indifferent.'

This doesn't insure action being taken but it shows how certain of the sentiment runs, and that it is on an even keel.

THE PUBLIC PAYS.

Whether the coal commission will be able to accomplish all that is desired rests with it to disclose. It has a big task when looked at from any one of many angles. It should have some important recommendations to make concerning what is needed to overcome existing conditions and give the consumer the proper protection concerning coal. There is need for protection that will insure a proper supply as well as protection against the profiteers.

Extensive will be the information which the commission will get as the result of the inquiry, but one wonders whether those making statements to the commission will be as frank as the president of a mine in Pennsylvania before a federal judge in that state, when under oath he testified that his colliery had cost him $750,000 three and a half years ago, that he had been able to pay off a debt of $725,000 in that time together with $400,000 in commissions, which went to the man who loaned the $725,000 as coal sales agent, and that in a year and a half a profit of a million and a half had been earned at the colliery.

Whether this was expected by the court or not it certainly was an interesting disclosure. It seems to indicate one good reason at least why coal prices are so high, if as a matter of fact it doesn't show why production isn't interrupted every now and then to the distress of the consumers.

Possibly that is an exceptional company. It may be one of those mines where coal is produced the cheapest, in contrast to others where operating expenses are high, but that doesn't justify the payment of any such commissions on the handling coal which is never seen by the highly paid agent, and it doesn't justify the exaction of coal prices that have been drawn from the public.

Conditions of that kind tell volumes and add emphasis to the demands which have long been made for relief from profiteering of that character, especially when a necessity rather than a luxury is being dealt in.

DEPORTATION.

In the opinion of one writer every unnaturalized person convicted of a crime or felony, except murder or rape, even to the second or third case of drunkenness, should be deported and perpetually prohibited from returning.

Such a move might cause a greater respect among a certain number for the privileges of this country. Without doubt it would result in the removal of many of the undesirables who have succeeded in getting into the country.

From time to time there are deportation parties. Just at the present time a trainload, numbering 113 gathered at different points between Washington cities and the east is being cared for in New York until accommodations for sending them out of the country are provided. There are various reasons for taking this action. Some of the number are criminals, some are reds, others are mentally and physically deficient and did fail to become a charge upon the country, while there are those who are going abroad with others who are being deported rather than to suffer the breaking up of families. While there are those who are being sent away because they might become a charge, others are earning a good living but got into the country by fraud and their desirability was weighed and found wanting.

Should the suggestion concerning deportation be followed there would be much additional business provided for the steamship lines. There would be a steady line of those going back from whence they came until it became thoroughly understood that the privilege of enjoying the benefits of this country calls for due regard for lawful conduct. Much expense is entailed by the maintenance of aliens in penal institutions, hospitals and charitable organizations, and by no means small is the menace that comes from such who are criminally disposed or devoting their efforts to radical movements.

Deportation is by no means a rarity but greater respect for the advantages of the country might prevail if it were resorted to more generally.

STEEL CARS FOR PROTECTION.

The railroad wreck in Cuba directs new attention to the importance of the steel railroad coach. It is not to be supposed that a train made up of steel cars would have prevented the wreck, but following a wreck in which many were injured and killed it would have prevented the wreckage from catching fire and burning alive those who were injured and cremating the dead.

In many railroad accidents no fires develop. In accident after accident, it is entirely possible for those injured to be gotten out, or for those killed to be removed without the additional distressing situation of having the human cargo consumed by fire, but there are times and circumstances surrounding wrecks of railroad trains where such is impossible.

The wreck in Cuba was one of them. The situation was as deplorable as that not so long ago in Pennsylvania where through the mistaking of one train for another two trains collided and it was impossible to get the injured from the wreck or to put out the fire. Getting the injured and dead out of the wreckage of a steel train may offer its difficulties but inasmuch as there is nothing to burn and a steel train will stand hard usage differently than a train of wooden cars the advantages from a protective standpoint are clearly evident.

OUT FOR NEW RECORDS.

The idea of Lieutenants Macready and Kelly in making preparations for a trip around the world by airplane is certainly ambitious. Because they have been able to make the flight across the United States from ocean to ocean they must certainly be greatly encouraged in any such contemplated undertaking, but going from coast to coast of the United States is a different proposition than flying several times as far and completing the trip around the world.

And yet no one is disposed to tell them that it cannot be done, or that they will not be the ones to do it. With an engine capable of such continuous operation, a machine so finely built to withstand the demands of such a trip and aviators so skilled in long distance flying there is a combination that is of the greatest advantage for a successful outcome of a flying trip 'round the globe.

Being able to cover such long distances without stops gives great encouragement, for it will lessen the number of stops and make it possible, if everything goes smoothly, to pick out the most favorable landing places. Even great encouragement will be offered if success is obtained by the aviator who plans to cross the continent next month between daylight and dark, calling for much greater speed than the aviators made with the T-2. In either instance ambitions may outrun accomplishment, though it is only through such that results are obtained. If nothing is undertaken nothing is gained.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Stains on pottery can often be removed by applications of salt.

Always boil green vegetables in a pan without a lid.

If you add cornstarch to your sponge cake it will not fall.

Don't boil your potatoes too quickly or they will be soft outside and hard inside.

When cooking, clear up as you go. Don't allow dishes and articles of food to accumulate.

To keep icing soft add a pinch of baking powder to the whites of the eggs before beating them.

Stains on a porcelain bath tub that obstinately refuse to yield before scouring soaps sometimes vanish when fine sandpaper is employed.

The moth-proof garment bag is now a necessity and the transparent one is a step ahead, as it enables one to see at a glance what each bag contains.

Wash cane seats or bamboo furniture with warm salt water and rub with soft cloths until dry.

Green vegetables should never lie in cold water more than half an hour before they are to be cooked.

Slice onions under a running faucet. This will remove the odor from the hands and keep the fumes from irritating the eyes.

Be careful not to have too hot a flame under an aluminum skillet. Before putting food into it, grease well, covering entire surface.

When your enamelware is discolored, clean it with a paste made of salt and vinegar.

To remove mildew stains from linen use a mixture of soapy starch and milk.

You can make a dustless duster for yourself by saturating cheesecloth in kerosene oil and hanging it out in the sunlight to dry.

Pastry boards and rolling pins may be kept white and smooth by rubbing the surface frequently with a cut lemon.

WHEN YOU COOK POTATOES.

Almost every day the housewife cooks potatoes. Here are a few hints which you should observe to get more food value for the money expended on this necessary article of food.

Pare your potatoes if you are planning to serve them mashed. Save the pater in which they are cooked. You can use it for the foundation of a nourishing soup. This water contains a quantity of starch.

If you would conserve the food value of your potatoes, boil them with their jackets unremoved. The mineral value of a potato lies close to the skin. Baked potatoes are most nourishing, as little of their nourishing quality escapes.

If you must pare your potatoes, try scraping them. You will save as much of the value as possible by this method.

CEDAR CHEST.

If you haven't a cedar chest for storing away your winter woolens and furs, you can have something that will answer the same purpose by oiling any chest or box with oil of cedar. It should be re-oiled each season.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Do not use curling fluids. They are often harmful, the least they do is to coat the hair and keep it from ventilating properly.

Washing the hands in a bowl of warm milk every night is an excellent bleach for redness and the roughness that housework is apt to produce.

Make-up all over the face has become so common lately, that any chat on beautifying the eyes should really begin with a warning against colored paints and pencils.

For rejuvenating the neck use cocoa butter. Warm it until it rubs in easily, and before you massage, wash the neck, with hot water and soap, scrubbing the skin with a little complexion brush to stimulate the blood and open and cleanse the pores. Wipe quickly and while the skin is hot and the pores still open, rub on the cocoa butter and massage the neck well.

Keep a small bottle of hand lotion or a tube of vaseline in the kitchen and use it if you have had to have your hands in cold water frequently.

FOR MAKING ROSETTES.

If you wish to make rosettes for a pincushion or baby's bonnet drive two long nails into a board as far apart as the width of the rosettes desired. Wind your ribbon round and round, tie a tight knot in center. Spread out loops.

Tassels are much used for trimming nowadays and they can be easily made in the same way. Drive the nails according to the length of the tassels desired.

Proceed in same way, but tie at one end instead of center. Take a short double strand and run it through all the threads (at the tied end) before taking off the nails. Use this thread to sew on goods.

WHITE FROCKS FOR SPRING.

White frocks for the springtime occasions are somewhat of a specialty, and although many of the models are shown in colors, they may be procured in white also. In this collection of junior styles many little touches appearing in women's modes this season are seen in replica. Two points were noted particularly in this respect and they were the extensive use of plaited and a center front drape effect introduced in one model.

The maturity of draping is not excluded, as the effect is obtained through the use of a panel of self material gathered to a draped girdle. Shaped sleeves which have graceful points add length of line to the model shown in Lanvin green crepe de chine.

A style which has proved successful, is developed in brocaded crepe de chine, white or colors. This claims as its only trimming, fine shirred cording about the neck and sleeves and below the belt line, which is further indicated by a little standing ruche of the material.

FILET LACE BED SET.

For a lace bedspread there is filet lace woven to have a delicate grace and yet strong enough for weight. One attractive spread and pillow throw to match had morning glories appliqued on in the corners and in a center medallion. Other lace spreads are made of antique Arabian or corded nets, with insets and appliqued patterns.

ORANGE RIND IN TEA.

You will be glad to find that a few pieces of dried yellow rind of an orange kept in your tea canister will give the cheaper grades of tea a delicious fragrance and the flavor of the more expensive grades.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Fashionable little looks shapes have narrow brims and large upstanding bows of ribbon in the back.

Capes or loose coats of light wool are lined with printed foulard or figured silk to match the simple straightline frock worn beneath.

An unusually attractive frock is made of grey crepe and has sleeves of flame-colored chiffon embroidered in silver. The sleeves are wide and flowing.

Some of the early summer capes are bound prettily in silk ribbons. Others have panels faced with exquisitely combined ribbons.

Even tailleurs are being made of moire, so popular has it become. It is at its best, however, in colors in afternoon and evening frocks.

Kilt plaited skirts in linen are being shown by many of the smart shops. They are especially attractive in pearl gray and oyster white.

The short box coat of flannel or lightweight serge is frequently scalloped in shallow waves and bound with gros-grain ribbon or buttonholed with coarse silk floss.

Coats of soft wool with white stripes and plaids are one way of welcoming spring. Sometimes they have fur collars, but usually they are plain.

New handkerchiefs have colored hems of double linen, about an inch wide—an excellent place in which to embroider an elaborate monogram or sometimes the given name.

A smart jacket of white jersey cloth is entirely covered with an all-over design in black soutache braid and given a smart standing collar of gray rabbit fur.

The tiered treatment adapts itself particularly well to youthful evening gowns. Many of the models seen were in odd shades of blue and many were of old-fashioned honey-colored taffeta.

Many of the smartest frocks, both for sport and for more formal occasions have scarves to match. These are usually embroidered to match the gown.

THE VOGUE OF BUTTONS.

The vogue of buttons for trimming is one of the interesting features of many spring fashions. A smart street dress of navy blue twill indicates an unusual trend in this returning vogue. Pearl buttons outline the neck and the edges of the long, tight sleeves giving a semblance of collar and cuffs of sharp pointed effect.

Black bread is used on the four-hole, one-half inch buttons, making black crosses against the lustrous white pearl. Pearl buttons and pearl novelties are being used as trimming for black silk dresses; and they are appearing again in great numbers on white and gay-colored wash garments most of the buttons that appear on wash garments are made from pearl shells, taken from streams in our own Mississippi valley.

THE MODISH SASH.

The sash figures conspicuously in the modes for spring and summer, and is tied at the sides, center back or side back. Those that tie on the side are bouffant and full, while those that tie at the back seem to be semi-tailored loops of ribbon, two or three loops going up and three double loops folded down. On many of these the ribbon hangs in streamers which come immediately below the hem line.

CULINARY CUES.

Eggs may be poached and served on rice.

A pinch of salt put into the whites of eggs will lessen the time for whipping.

A good salad is made of canned peaches, chopped nuts, cottage cheese and mayonnaise.

An excellent way in which to utilize the last bit of chopped meat is to make a biscuit dough, spread it lightly with butter and sprinkle on the meat. Roll like a jelly roll and bake in a hot oven. Serve with tomato sauce.

When combining ham with potatoes and vegetables to make hash a little lemon juice added will improve the flavor.

NEEDLEPOINT EMBROIDERY.

All eyes in the art embroidery world are turning to needlepoint embroidery. The coarse linen canvases are imported from France. In the first place, artists go to the art galleries and copy the Woodland scenery on canvas. In the homes these canvases are stretched on frames. The fine features and heads of animals or people are embroidered in soft colored silks petit point. Trees, leaves and background are partially worked in gros point in Aubusson wools. The American woman fills in the background in wools to match.

She finds this type of tapestry work very enjoyable because she is working with the finest, safest and most carefully dyed wools in the world, says Dry Goods Economist. Every hank has been dyed by hand and produces coloring of the rarest tones in the tapestries. Backgrounds frequently are blue-green or terra cotta. The foliage of various greens is very beautiful against the terra cotta backgrounds.

Many children are taught to do this gros point embroidery. Their mothers or grandmothers buy the tiny six-inch-square pieces of canvas on which a flower spray or a dog is painted. The child takes the blunt-pointed needle and learns to put the stitch "up over and down." These pieces are either framed for wall decorations or mounted as pin-cushions.

DECORATING THE KEY CASE.

The ordinary leather key case does not appeal to the fastidious woman, because it is generally out of harmony with her costume. If she must carry keys, however, some kind of a case is necessary to save wear and tear on the lining of purse and pocket. An easy way to solve this problem is to cover the case with ribbon, moire being a good selection because of its durability. Cover the leather case with moire ribbon, forming pockets of the ribbon on each corner. These flaps or pockets will hold the keys in place and the leather lining not covered will still serve its utilitarian purpose.

RIBBON TRIMMING.

An attractive ribbon trimming to use around the edge of sleeves, panels and cuffs can be made of silk, velvet or metal ribbons of any width desired. When using inch-width ribbon make half-inch tucks one inch apart until the number of yards required for the dress has been tucked. Then fold the tuck to form a triangle, the opening showing on the right side. To be more explicit, take hold of the bottom outer edges of each tuck and bring together on the right side of the trimming so the lower edges meet. This forms a triangle that resembles the paper soldier hats one's father used to make. Sew the two lower edges firmly together and a beautiful trimming is the result.

FOR THE SMALL BOY.

Nothing could be more serviceable for the small boy or more picturesque in effect that little suits which have trousers of white or ecru linen and brief little smocks made of Indian prints. Two squares of the smallest size are used. Some have short set-in sleeves. The others have kimona sleeves.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Mrs. Bessie T. Redman of Seattle, Wash., is probably the only woman in the country to take up tombstone making as a business.

Miss Irmgarde Richards, a Montana rancher, has sailed for Angentina with a herd of 40 goats for a government agricultural school.

Mrs. C. J. Ott, first woman ever to preside over the Ohio house of representatives, was a Red Cross canteen worker during the World war.

In order to find out if the dry laws mean anything, Mrs. Samuel Frank, Rutland, Vt., clubwoman, has obtained a commission as justice of the peace.

Miss Bessie Friedman of Seattle, Wash., made a new record for speedy typewriting when she wrote 131 perfect words a minute, for a full half hour, without an error.

Though she is past 84 years of age, Mrs. Rebecca Wood has just made final proof on her 640 acres of grazing land near Buford, Wyo.

TO WASH CORSETS.

To wash a pair of corsets spread them on a flat table, taking out the laces but not the stays, and scrub them with a brush and soapy water. Rinse quickly in warm water and dry on a flat board in the sun or near the fire.

SHREDDED COCOANUT.

Shredded cocoanut may be made as juicy and delicious as the fresh kind by soaking it in sweet milk. Before using it the milk may be pressed out gently.

RECIPES.

Maryland Left-over Potatoes: Cut cold boiled potatoes into small pieces (about one inch square when possible) and roll these cubes in beaten egg and pepper to suit individual taste. Put the egg-dipped cubes on a butter tin in the oven, and when hot and brown serve them at once. They are delicious.

Cheese-Stuffed Tomatoes: Put into the mixing bowl 1 cup of stale bread crumbs and moisten them with 1 tablespoon of melted butter; mix well then add 1-3 teaspoon of salt, 1-8 teaspoon of pepper, and 3 tablespoons of either grated Parmesan cheese or finely chopped Canadian cheese. Cut the tops from six large ripe tomatoes, scoop out the interiors, and mix the solid part of the interiors with the mixture in the bowl. Now stuff the hollowed-out tomatoes with this forcemeat, rounding it up well on top; place a slice of bacon over top of each, and arrange them in a baking pan. Pour a little water and melted butter into the pan and slip it into a hot oven, to bake for about 20 minutes. Serve very hot.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mrs. McKinley's Death.

Mr. Editor: In speaking of Mrs. William McKinley in the column of the (wives of famous men) I noticed that the writer made one mistake when he said that Mr. McKinley died before President McKinley was assassinated and was saved "the great sorrow of losing the one she loved best."

Mrs. McKinley did not die until about five years after Mr. McKinley was assassinated. Her life ended in the home in Ohio where they lived at the time that he was elected president of the United States.

F. S.

Norwich, May 5, 1923.

President McKinley was assassinated in 1901. Mrs. McKinley died in 1907.

President's Act Recalls Another.

Mr. Editor: I am a reader of The Norwich Bulletin and I am just as eager to get it as a girl ever was to get a letter from her lover. My husband took it and after he passed away my children all take. I have seven children, all are living and married. I have twenty five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. One grandson went overseas to the World war for which I am very proud. He enlisted in a Hartford company. A good many of his dear comrades never came back, but my dear grand boy came back alive, thank god! He was hit by a shell once. Well, I have given a brief history of my life. Now I wish to tell a little story. In last Monday's paper I read a little story that President Harding told and it reminded me of a little incident that occurred when I was of the same age—eight years. Although I now am quite a little older than President Harding. I came home from school one day and coming up to the house I came through the back yard where the hens were congregated. I looked at them and I thought how I would like to hit that old rooster, so I picked up a stone and let it drive at the rooster's head and he fell. I just thought something would be doing and about that time (I hadn't noticed) my father, who stood a little way back, picked up the fowl. It was dead. He looked at me and said that was a pretty hit. He helped my mother dress it and we had it next day for dinner. I think it tasted as good to me as the gander dinner to President Harding. He saved his grandfather from killing it as I saved my father from killing the rooster.

A few days after this I cut up another caper. I went to the front room and in trying to open a window I broke a pane of glass, then I ran, thinking something would be doing. Very soon my father went into the room and saw the glass and asked my mother who broke it. She said she did not know. Then he called us children in. As I was the eldest of three, he looked straight at me and said if any one lies I shall punish them. I spoke right up and said I did it, but didn't mean to. He spoke very pleasant and wanted to see my hands, saying, I am glad you did not cut or get any glass into them. Then he gave me a few words of advice about being very careful what I did and always tell the truth. I don't know what I would have done if I had had time to act or told a lie. If you say anything truth is best. To tell it is the best policy.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Sir Edward Kemp, member of the senate of Canada, who expressed himself as not in favor of the proposed appointment of a Canadian ambassador at Washington, is an eminent business man who of late years has figured prominently in the public affairs of the dominion. He is a native of Quebec, but has spent most of his life in Toronto, where he has built up an immense manufacturing business. For many years he represented East Toronto in the house of commons. He played a great part in Canada's activities in the late war. He was chairman and organizer of the Canadian Government War Purchasing commission, which was created for the purpose of controlling the hundred millions of war expenditure of the land of the maple leaf. In 1916 he succeeded Sir Sam Hughes as minister of militia and defence. One of the foremost figures in Canadian clubland, Sir Edward takes the keenest interest in golf and yachting.

Wives of Famous Men

Frances Fairchild, Wife of William Cullen Bryant.

So great was the charms of Frances Fairchild, wife of William Cullen Bryant, that she captured the poet's heart before he realized it. He was not looking for a wife; indeed, he expressed himself as against marrying, but the impression Miss Fairchild left after their first meeting made it clear to him that love had come, whether he willed it or no. In speaking of his wife's charms soon after their marriage, Bryant said:

"I did not look for these nor any other qualities, but they trapped me before I was aware and now I am married in spite of myself."

However, he had no regrets in the years that followed, for his wife was possessed of all the qualities needed in a poet's helpmate. He found in his love inspiration for many poems, although few of these were ever published. Mrs. Bryant, although not a highly cultivated woman, had the twin virtues of understanding and judgment.

After thirty years of wedded happiness Mrs. Bryant's health failed and in the hope of restoring it the poet took her to Europe. She improved so much that when she returned home a few months later she seemed entirely recovered. But the improvement was only temporary and within a few months she died. And then, despite his early protestations that he had trapped himself into marriage, Mr. Bryant was deeply and permanently injured by his loss.

Stories That Recall Others

The Price of 25 Cents Worth.

Maggie was fat, old and colored, and suffered from rheumatism. A friend who had suffered from the same ailment had obtained some relief from a salve. Nothing would do but for Maggie to have some, so she went to the nearest store.

"I have had rheumatism for 15 years and want 25 cents worth of something to cure it," she said.

The clerk smiled and got her the remedy. When he returned Maggie laid a quarter on the counter and asked:

"How much?"

Pat Needed a Friend.

A typical Irishman who bore the equally typical Irish name of Pat, was summoned recently for jury service in the superior court. His Irish accent and quaint and candid assertions afforded the other members of the panel much merriment. Incidentally Pat was much concerned over the fact that his service on the jury caused him to be absent from his regular employment where he was getting $6.60 a day, more than twice the pay of a juryman.

"Do you know the attorney for the defense?" an attorney asked Pat when selecting the jury.

"Oi don't," replied Pat.

"Are you acquainted with any parties to the suit?" he was asked.

"Oi'm not," he replied.

After the jurors had filed into the ante-room Pat, turning to one of his associate members, said:

"There are said to be more than fifty tribes of aborigines of unknown origin in Yunnan province, China, which were there when the Chinese came and which retain most of their prehistoric customs and peculiar languages.

Cities gain daylight by flim flam or deception of some kind. My children are on Standard Time in daylight schools; they were in 1922. They almost play "hookey" and like it! I told the Superintendent. I told the police. The "cop" doesn't come. Superintendent Graham "passes the buck" to the state department. He himself told me last year: "Daylight is bad for the children." It is bad for them, 4,089 children in Norwich lose 800,000 sleep-hours, if daylight keeps to October. "Let's save the beloved children," as Rev. Abbott once said in the town meeting. The schools are the keystone in the flim flam arch. "They don't touch you if you do send the children on standard time," so said my lawyer. He knows! Send the kiddies on standard time! Listen to your own common sense. Don't mind the flim flammers. "Make a face at 'em" with the face of a clock—like the one above. Start the week right!

FINAL CLEAN-UP IN SACRED HEART DRIVE

Clean-up work in the parishes of the city will be the order for the next three days in the $40,000 rebuilding fund drive of Sacred Heart church of Norwich Town.

About $200 more was added to the total by the reports made over Saturday and Sunday, bringing the figure now to $16,937. The ground has been pretty well gone over, but General Chairman P. T. Connell is calling upon the captains and team workers to do the clean-up work with vigor so that no one in the territory may be neglected.

The campaign will close Wednesday night and it is confidently expected that a good sum will be added by that time. The captains are making their reports to Rev. C. W. Brennan, Chairman P. T. Connell and Secretary Louis T. Lynch.

One of the most encouraging contributions that the workers have received has been a check for $1,000 from the J. B. Martin company, while one of its prominent officers has made a substantail personal contribution.

CLAIM FATAL INJURIES INFLICTED WITH SPITTOON

Thomas Murphy, the Jewett City stone mason, who is believed to have struck William Groves of Fall River in the head with a spittoon in Jewett City, causing injuries from which Groves died a week ago Thursday, will be taken from the Norwich jail to Jewett City today (Monday) for a hearing.

He has been in jail for the past week following the adjournment of a brief hearing which was given last Monday.

It is understood that the authorities have evidence that will definitely establish the fact that Murphy was the man who hit Groves and that the weapon used was a spittoon, which has since been destroyed.

He was also an attendant at the Ledyard Methodist church. Mr. Maynard loved his home which was his pride and entertainment. He always believed in helping his fellow man, never letting a neighbor want for anything if it was within his means to prevent it. He was of a kind and generous nature and of a quiet disposition. SAY DAN RYAN MAY BE SECRETARY OF TAMMANY

The name of Dan Ryan, who at one time did newspaper work in this city, is mentioned most prominently for the appointment as successor to the late "Tom" Smith as secretary of Tammany Hall in New York.

Mr. Ryan came here from New York and was manager of the Post, which was published on Water street in the building where the Strand theatre now is. The publication suspended Jan. 17, 1899. Before coming to Norwich, Mr. Ryan had been political editor of the New York Telegram and had also worked on the Sun and the Herald. He is now auditor of pensions in the comptroller's office in New York.

The report in New York is that Ryan may have the Tammany secretaryship if he wants it.

TREE HELD AUTO FROM ROLLING DOWN BANK ON LAUREL HILL

Paul Rabitaille of 17 Granite street, Groton, can be thankful that there was a tree on the bank above the New Haven railroad tracks on Laurel Hill and that his automobile hit it Sunday morning. The tree was all that saved Mr. Rabitaille and all his family from rolling in the machine down the steep bank to the railroad tracks 75 feet below the street.

Mr. Rabitaille, who is an inexperienced driver, made the trip to this city in his new Dodge touring car, with his wife and a woman friend and several children in the machine. Coming to the corner of Laurel Hill avenue and Winchester street, he drove in along Laurel Hill avenue past a "detour" sign that had been placed to send machines around through Winchester street on account of the highway work on bridge hill. When he reached a point opposite the residences of G. Everett Hall, where he could see that the trolley track was the only portion of the road that could be traveled, and that was being used by machines coming in the opposite direction, he decided that he would turn around and go back.

In making the turn and while backing towards the westerly sidewalk of Laurel Hill avenue, he apparently stepped on the accelerator which shot the car suddenly backwards. A number of new trolley rails which were lieing in the gutter made it easier for the car to mount the curb after it had crossed the trolley tracks and it kept on across the sidewalk and through fence for a plunge down the bank which is at its highest point in this location.

The machine hit the fence on a slant, snapping off iron posts like pipe stems and brushing the heavy plank railing out of the way. Had it been traveling straight it would have crashed down to the railroad tracks with nothing in the way to check it, but it traveled a diagonal line as it started down the top of the bank and one of the rear wheels landed against a tree ten feet down the bank from the fence.

Fortunately the wheel held and the car came to a stop in a position parallel to the street and headed towards Groton.

The terrified passengers scrambled out to safety as quickly as possible, one of the women in the party being on the verge of hysterics. It was reported that one of the women in the car had only recently been discharged after being a patient in a hospital and as the car plunged over the bank, she exclaimed, "Here we all go," believing they were all headed for the hospital.

Mr. Rabitaille, it was reported, had only recently, while learning to drive, had a somewhat similar accident, but this had happened on level ground. At that time, it was said the man who was instructing him had warned him that he would back off something if he didn't keep his wits about him.

The car was later hauled up into the street and taken to a garage.

Following the accident of which the street department was notified, the department had a man stationed at the Winchester street end of the detour to see that all machines went around that way.

Another Sunday morning accident came when Truman E. Clark of New London, who was on his way to that city, went around the detour by way of Talman street and Spruce street to get into Winchester street. While trying to negotiate the V turn from Talman into Spruce street he ran into a telegraph pole, breaking his bumper and bending his mud guard.

LESSONS FROM NIAGARA AT Y. M. C. A. MEN'S MEETING

At the men's hour at the Norwich Young Men's Christian association Sunday afternoon interesting moving pictures of Niagara to the Sea were shown, and these were enjoyed by the audience of men. Swahn's orchestra furnished pleasing music, and hymns of the popular kind were used. Between the reels Secretary Hill gave a brief talk, and among other things said: "The first Psalm which we have read is suggestive of the two kinds of lives we may live, and it is in line with that other familiar passage, 'Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.'

"In a sense the human life may be likened unto a Niagara. I think of three things about Niagara Falls. First, they are a thing of beauty; second, there is something serious and awe inspiring about them; and, third, they have wonderful possibilities. So with a human life; as God made it, it is a thing of beauty; it has a very serious and dangerous side to it, and it certainly has most wonderful possibilities. Niagara Falls has a leap of at least 160 feet, and it is equal to four and a half million horsepower, only a small amount of which has as yet been put to use. By the efforts of scientific men, and men of great engineering skill, the power of the falls is under control and is being used to the blessing of the people for hundreds of miles around; it must be controlled to be useful. It may be possible to estimate the possibilities of the falls, but no man can correctly estimate the magnificent possibilities of a human life; but it must be controlled in order that these possibilities may be developed. We have passions, God given, but we must have, as it were, a great scientific mind to control them; one who knows the weakness as well as the power for good there is in a human life; that one is no less than the great Christ of God. If we place ourselves in His hands, He will make us of use to the world. We must through Him control our passions or they will control us. We all know that it is dangerous to go too near to the rushing falls you know there is a point in the river above the falls known as Redemption Point, to go beyond which means sure death, and through the years several have ventured beyond this point and have gone to their death. So in life there are many very dangerous points and, alas, too many have ventered too near and they have paid the price of their soul as a result of the venture. It is not safe to go too near the precipice. The wise man keeps as far as possible from the danger points of sin, for he knows of he many human wrecks that have resulted from venturing too near the pitfalls that are in the pathway of every man. Let us be wise and give the control of our lives to God."

Lewis R. Church operated the moving picture machine.

NORWICH SHRINERS IN PARADE IN NEW HAVEN

About 40 nobles of Sphinx temple of the Mystic Shrine made the trip to New Haven Saturday for the New England ceremonial of Pyramid temple.

There were about 100 candidates in the line in the parade which was a colorful spectacle for the thousands who lined the New Haven streets.

Pyramid Temple, with the Arab patrol and the Bedouins of New London, both spectacular in their desert costumes, swung by, followed closely by Palestine, which added its colors to the carnival appearance of the occasion. Khamet, of Brooklyn, brilliant and especially attractive because of its mounted guard, passed next, with Melha following joyously after. The Sphinx of Hartford, led by the Hartford Armory band, was one of the happiest in the long line and kept a group of excited urchins tagging along its rear scrambling for coins which the marchers scattered right and left. Sahaan was the last temple in line and finished the parade with a flourish by reason of its rifle corps and mounted guard.

LIQUOR CARS SEIZED AT RUM RUNNER'S HOME

Prohibition Agents Robert Church and Joseph Fitzpatrick made an important capture of a confessed rum-runner Saturday when they arrested Angelo Alcire of 107 Summit street and Tony Cappuci of New Haven, whom they had held up at the Saybrook bridge Friday night, for violation of the motor vehicle law.

Alcire, according to the officers confessed to carrying liquor and six 5-gallon cans containing alcohol were found at his home by the officers. They took possession of the cans and also of his automobile.

Alcire was presented before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson and was held in $500 bonds for the U. S. district court. He furnished the bonds. The New Haven man will probably be presented today (Monday) for a hearing.

A silver citation star for heroism in France has been awarded to Frederick A. Clinton of Wethersfield, by the war department. At the time of his action he was a private in the medical detachment of the 102nd Infantry.

GAVE READINGS AT EVENING CHURCH SERVICE

The service at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening was conducted by Miss Dorothy Carpenter of Boston, who gave several readings, all of which carried the teachings of Christ.

The first was the Easter Substitute, a story of Jimmie Fitzgerald who had stolen money from the collection plate. On Easter Sunday as he sang in the choir he saw the picture of Christ on the wall of the church and thought of how he had stolen the money from Him. Through the service he thought of it more and more and finally made up his mind to return it. While on his way to do this he was struck by an automobile and was taken to the hospital. Calling in the rector, Jimmie told him of his stealing and how he was on the way to return the money when struck down. Then in a thin, strained voice, only a shadow of the wonderful voice that had thrilled the congregation of the big church he began to sing, and shortly afterward passed on.

The second story was of The Happy Prince, a beautiful statue, with eyes of sapphires and a sword with a hilt set with a ruby, his arms being covered with wonderful leaves of gold. The story was of the sacrifices made by the Happy Prince and the little swallow which at the request of the prince took the ruby, sapphires and gold to the poor people in the city to make them happy. When both eyes were gone the little swallow stayed to be the eyes for the prince and on one cold night was frozen to death. At the same time the iron heart of the prince broke in pieces. Later when the mayor and aldermen of the city saw the state and the dead bird they ordered them cleared away. God in heaven sent an angel to bring to Him the two most beautiful things on earth and when the angel returned the two most beautiful things on earth were taken to God, and these were the little dead swallow and the broken iron heart.

The final story was The Lost Word by Van Dyke a story of the sacrifice of a man for gold and happiness. Everything went well with the man who had lost the Word until his little son lay dying and then when he wished to turn to someone with a name he could not remember he was indeed filled with sorry. A servant told him that John the Baptist awaited him and going to his home with the golden pillars he was met by John the Baptist and by the priest to whom he had sold the Word. The follower of Christ ordered the evil one away and told the Word and prayer to Christ restored his son to him.

Y. M. C. A. WILL BEGIN TO TEACH BOYS SWIMMING

With over half a hundred boys enrolled for the swimming course, and many more boys entering who have not yet registered, the Y. M. C. A. swimming campaign will begin this (Monday) afternoon. There will be classes in the afternoon for the school boys and classes after supper for the boys who work, and it can be expected that there will be considerable splashing and fun in the big pool as the boys attempt to learn the art of swimming.

The classes will be as follows: Class A, 4.15-4.45; class B, 4.45-5; class C, 7.15-8; class D, 8-8.30. These groups will meet daily instead of every other day as was first scheduled.

The water in the big pool has received an extra heating so as to be of a comfortable temperature for the beginners, and everything will be in tiptop order to help the boys graduate from the "sinkers" to the swimmers' class.

The swimming campaign is scheduled to run for two weeks. Those who have registered thus far will receive instructions daily this week, while those who register during this week will be assigned to the new classes starting next Monday.

The course will consist of six lessons, including a test, and certificates will be given all the boys who are able to navigate 50 feet at the close of the course.

The "Y" is anticipating that every boy in Norwich between the age of 11 to 14 take advantage of this campaign. There is no charge for the lessons, the only requirement being that the boys bring their own towel and be regular in attending the lessons. Boys may sign up for next week's lessons by calling at the Y. M. C. A. any time this week.

Ernest Champlin Going to Seattle.

Ernest G. Champlin, formerly of this city, has accepted a position with the engineering firm of the Pacific Car & Foundry Co. of Renton, Wash., a suburb of Seattle. Mr. Champlin has been chief engineer for six years for the Standard Tank Car Co., of Chester, Pa., and resigned this position to go to the west coast. He is a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1906, also of Syracuse university. Mrs. Champlin and son Louis are to drive their Buick to Washington, starting this month.

Rev. Morris B. Alling of Hartford is expected to supply the pulpit next Sunday morning and evening at the Central Baptist church.

SATURDAY NIGHT CROWD FILLED ELKS' FAIR GROUNDS

Saturday night saw a crowd approaching 2,000 on the grounds at the Elks' home on Main street for the second night of the silver anniversary fair of the lodge, and a carnival spirit reigned until a dash of rain about 10 o'clock dispersed those who were enjoying the good time.

Swahn's band rendered a lively program that kept the crowd entertained as they sauntered around the grounds and spent their time at the attractive booths which offered a variety of articles that included blankets, quilts, silver sets, clocks, umbrellas, dolls, pipes, watches and smoking sets, leather handbags, candy, vanity cases, boudoir and other lamps, boxes of sugar and potted meats.

An excellent vaudeville program was given and each number received enthusiastic applause. The Franklin Brothers made a decided hit with the modern athletics, and the Nonpareil Trio was well received. Their harmony and solo numbers were voted O. K. by the crowd. The three Kelly Sisters in a singing and dancing act pleased all every minute they were on the stage and there was popular acclaim for the Misses Emerson and Omega in their novelty musical duo numbers.

It was announced that the Monday night vaudeville would comprise Tom Carroll and his company of 16 people, making one of the best musical comedy bills that has ever been seen here at an outdoor entertainment.

Dancing was again a big attraction Saturday night in the halls in the Elks' home, where Herb Smith's popular orchestra played the kind of program the people liked.

Tuesday night is to be Willimantic night at the fair, when the Willimantic lodge members will attend in a body, with their own band. The Willimantic Elks have a way of doing things hum when they are around and they promise they will have all their usual pep when they come here Tuesday night.

LOUVAIN UNIVERSITY WAS NORWICH VISITOR

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Jules de Becker, president of the University of Louvain, Belgium, who spent Friday in town the guest of Rev. William A. Keefe, rector of St. Mary's Memorial church celebrated a low mass in the parish church Saturday morning at 8 o'clock. Rt. Rev. de Becked has been touring this country in the interests of his college and is now homeward bound. Father Keefe was a student at Louvain 20 years ago during the administration of Rt. Rev. de BecKer and the churchman honored his former pupil with a visit. He left for Hartford later in the day.

In honor of the distinguished visitor Father Keefe gave a dinner at noon Friday with the following guests: Bishop John G. Murray of Hartford, who was also a student of Monsignor de Becker, Rev. M. H. May of St. Patrick's church, Rev. U. O. Bellerose of Taftville, Rev. Frederick Dessureault of Occum, Rev. R. P. Morrissey of Plainfield, Rev. W. T. O'Brien of Baltic, Rev. J. J. McCabe and Rev. James Taylor of Jewett City, Rev. B. Donnelly and Rev. John J. Quinn of Grosvenordale.

Later Monsignor de Becker visited St. Patrick's church, which he declared to Father May was one of the most beautiful edifices he had seen.

In the afternoon he visited the Norwich Golf club where nine holes were played by several members of the party, the first golf Monsignor de Becker had ever seen.

PROBABLY ANOTHER BOAT TO REPLACE CAPE COD

The steamer Cape Cod of the Thames River line between this city and New York, has probably made her last trip out of this port, judging from statements given out by officials of the company in New London. In all probability the vessel will be junked and a new craft substituted in her stead. The Cape Cod was regularly engaged in the freight service to the metropolis until the evening of March 13, when she went on the rocks off Plum Island and sustained considerable damage to her underbody, which was punctured in several places.

That the vessel did not sink in the deep waters of Plum Gut was due to the fact that the captain of the steamer ordered full speed ahead and just managed to beach the craft on Orient Point when the rising water which poured into her hold, extinguished the fires under the boilers.

The Merritt-Chapman-Scott corporation was notified and the steamer was afterward patched up and hauled off the bar. She was later taken to New York city and has been tied up there ever since. No move has been made to repair the steamer and the local line has been operating with one vessel since that time, the steamer John M. Worth. It was stated at the New London office of the company to be very doubtful if the Cape Cod will be repaired and that the company expects to replace her with another steamer in the near future.

Thompson of Hartford, one of the new members elected was Miss Elizabeth Kennard Abbe, South Windham, ninth in descent from William Bradford. Bishop Brewster was elected to the office of elder of the society to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Dr. John Coleman Adams. Samuel C. Doty was elected as auditor, and Miss Katherine Seymour Day was appointed a member of the Historical research committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John C. Kinney. Plans are being made for a mid-summer meeting to be held at the New Haven Lawn club on June 5, when a luncheon will be served and the society will be addressed by Professor William Lyon Phelps. A visit to the Harkness Memorial quadrangle is also one of the contemplated features of the entertainment.

30,000 PERSONS WITNESS BULL FIGHTS IN ROME

Rome, May 6.—(By the A. P.)—Thirty thousand persons this afternoon filled the national stadium to witness Rome's first bull fights. Six imported Spanish matadors successively encountered as many bulls. The Romans clamored for the blood of the animals during each fight, but all went home without having seen one of them despatched.

The spectators, however, evinced great pleasure by the gaiety of the Spanish costumes, and gave rounds of applause to the efforts of the banderillos to infuriate the bulls.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Magnolia trees now in blossom in Danielson are among the very beautiful things of the spring season. On Broad and Main street and in other sections of the borough the magnificent blooms were at their best on Sunday—and an evidence that spring finally is really here.

The Frank Murphy Carnival shows closed a week's engagement here on Saturday evening under the auspices of the Danielson Firemen's association. Saturday night the grounds were crowded and the business transacted was the largest of the show period. All of the rides and concessions were kept busy from nightfall until late in the evening. Especially popular were the ferris wheel, the whip and the horses. The motordrome, with a spectacular motorcycle riding act, drew an exceptional attendance.

Throughout the entire engagement of the week, which was without a rainy night, the Murphy shows maintained the reputation of being free from objectionable features. All of the attractions were clean and furnished only innocent amusement. There wasn't a girl show on the ground—such attractions being barred from the Murphy exhibition.

There were times during Sunday when the motor traffic through the business section was so heavy that police officers on duty were obliged to give practically their entire attention to keeping the motorists from getting into a tangle. As a demonstration of what motoring is going to be on Sundays during the late spring and summer season it was sufficient to make the average driver feel that getting out amongst them was a dangerous experiment. Notwithstanding, the traffic moved smoothly and there were no accidents in the borough up to early afternoon.

The beautiful weather brought out a host of machines, hundreds of those that rolled through this section bearing registration of Rhode Island, Massachusetts and other states.

Tomorrow (Tuesday) evening brings the annual convention of the Windham County Y. M. C. A., to be held at the Westfield Congregational church parish house in Danielson. Delegates, men and women, from all parts of the county will attend this meeting, which will be preceded by a supper. At the convention annual reports covering the work of the association in the county during the past year will be given and there will be addresses of interest.

Tomorrow (Tuesday) will be the first day for filing returns of taxable property to the assessors of the borough of Danielson and all such returns must be in their hands by May 26. Those who fail to file sworn returns by that time will be subjected to the usual penalty of 10 per cent. The assessors have given due notice as to the times and places where such returns may be made.

A measure providing for fishing in Alexander's lake has been successful in the legislature and provides for fishing in that body of water on certain days of the week after July 1. This, in effect, is a restoration of the fishing privileges that prevailed there prior to the restriction that has been overcome by the more recent legislation. Another bill that provided for bathing privileges at the lake has not become a law and it was stated at the week-end is not likely to be passed at this session of the legislature, although the promise is made that the bill will be re-introduced at the 1925 session.

At the United Baptist church in East Killingly Sunday afternoon at 1:30 joint funeral services were held for Gilbert Larkin and his three children, Mary, Ethel and Cromwell, Rev. J. W. Carter of the Methodist church at Attawaugan officiating. All the dead were victims of pneumonia during the latter part of March and the early days of April. The funeral was attended by a large number of people resident in East Killingly and near that community. The bodies, which have been entombed since death, were interred in the cemetery at Putnam Heights.

Motorists coming in over the new state highway from Providence during the late forenoon hours of Sunday found traffic additionally congested by the manner in which machines were parked on both sides of the street, swinging to the north of the water fount was completely blocked with parked cars and traffic had to come to a halt at times to avoid accidents in what remained of the available traveled way.

Mrs. John Reilly, Willimantic, addressed a large gathering of women at St. James' parish hall Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Reilly, county director of the Catholic Welfare Council of Connecticut, came here to assist in furthering the activities of the local chapter of the organization, which recently has been recruited to a considerably larger membership than it has heretofore enjoyed. It is anticipated that Mrs. Reilly's visit will further contribute to enlarging the membership and give Danielson a large and energetic organization.

The high water due to the hard rains of the past week is fast receding. The Quinebaug river is once more flowing between its banks. At the Putnam Country Club the golf course is open for the whole nine holes. Trout fishermen will be out again this week whipping the brooks.

Whether or not the increased payroll of approximately $9,000 a week due to the advance in wages that went into effect the first of May, was a factor, the merchants did an unusually large volume of business on Saturday. The business section was crowded with automobiles all of the afternoon and evening and much money was left in the various stores.

Miss Ellen M. Wheelock, Church street, has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Emma Taft, Uxbridge, Mass. Mrs. Taft has just returned from spending the winter in St. Petersburg, Fla. The latter part of this month Miss Wheelock and Mrs. Taft will leave for a trip abroad.

At a juvenile session of the city court Saturday morning a boy who lacked two months of being 18 years of age was presented for procuring an automobile operator's license. He was allowed to plead guilty to driving without a proper license and the seriousness of what he had done was impressed upon him. He paid a small fine.

Putnam won the annual typewriting contest with Killingly high school in Putnam, Friday evening. The decision centers in the work of the two-year pupils. Teams of five from each school competed. New and difficult copy was used and a deduction of ten points was made for every error, even the slightest. Under this rule Miss Ruth Cohen won the two-year pupil contest with a total of 63.7. The nearest to her on the Killingly team was Miss E. Perry with 60.

Miss Brodeur of the Killingly team won the first year pupil contest with a score of 48.1 while the nearest to her on the Putnam team was Miss Genevieve Letters, score 47. During the evening music was furnished by the Putnam high school orchestra.

PUTNAM MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Putnam, May 6.—County Coroner Arthur G. Bill, of Danielson, came to Putnam Saturday morning, and viewed the body of William J. Dolan, 28, who was killed in an automobile accident near Whittlesey's corner on the Providence pike, Friday evening. He gave permission for the removal of the body to the Dolan home in Attawaugan. Examination disclosed that the man's chest had been crushed in, apparently when he was thrown against the driving wheel.

Dolan has been working for some time and was expecting to go back on a job with Contractor John P. Sabin, Monday. Friday evening he was at a local garage when two men from providence bought a new automobile truck. They wished to tow the truck to the Rhode Island city and when asking whese they could find a man to steer it Dolan offered his services.

With the truck in tow the party set off shortly after 7 o'clock and while proceeding down an incline on the state highway in the outskirts of the town, the tow rope broke. Dolan lost control of the truck which crashed into a tree.

The ambulance of the Day Kimball hospital was summoned from a house nearby when it was seen that the man was seriously injured and he was rushed to the hospital. The driver went into the hospital to get assistance in taking Dolan out of the ambulance. When he returned Dolan moved once and then lay still. Examination disclosed that he was dead and he was removed to an undertaker's.

Dolan is survived by a wife and several small children. They were not told of his death until Saturday morning.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

The following brothers and sisters should have appeared in Saturday's Bulletin, among the names of those surviving Mrs. Elmer E. Miller of Griswold, who died Friday.

William and Dwight Main of Laurel Glen, and Fred of Wakefield, R. I., Mrs. Ursula Burns of Boston, Mrs. Etta Holridge of Worcester, and Mrs. O. F. Barnes of Groton Long Point.

Superintendent F. H. P. Clement on Friday gave his lecture on native birds, with seventy-five illustrative lantern slides, in the schools at Riverside, Glasgo and Bethel.

Late travellers over the state road Saturday and Sunday evenings, noting the unusual activity at Tadpole pond stopped to learn the cause. Those who reported the attractive sight in the borough, say the pond reminded one of the enclosed waters of some victorious yacht club, after the final contests of a "Varsity" regatta.

The reason for all the out of the ordinary illumination of this generally quiet pond, is explained when it is told that the law is off and the bull-head fishing is on. Famous Tadpole don't bother now with the six-inch, quarter of a pound variety of forty years ago.

As proof, a man weighed 12 bull-heads on Finn Bros.' scales the other evening that started the bar at 16 pounds. A fisherman, a laborer in the Aspinook bleachery caught one Friday night. He had the head of the fish to show at the plant Saturday. An opened quart size tomato can was produced, and after repeated trials to get the fish's head into the open end, it was given over. It is small wonder that fishing places at Tadpole are at a premium. Sunday, boats were letting at fifty cents an hour, with plenty awaiting their turn. Fishermen who had secured favorable stands on the bank, didn't give them up Saturday night, but held them in relays.

Along after dark one could hear now and then a great splash as though some one had thrown in a dog investigating, another big black bull-head, a foot long, with a mouth like a subway was to be seen in some boat, or flopping around in the sand on the state road. To the passersby the sight was as grand as it was unusual, with the dull glow of the fishermen's fires here and there along the shore, together with the twinkling lights from their dancing lanterns.

James Blair, R. J. Guy and J. H. Tracy of Jewett City and Alec Skinner of Southbridge, a guest of Mrs. Blair, enjoyed an automobile trip to New Haven Saturday where they attended the Shriners' ceremonial of Pyramid Temple of Bridgeport.

Richard Howard, enjoyed a week end visit from his brother, Edward Howard and his grandson, Ray Bouldry of East Bridgewater, Mass. Edward Howard served in the First regiment, Battery B, of Rhode Island and took active part in the battle of Gettysburg. Richard is 89 and Edward is 86, these two are the only survivors of a family of nine children.

The state road here was oiled Saturday.

The gypsy moth hunters are at work in the outlying districts with Jewett City as their headquarters. Sidney Melvin, a local man is now included in the crew. There was some talk Saturday evening that the young men might start a menagerie. Last week on returning to their base one evening they brought in 6 red-tailed hawks, not over three days old, which they secured from a nest in the top of a pine.

Saturday afternoon when the truck stopped in post office square, they had the goods again. A live, up and coming black snake. One of the men possessing none of the common fear of snakes, had the gentleman by the neck. He entered a barber shop, with his snakeship writhing and twisting, in regular circus fashion. Ex-Burgess Mason was in the chair receiving tonsorial attention, and had on a full coating of lather, with long apron tucked under chin. Mason saw the reflection of the great reptile in the mirror. The elapsed time he took getting out of the door to a safe place in the street, lather, apron and all is not worth mentioning.

The snake, after being despatched was laid out of the walk in front of the barber shop and measured 7 feet and 2 inches.

Postmaster D. F. Finn and railway postal clerks, in this vicinity have received notification, that the United States civil service commission will hold a competitive examination for railway postal clerk, on May 26, 1923.

This is the first examination for the railway mail service since the war and all the young men hereabouts, who have reached their 18th, but not their 35th birthday, are interested to move or less extent.

There is a long list of general tests in the examination, from which the following in arithmetic is copied at random:

A railway postal clerk assorted 1900 pieces of mail in 50 minutes. The first 25 minutes he assorted 42 pieces per minute. How many pieces per minute did he assort the last 25 minutes. A substitute railway postal clerk enters the service at $1600 per annum. He is paid for the services he actually performs and is credited with full time when travelling under orders of the department. He is allowed travel expenses not to exceed $2 per day, while on duty away from his designated headquarters. The Connecticut examinations nearest to Jewett City are to be held at New London and Willimantic.

Manager "Hal" Chase of the Ashland team and Manager "Sol" Paquette of the clerks' team have matters pretty well settled, and are able to report that there will be in Jewett City this summer a Twilight league, probably the same that furnished last season, not only plenty of good ball playing, but amusement of a wonderful sort. All the teams will be local, and the rivalry between the Giants and the Red Socks, will have nothing on the home Twilight league.

A long list of splendid ball playing stunts by the one time twilight rookies, is well remembered. If possible a game will be played this week.

Thursday was a half holiday in the borough. Many of the store men spent the afternoon on the trout brooks. "Del" Heneault has 18 nice ones to show as the result of his skill with the rod and line.

Another prominent groceryman, also brought home a string of fish. There was one old "whacker," a new breed of trout, he said, or maybe a "sock-eye" salmon.

Some old anglers who came to see the new species of trout, noted the big brown scales nad round white mouth, smiled and reckoned there wasn't many such trout around these parts. It was a "sucker."

The Maybasket party which was to be held by Pauchaug grange has been postponed on account of the death of Mrs. Elmer Miller.

Miss Alice Ayres of Hartford was the guest of Mis sMarian Robinson over Sunday.

Miss Helen Hull had as a week-end visitor, Miss Ruth Erickson of Danvers, Mass.

President Benjamin T. Marshall of the Woman's College, at New London occupied the pulpit at the Congregational church on Sunday morning and conducted one of the most impressive communion services.

Dorcas Circle of the King's Daughters meets at the home of Mrs. A. W. Harris on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. C. Burdick entertained the Harmony club on Friday afternoon.

Twenty-five dollars was realized at the talk on the Passion play given by Mrs. A. H. Vaughn in the Congregational church vestry. A slight charge of twenty cents was asked as an admission and the money received goes towards the missionary apportionment of the church.

The marks of the valedictorian and salutatorian of this year's class at the Riverside grammar school were very close Ellen Prior's mark was 91.7 and Arlene Burdick's mark was 91.3.

The flowers in the Congregational church on Sunday were given by Mrs. Mary Brown in memory of her sister, Mrs. Stever, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Panton.

David Clark of the Moses Brown school, Providence spent the week end at his home.

Mrs. H. C. Potter and three children of Riverpoint, R. I., are guests at Thomas McBroome's. Mr. and Mrs. James Flannery and daughter of New Britain were week end visitors there and Mrs. McBroome returned with them on Sunday to New Britain.

Mrs. George H. Prior was in Hartford on Friday to preside at a state board meeting of the King's Daughters.

Daniel F. Finn and Peter Flynn were among those who participated in the Elks' parade on the opening of their fair in Norwich Friday night.

TRIED TO FORCE ENTRANCE INTO RAILROAD STATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

Jewett City, May 6.—About two o'clock Sunday morning a man whose name was later said to be Tatreault of Norwich, attempted to force an entrance into the railroad station, claiming he was the night patrolman.

Miss Mildred Galvin, the night operator refused to open the door even in the face of threatened violence.

With fine judgment, Miss Galvin called Miss McCluggage, night operator at the telephone exchange, and asked for help. Officer Vigard on his regular beat could not be located. Deputy Sheriff J. T. Dolan was out of town. Miss McCluggage then called, and succeeded in arousing several men, to whom she explained the situation, and who were willing to help protect the young girl on duty at the depot. J. A. Hourigan, D. F. Finn, Jr., with Dr. J. H. McLaughlin and a friend of his, who happened to be his guest, hurried to the depot. The man was seen prowling around in the shadows. The four rushed up, and right off the reel, the doctor's friend handed the marauder a real Johnson uppercut square on the nose, getting first blood. No officer was present and the man was not arrested. What his object was is not certain. There is no money left there during the night.

Unconfirmed information is to the effect that there were three other men in the party that went to lend their aid. Their names could not be learned.

Your Goldfish.

Do not clean the goldfish globe oftener than once a week. Better take out a dipper of water and add a dipper of fresh water one week and clean the globe the next week. When changing the water have the fresh water as near the same temperature as that in the globe as possible. Give to each fish a piece of food one-quarter inch square daily. Always keep water plant and pebbles in globe. Do not put globe where sun will strike it and do not keep in too warm a place.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES.

JUST TALK IT OVER WITH MOTHER.

When you're mighty discouraged and blue,
And weary of toiling and sorrow,
Tomorrow is clouded with tears,
And today's just the same as tomorrow,
When life seems all cluttered with doubt,
And you're beaten somewhat or another;
It's funny how troubles smooth out,
If you just talk it over with mother!

And then when you're blithe as a bird,
And when like a bird you are singing,
When joy seems to brighten each day,
And your spirits all onward are winging,
It's queer how much gladder you feel,
If you just share your bliss with another;
Somehow it makes happiness real
If you just talk it over with mother!

You can't travel far with despair,
When home looks so bright and so cozy,
With mother to smile on you there,
So sweet and warm-hearted and rosy,
Her love is the magical art
Which makes every man seem your brother,
True purpose and hope fill your heart,
When you just talk it over with mother!
—Anne Campbell in Detroit News.

FROM "A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSE."

We built a ship upon the stairs
All made of the back-bedroom chairs,
And filled it full of sofa pillows
To go a-sailing on the billows.

We took a saw and several nails,
And water in the nursery pails;
And Tom said, "Let us also take
An apple and a slice of cake;"—
Which was enough for Tom and me
To go a-sailing on till tea.

We sailed along for days and days,
And had the very best of plays;
But Tom fell out and hurt his knee,
So there was no one left but me.
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

If anyone should ask you how far away the nearest star is could you answer him? The chances are that you wouldn't even have the slightest idea of the almost unbelievable distance between this earth of ours and the nearest star.

In order to get some slight idea of the wonderful size of the universe, which includes our earth, the sun, moon and stars, let us see how long it would take us to go to the nearest star. If an express train, traveling a mile a minute every minute in the day, started from our earth for the nearest star, it would take forty million years, without a stop, to make the trip.

Figure out if you can, how far such a trip would be in miles. First, you would multiply one mile by 60 to find out how far the train would go in one hour. Then you would multiply that result by 24 in order to find out the distance traveled by the train in one day and then multiply that total by 365 to find out how far the train would travel in the year, as there are 365 days in a year. The last step would be to multiply the total for the year by 40,000,000 and that would give us a miles the distance to the nearest star.

The moon, the sun and the planets are much nearer to us than the stars. Perhaps it will interest you to know that it would take a train traveling a mile a minute 166 days, or a little over five months to go to the moon. In other words if the train started this morning for the moon it would not get there until sometime next October.

It would take the same train a great deal longer to make a journey to the sun, 177 years in fact, and to the nearest planet, Venus, 50 years. A trip to Neptune would require over 5,000 years.

STORIES WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

What I Saw Through the Microscope.

Dear Uncle Jed: Yesterday one of my school friends brought a microscope to school, so our teacher let us look through it. First she put a fly's wing in the microscope. I thought that the wing would stay as small as it was, but when I looked through it, I was surprised to see how large it was.

When I looked at the wing first, before it was put in the microscope, it looked something like isinglass, but when I looked through it after it was put in, it looked like a thin piece of silver colored cloth, with a kind of framework holding or spreading the silver colored cloth out.

The next thing she put in was a fly's leg. When I looked at it first, it looked like a small snake covered with hair, but after I drew it on a piece of paper the way the teacher told me to do, I found out it was a fly's leg.

The next thing she put in was the fly's head. This was also different than I thought it would be.

It was round, except at the bottom where it had a kind of a point, which I supposed was the mouth. This had a few short hairs on it. I think that this will help me if I ever take up science.

"Sport" Fell in Ice Pond.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you and I want to tell you about my pet dog. His name is Sport. He is gray and white and is a great dog for woodchuck. Last winter he fell in the ice pond when papa was getting ice and had to be pulled out by his collar with an ice pick. I am glad he was saved. I will try to write again to the Wide-Awake Circle.

The Oriole's Nest.

Dear Uncle Jed: I watched two orioles one day as they searched among the branches of a great elm for a safe place for their nest. They finally selected a spot hidden from the eyes of snakes and owls, and out of the reach of small boys' guns. Then they went to work at the building itself, gathering horsehair, twine, twigs, and hay.

All these they wove closely together to form the walls of their little abode. The inside they lined with ducks' feathers and tufts of lambs' wool, making a soft warm bed for the baby birds that would soon fill it. No children's home could be snugger or safer than this little nest that rocked and swayed in the tree top.

Goes to Cooking Club.

Dear Uncle Jed: I would like to tell you and my friends what I do on Saturdays. The first thing in the morning I do is to eat my breakfast. Then I begin to do housework. I think every little girl knows how to do housework.

In the afternoon I go to a club. It is called The Boys' and Girls' Cooking and Sewing Club. It is quite a long name. The first thing we do is to sew for one hour. Then we cook or bake for another hour. Last Saturday we made one egg muffins. This Saturday we are going to make bread. I hope all the little friends will have a club where they can learn together, and become good, industrious men and women.

SOPHIE GORSKI, Age 12.
Leonard's Bridge.

The Chipmunk.

Dear Uncle Jed: Perhaps it is his size, but the chipmunk is the contest of all the squirrels we see. He is so small he dodges in and out of the chinks in the wall, and when you think you may almost reach him he is gone. They are very fond of sweet apples and nuts, and it is said when the nuts are ready they will store away a lot of them for the winter.

Did you ever see a chipmunk with his pockets full of nuts. They are not exactly pockets, but they answer the same purpose. These pockets are his cheeks, or his pouches as they are sometimes called. Here he will crowd in nut after nut until there is room for no more. Then away he goes to his nest, wherever that may be. It is surprising how much these cheeks will hold, and then what a queer looking little creature he becomes.

Sometimes the boys and dogs together come across one of these storehouses full of nuts. The squirrels have been very industrious for weeks gathering the nuts for the winter. It is too bad to rob them of their stores, and we do not believe the squirrel would be so unkind to you. Isn't it a better way to let them have their stores themselves? They have worked hard to save them.

My Pet Dog.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you about my pet dog. His name is Sheppy. His color is light brown. He is a very nice dog and gentle. You can put your hand in his mouth and he wont bite you. I feel very sorry for him because when he was little, a horse named Frank kicked him. Ever since he has walked lame. I hope you will enjoy my story.

The Will.

Dear Uncle Jed: There was once a wild young fellow who would not work, but depended upon his rich uncle to support him. One day he met a friend of his, who asked him why he did not work and save his money. He replied, "I needn't work, I have a rich uncle and when he dies he will leave me all of his money which will be sufficient for me to live upon when I am old!"

This gentleman, being a friend of the young fellow's rich uncle, told the latter what his nephew had said. The uncle was displeased for he liked this nephew.

Soon after, the rich uncle became ill and knowing that he was going to die, chanced his will. After his death the will was read and this is one of the statements:

"To my dear nephew, I leave him my walking stick to lean upon."

Story About a Pig.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you a story about a pig. I once knew a family of eight little pigs. They belonged to a farmer who lived in the country. One was white all over and one was nearly all black. The others were spotted with black and white. They lived in a tight little pen just behind the barn.

For a long time they lived happy and contented. But one day the white pig found a hole in the pen. He squeezed himself through. He said to himself, "Now, I shall begin to see the world." He felt very proud, thinking of all the things that he would tell his brothers.

Piggy walked around the barnyard until he came to a place where he could get in the orchard. He thought this was a nice, cool place, though he couldn't find anything to eat. He wandered on till he came to a garden. He wriggled his little body under the gate.

There piggy found beets and tender lettuce plants. He ate and ate and ate till he could eat no more. Just as he was leaving he heard a dreadful noise. He looked and saw the farmer's boys and the great dog running towards him. The dog bit his ear and scared poor piggy so that he quite forgot all the wonderful things he was going to tell his brothers.

Those Punctuation Marks

Dear Uncle Jed:— Oh, dear, sighed Warren as he came in from school one day, I wish we didnt have to learn so much about periods and commas and semi-colons, and such things. I hate them.

Mamma laid down her sewing and said, "Why do you hate them, Warren?" "Why it's so hard to remember when to use them, and besides I don't see why we couldn't write sentences without putting in any punctuation marks."

Mamma smiles and then, rising from her chair, she went over to the desk and got out a piece of paper and a pencil. Then she wrote: The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn half an hour after his head was cut off.

"Why, mummie, how funny!" exclaimed Warren, when he read it. "How could a turkey walk around eating corn without any head??" "He couldn't," exclaimed mamma, and yet I have written just what I intended to write. I have, however, left out all punctuation marks."

Then she bent down and punctuated the sentence. It then read: "The little turkey strutted about the yard and ate corn; half an hour after, his head was cut off." "Oh, I see!" said Warren. And then and there he resolved to learn all that he could about punctuation marks.

My Pet Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you about my pet dog. I have a little dog and when we bought him he was plump and fat. His color is light brown and white; around his neck it is white, his head is brown and his tail is half brown and half white. He is just seven months old. When I am eating some cake or a bun he looks at me so that I have to give him something. When I come from school and he sees me he barks and runs to me. I hope the Wide Awakes will like my story.

Visited Roger Williams' Home

Dear Uncle Jed: For many summers I spent my vacation at Oakland Beach. I went in bathing and I had many boat rides. I went to Roger Williams park. There I saw Roger Williams' home. I went inside and looked around. One thing I remember was a small wooden cradle which Roger Williams was rocked in. There were many more things that he used, too.

Then I went out around the grounds, which were very beautiful. There were all kinds of animals. There were ponies which children could ride either in wagons or on their backs. I saw many wonderful arches of roses and so many beautiful things, it would take me a long time to tell you of them all.

A Narrow Escape

Dear Uncle Jed: I think this is the best story I have written to the Wide-Awake Circle. Now I am going to tell you of my narrow escape. One day I was sliding down hill. There was ice on the ground. It was frozen very hard. Well I slid down twice and nothing happened. But when I slide down the third time something happened. A car was coming, but I did not see it. So off I started. When I got down at the foot of the hill I saw the car but I could not stop the sled up because it was so icy. I went out into the middle of the road. I went right in front of the car. When I got up my nose was bleeding and my hand was cut. But I was glad that I did not get killed. All the people that lived up where I do were screaming that I was dead. Mother came running all frightened and the driver also. He got out of the car to see how badly I was hurt. He had to tell the headquarters. I can not slide any more on the hill.

I hope all the Wide-Awakes will like this story.

Our Town's Speaking and Spelling Contest

Dear Uncle Jed: Friday the sixth of April there was half a day's school because in our town there was going to be a spelling and speaking contest at the Gales Ferry church at two o'clock.

One child from each school had to speak and one had to spell. In the afternoon when school was dismissed I went up to Marjorie's house to go down with her and her mother. We were early so we had to wait a while before it began. The first thing on the program was singing by the Gales Ferry school followed by the speaking and spelling. Some of the pieces the children spoke were, "The Inchcape Rock," "The Name of Old Glory," "Old Iron Sides," "The Deacon's Masterpiece," "If," and "Horatius at the Bridge."

When the speaking of pieces was over the judges went out to decide who should have first prize in speaking, while the spelling was going on. The first child to go down missed on the word "awful." A girl by the name of Elizabeth Baldwin from Drawbridge school stood up the longest.

Likes Wide-Awake Letters

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide-Awakes. I hope they will all enjoy my letters. I go to school at Fort Point. I am in the third grade. I like my school very much; also my teacher, who is Miss Mary Corcoran. She is very kind to us and works very hard to have us do what is right. I will write again if I may. I enjoy reading the Wide-Awakes' letters, they are all so interesting.

Has Cousin Two Years Old.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have the sweetest little cousin. His name is Norman, he is two years old and is very cute and is a real sport for his age. He loves to play ball, tag and hide and seek. Often when I come home from school I go to see him and tease him.

Named Parrot Beauty

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week mother bought me a parrot and I named it Beauty. His wings are red, blue, green and yellow. He is very tame and will eat from my hand. I am going to teach him how to talk.

About My Journey

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide-Awakes. I used to live in New York, but was very glad to move into the country. My father bought a farm and we have cows, horses, pigs and chickens. I like to milk the cows.

We came from New York in a taxi. I have a little brother who does funny things. He is always making jokes. I am anxious for summer to come so I can go swimming and gather flowers and berries.

A Cruel Boy.

Dear Uncle Jed: Once there was a boy and he was well to do, for his parents were rich. As he was walking along the street eating a sandwich he saw a poor lonesome dog. He called the dog to him, saying that he would give him something to eat. When the dog came up to him, instead of giving him something nice to eat, as he had promised, the boy hit the dog on the head with a stick.

A man across the street who had been watching this performance called the boy to him, saying he would give him a nickel. When the boy came up to him the man hit him with his cane. The boy said: "How dare you hit me?"

Then the man said: "That was the way you just treated that dog." This taught the boy a lesson. He was always kind to dumb animals after that.

What I Like to Do.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to let you know what I like to do on Saturday. I like to get up early in the morning and feed my chickens and pigeons. Then I like to get my dog and go into the woods. When I come back I chase the cows into the woods. Then I get my breakfast.

After that we play house. We go into the woods and pick evergreen. We trim our house with it. We play visiting a park. Our park is in the orchard. We have swings and see-saws in our park. Later we go barefooted and play games.

Helped Sick Mother.

Dear Uncle Jed: As I was out walking one warm summer morning I stopped to rest under a large pine tree. As I was about to fall asleep I heard a noise in back of me. When I turned I was very much surprised to see a little girl about six years old running toward me.

She had large blue eyes, brown hair, rosy red cheeks, a dark complexion and wore nearly ragged clothes. Her hair was short and tied up with an old ribbon. She had no stockings or shoes on her feet. Her hands were rough, looking as if she had to do very hard work.

As she came up to me she seemed somewhat frightened, but stood up straight and said: "Mother is very sick and no one lives around here and so, on seeing you, I came here to ask you if you would please come up and see mother."

Of course, I went and found her very weak looking, but she was getting better. I stayed with them for a week until she got well and then I went on my way. The reason she looked so very poor was that the nearest store was two miles away and neither of them could go.

As I was returning two weeks later from a visit I stopped there a while and as I looked around I could hardly tell that it was the same place it had been so improved. I don't believe it would have been if it hadn't been for the girl and mother who first came out of the door.

One Good Lesson.

Dear Uncle Jed: A little girl came to school one morning without having washed her face and hands, saying she did not have time. Her mother was Jennie. This little girl was a lazy, dirty and naughty little girl. This girl was lazy because she did not wash her face and hands. She is a dirty girl because she did not wash her face and hands. She is naughty because she did not tell the truth. She did have time to wash them.

The children of her school did not play with her. They shamed her by saying "Do you want me to wash your face and hands? Let us all bring some soap and water."

Little Jennie cried but it did not do any good. They washed her face and hands, and after that she always had time to wash her face and hands.

Out Riding.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a horseback ride I had with three of my school friends. We went last Saturday afternoon and had a delightful time. My friend Helen rode a dark brown mare named Kitty. Eva rode a light brown horse with a face all white called Dolly. Jeanette rode a small black pony named Charlemagne. I rode a black mare who started off with ears back when she heard the name Nelly.

We rode for about three miles and then stopped a half hour at one of our schoolmate's house. Altogether I think we rode about five miles, but it was a blazing hot day, so we let the horses walk most of the way.

I hope my Wide-Awake friends have had or will have a horseback ride, for it is great fun.

Description of a Cottage.

Dear Uncle Jed: As Emma was wandering about one came upon a pretty spot with one cottage far off from the main road. The wind was softly blowing through the leaves sog making them dance about. Small flowers and leaves were just beginning to show their heads above the ground. Grass was beginning to turn green. The birds were singing gayly in the trees and everywhere around there was the appearance of spring.

Around the cottage were rose bushes with small leaves, daffodils were already blossoming and many shrubs and flowers were beginning to show their tiny heads. In a small brook near the cottage ducks were happily swimming on its swift flowing waters. A large black angora cat ran about chasing some small chickens. A big dog could be seen swimming about in the water and drinking, and white pigeons were flying about here and there.

Now let us look at the cottage. It was a small white one and a half story house, with small windows, made in an old fashioned way. It was said to be more than 50 years old. For many a year an old man lived in it, but now a family of four had just moved in. How glad they were when they saw how pretty it still was, and how nice it would look if they spent a little time on it every day. Now the white cottage would have a chance to make someone's days happy.

Here's a Busy Girl.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you what I like to do on Saturdays. I get up early in the morning about 6 or half past 6 o'clock, wash my face, hands and arms. The next thing I do is to comb my hair.

Then I go to the kitchen and say Good morning! to the whole family. I help mother get the breakfast. After breakfast, I clean up the table and wash the dishes. When the dishes are done I go to the bedrooms and sweep up and make the beds, dust the chairs, and the rest of the furniture. I then go and help mother get the dinner ready. I peel potatoes and set them to cook. I am quick on Saturday for I want to go to the cooking and sewing club. When dinner is over I clean up the table and wash the dishes again. Then sweep the floor.

When my floor is swept I go and dress myself for the boys' and girls' sewing and cooking club. When I get there I meet most of my school friends. For one hour we have sewing and the second hour we use for cooking.

I wish you were here, Uncle Jed, to see us having good times and fun.

Chicken Swallowed Fishhook.

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you what fun we are having in the spring. Many noons we go fishing and one noon I caught a fish. It was a trout, eight and a half inches long. When we came back we threw the fishpole down on the porch. There was some bait on the line. After our afternoon recess our supervisor came to visit our school. When he came into the room he said: "The chicken out there has swallowed the fishhook." I went out with him and looked at the chicken. It happened like this because the school is in my father's house.

What My Old Shoe Told Me.

Dear Uncle Jed: "Here it goes!" said a small boy who was about to toss an old shoe in a heap of rubbish.

"Not so fast, I'm sure," he heard someone say softly. "I've served you all well, now let me tell my story before I am buried out of sight forever.

"I was taken from the hide of a cow and tanned at a large leather factory in New York. Was later sent to Boston to be made into the shape of a shoe. I was sent to a large [illegible] Hartford, then to a smaller dealer's.

"I was tried on by many, but I did not satisfy them. Later I was tried on by a boy, and his mother bought me and my mate. I was worn for three months and then I was useless.

"Now you may throw me away if you wish, since you know all about me," said the shoe.

A Family in Asia.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing another story to you. In the far away parts of Asia there lived a man and woman and four children. These people were not very rich, but they had enough to live on. The girl helped her mother with the housework. The boys helped their father with the garden work.

One summer there was not enough rain so the crops did not grow well. But they managed to get along. Many of the neighbors came to him to buy food. But he said to them, "I have hardly enough for my family," but I will sell you some.

The family was glad when spring came again. The boys and their father went to work in the garden as usual. This summer there was more rain and the crops grew better. He saved more this year than he usually did in case there wasn't much rain the next summer. But there was enough rain and the crops grew well. He did not need what he saved.

The Kingfisher.

Dear Uncle Jed: The kingfisher was a very greedy bird. One day as he was hunting for fish an eel came and said, "Try and catch me if you can." The kingfisher began laughing. Do you want to see me catch you. The eel said, "Yes, if you can." So the kingfisher began chasing the eel but the eel was very wild and the kingfisher said, "I thought I could catch you but you have fooled me by showing me what you can do.

So the eel ate his supper and after a while he went to bed. Next morning when the eel woke up he laughed and laughed about the adventure he had with kingfisher.

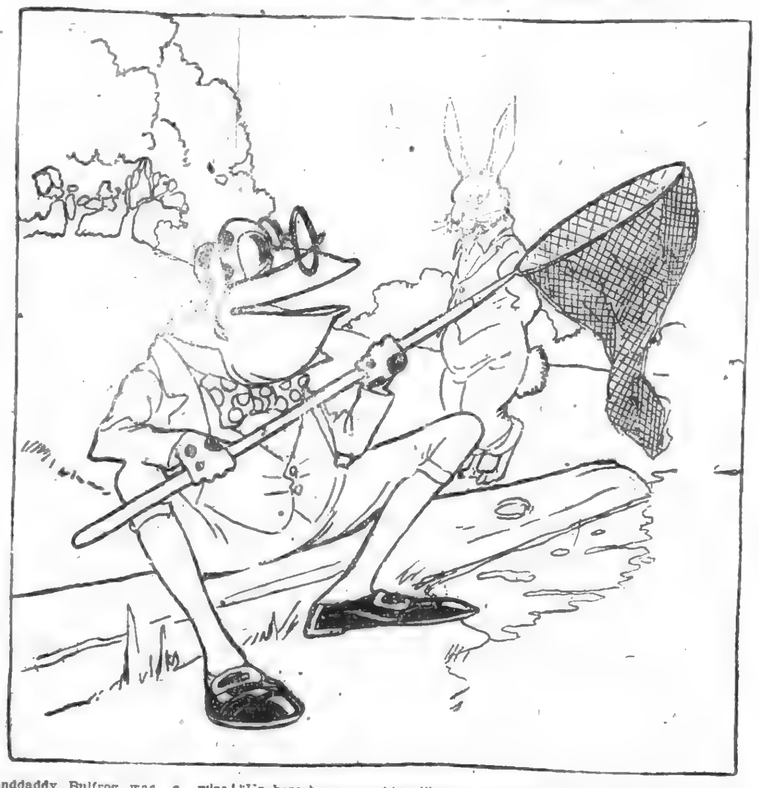
THE LITTLE JACK RABBIT PICTURE FOR COLORING



Granddaddy Bullfrog was a wise sort of person. He never said much but when he did speak, he always said something worth while.

"Good morning," said Little Jack Rabbit, one sunshiny forenoon, as he stopped beside the Old Duck Pond where the Old Gentleman Frog was sitting on a log all day, catching flies.

"It's a good morning if you have helped your mother with her work," answered Granddaddy Bullfrog.

"I have," replied the little bunny boy. "I've polished the front door knob, fed the canary and filled the woodbox with kindling."

"You're a good little bunny boy," said the wise old frog. "When I was a tadpole, I had lots of work to do for my mother, but it never hurt me. No sirce!" and Granddaddy Bullfrog smoothed down the wrinkle in his white waistcoat and wiped his spectacles on a clean piece of meadow grass.

"You said, 'When you were a tadpole'. Does that mean when you were a boy?" asked Little Jack Rabbit.

"Yes sir—that's what it means," replied the old gentleman frog, snapping up a fly that ventured too near the big log.

Just then, Mrs. Oriole, from her nest in the Weeping Willow Tree, began to sing:

"Up here in my stocking-like nest we swing—
My little birdies and I.
We are content 'neath our willow tent
To sing as the day goes by."

"Then will your little birds learn to fly?" asked the curious bunny boy rabbit.

"As soon as their wings are strong and well feathered," answered the pretty lady bird mother. It won't be long."

"Well, I guess I must be going," said Little Jack Rabbit and away he hopped, clipperty clip, hipperty hip, hopperty hip, until he came to a wooded hillside, where, beneath a pile of rocks, Danny Fox had his den. The little bunny boy rabbit suddenly remembered where he was. With a frightened twinkle of his little pink nose, he started to turn back, when, all of a sudden, quicker than a wink or the bills on the first of the month, out jumped Danny Fox from his rocky bungalow.

"Dear, oh, dear me! Now what shall I do? I'm a goner, I know it—I know it!" cried the poor little bunny boy rabbit. "Yes, I'm a goner as sure the sunshine follows rain."

"Stop whispering to yourself!" snarled the wicked fox, "I've a good mind to eat you right now before the Policeman Dog happens by with his big hickory stick."

"Please do—I mean please don't! oh dear, oh dear, I don't know what I mean," cried the poor frightened little bunny, and his pink nose trembled and twinkled like a star on a frosty night.

"Grr-r-r-r!" growled the old fox, creeping up closer and closer, till his hot breath burned the poor little rabbit's whiskers. "I'm going to eat you now. Make no mistake about it. You have given me the slip once too often."

"No, you're not!" shouted a friendly voice and from behind a clump of trees out ran the Old Brown Horse. Turning quickly around, he let fly with his two hind feet, sending Danny Fox through the air like a hairy, four-footed, two eared football.

"Now, get away and never come home," cried the old, brown horse, leaning over to see if the little rabbit was all right. Of course, he was, but all a tremble.

"Thank you," he cried. "Won't you come home with me? You can sleep in our Big Red Barn."

"All right," said the Big Brown Horse, and he trotted after the little bunny rabbit boy.

OFFICERS

HUGH P. STEPHENSON, Vice-President and General Manager Branch Office
GUY A. HAM, Treasurer
JOHN R. WATSON, Clerk and Assistant Treasurer

The New England Equity Corporation is organized to assist in bridging the gap which exists in the present banking system of the United States by providing a borrowing source for that great body of deserving citizens, comprising about 40 per cent of the entire population of this country, who have no commercial banking facilities to negotiate small loans on terms commensurate with their incomes.

The Company is accomplishing a great social and civic purpose, and has its own peculiar function in every community in which it operates, namely:—that of standing between the commercial banks and the unlicensed and often unscrupulous loan broker, who makes small loans for short periods at ruinous rates of interest, with additional cost for renewals, thus causing serious trouble to many deserving persons.

Statistics show that the demand for this class of money in the 17 states having small loan laws, is in excess of One Hundred Million Dollars a year and that the combined resources of the societies and corporations now engaged in making such loans, under state license, supervision and control, furnish only about 10 per cent of the money needed.

The New England Equity Corporation, through its branch offices, makes loans up to $300.00 (the small loan laws permit no larger) for necessary purposes only, to persons of good repute and established earning power at the fair and just interest rates established by the laws of the states in which it operates.

The loan is usually repaid in monthly installments over a period of from 10 to 15 months, as the borrowers' income warrants, without entailing hardship upon his family; interest is not deducted in advance, but is charged only on the unpaid balance at the end of each month, and there are no other fees or charges, neither are there any penalties for lapses.

The New England Equity Corporation does not, and can not, receive deposits of money subject to check or deal in bank exchange. It does not compete with banks and trust companies, neither can it do any "Pawnbroking."

It is clearly shown by the statements of concerns, with adequate capital, engaging in the making of small loans, exclusively, for the past eight years, that the business is safe, sound, necessary and profitable, comparing more than favorably with the profits of National and State banks and Trust Companies, and that the loss ratio is as low as that of National Banks, being about 1 per cent per annum. The low loss ratio in the small loan business is easy to understand when it is taken into consideration that—

Loans are made in sums of $300.00 or less, usually repayable in from 10 to 15 months, and only to borrowers of unquestioned integrity and who have an assured income from their work or property, as shown by the most careful investigation.

The wide distribution of loans in small units in many industrial cities provides the very essence of safety, and embodies the soundest principle of financial security.

No bank was ever wrecked by small borrowings. It is the big loan that most often causes trouble.

NOW OPERATING

The New England Equity Corporation was incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in June, 1922. On September 11th, 1923, it opened a branch office for the loaning of money in New Haven, Connecticut; on December 11th, 1922, it opened a branch office in Hartford, Connecticut; on December 18th, 1922, it opened a branch office in Bridgeport, Connecticut; on January 10th, 1923, it opened a branch office in Fitchburg, Massachusetts; another branch office will be opened in Norwich, Connecticut, early in May, and additional branches are being arranged for.

ISSUE

The New England Equity Corporation has an authorized issue of 25,000 shares of 8 per cent Preferred Cumulative stock of the par value of $100, together with 50,000 shares of Common stock of no par value.

DIVIDENDS

Preferred stock shall entitle the holder thereof to receive out of the net earnings, and the Company shall be bound to pay, a fixed quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share payable on the first days of January, April, July and October of each year before any dividends be set apart or paid on the Common stock.

The branch offices operating only a few months, have made over 1550 loans totaling about a quarter million dollars at an average of $161.00 per loan; the offices are already on a paying basis, with net earnings sufficient to pay the dividend on all outstanding preferred stock.

CONCLUSION

We have set forth herein the plan and scope of our business, its purposes and advantages to the masses and to the business world. Our capital loaned to worthy citizens materially benefits the merchant and professional man with whom the borrower has dealings.

The Company is conducting a necessary business under good management, strong financing, and the moral and financial support given it by its officers, board of directors and others in a number of cities on the theory that it is rendering a good public service to worthy persons upon fair terms.

The dividend value to holders of the Common stock should be large with a correspondingly increasing value of the shares as we turn our capital and surplus rapidly through the interest received monthly from loans made. The Common stock bears a resemblance to ordinary bank stock, but without its attendant double liability.

The 8 per cent Preferred stock of the New England Equity Corporation is backed by funds which are essentially of a liquid nature and must of necessity always remain so.

COLUMBIA

Mrs. John Lewis has been quite ill at her home on the Green during the past few days with what was supposed to be congestion of the liver. On Thursday her condition became so serious that she was taken to a hospital in Willimantic, where it was found that an operation was necessary for an attack of gallstones. Her daughter, Miss Viola Lewis, of Hartford, has been attending her.

Quinsy sore throat has been prevalent at and near the Green recently, several persons having contracted it. All are better now.

While a meeting of the teachers of the district schools in town was in progress on Tuesday afternoon at the Center school on the Green, a delegation of a boy and a girl from each school was out on the lawn, engaged in athletic contests. The girls took part in a potato ... race, a basketball throw and a 50 yard dash, while the boys played a very noisy ball game and ran a 50 yard dash. The winners are to go to Willimantic shortly and compete with winners in surrounding towns.

Mrs. R. G. Proctor and her sister, Miss Clark, arrived at their home in Columbia on Wednesday afternoon. They have been spending the winter in New York city.

At the meeting of the grange held on Wednesday evening Eugene LaFleur was granted a demit, an invitation to meet with the East Central Pomona grange at Hilltown was received, and the members were reminded of the invitation of Mansfield grange to meet with them and furnish the program on Tuesday evening next. Mrs. Philip Isham, the lecturer for the evening, presented the following program: Song, Mrs. Philip Isham; recitation, Poor Charley Jones of Boshville, Miss Esther Granstrom; Lullaby, Mrs. Philip Isham; address on Bees, by Professor Crandall of Connecticut Agricultural college. The address was very interesting, covering the whole subject of bees, honey, its production, its desirability for food over cane sugar, its market value, also the cost and labor of the production of honey and the care of the bees. He stated also the great uses of bees in fertilizing fruit and vegetable blossoms. A vote of thanks was given Mr. Crandall for his able and very interesting lecture.

The annual meeting of the Columbia Improvement society, which was to have been held on Saturday evening last, was postponed to Monday evening.

LEDYARD

Mr. and Mrs. Alva C. Harpe (Ruth E. Baldwin) have started on their return trip to their home in Salem, Ore. They have been visiting at Mrs. Harpe's former home at the Draybridge. Mrs. Harpe is the daughter of Christopher Baldwin of the Draybridge district. They started for Norwich last July from Salem and arrived here in August, traveling 4,000 miles in 21 days.

A minstrel show was given in Grange hall Saturday evening, April 28, by members of the Shore Line Electric and the E. C. P. Co. of Norwich. This was one of the best plays ever staged in Grange hall and it was a laugh from start to finish. Grange hall was packed and the ladies served a chicken pie supper. Dancing followed the play.

SATURDAY'S MARKET

New York, May 5.—Prices rallied briskly at the opening of today's stock market in response to extensive short covering operations but when these had been completed the market sagged again and closing prices were irregular. The only outside news development of any importance was another cut of 10 cents a barrel in the price of Mid-Continent Crude Oil, the third within the last fortnight, but with few exceptions the oil shares offered good resistance to the selling pressure which the cut inspired.

The substantial buying support forthcoming for stock generally associated with strong financial associated with strong financial interests undoubtedly prompted the short covering which set in late yesterday and was carried on through the first hour today.

Bear traders, however, apparently endeavoring to create a pessimistic feeling in the market, hammered Baldwin Locomotive in the last hour and forced down 1 1-2 points to 127 1-4; a new low record for the year. Several of other speculative favorites, notably Studebaker American Can, Cosden, Gulf States Steel, North American and Stewart Warner also yielded fractionally on the day. U. S. Steel touched 102 3-4 but fell back to 102 1-8, up 1-8, at the close. Sugar shares made good recovery from recent heaviness. American rising 2 points and Cuban-American Cuba Cane common and preferred and South Porto Rican gaining a point or more. Some of the other active industrials to register net gains a point or more. Burns Bros. B, Eastman Kodak, Pan-American A and B, People, and Pullman.

Local gas shares were under pressure as a result of the passage by the state legislature of the "dollar gas" bill. Consolidated Gas broke 1 1-2 to 63 but rallied later to 63 3-4. Brooklyn Union Gas closed a point lower. Phillips Petroleum, off 1 3-8, registered the largest loss in the oil group.

Foreign exchange rates held fairly steady with business quiet. Demand sterling eased slightly to $4.62 5-16 or with a small fraction of the year's low. French francs held steady around 6.66 1-2 cents. German marks rallied slightly to .0089 cents.

The weekly clearing house statement showed decreases of $14,331,000 in loans, discounts and investments; $76,000 in reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank and $12,027,000 in net demand deposits. Time deposits increased by $10,174,000 and cash in own vaults by $1,025,000. Aggregate reserve totaled $511,256,000, leaving excess reserve of $11,325,810, an increase of $1,218,490 over the previous week.

AMERICAN COLONIST DAUGHTERS HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The second annual meeting of the National Society, Daughters of the American Colonists, was held in Washington Monday morning, April 23, followed by a buffet luncheon, Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, president-general, presiding. While the society is still in the process of organization, the officers reported a total growth in 12 states and a total membership of 700, and it has begun to assume great responsibilities as an organization. During the coming summer the organization will place a circular stone seat in Elder Brewster's garden in the town park in Plymouth, Mass., to commemorate the first daughters of the colonists who came over in "The Ann."

In December, 1921, there was organized a state society of the Colonists in the state library in Hartford, Conn., with a large charter membership list. Officers were elected, of which Mrs. Clarence F. R. Jenne of Hartford was chosen state regent. The Connecticut society was represented at the recent general assembly by nine delegates: Mrs. Clarence F. R. Jenne, regent; Mrs. Charles F. Messinger, recording secretary; Mrs. Noyes D. Baldwin, first vice regent; Mrs. James H. Brown, second vice regent; Mrs. Louis I. Mason, third vice regent; Mrs. Harry R. Williams, fourth vice regent; Miss Sara Mead Webb, registrar; Mrs. Chester A. Bailey and Mrs. Charles F. Merwin.

The Connecticut Colonists will hold a May breakfast at the Hartford club on Thursday, May 24, at which time reports of the general assembly will be given by the delegates and the state librarian. George S. Godard, will be the guest and speaker.

It is desired that a strong society composed of descendants of colonial ancestry be firmly established in Connecticut, as there is room for this organization in the patriotic family of the state and country. Further information may be obtained from the state regent, Mrs. Clarence F. R. Jenne, 254 Ashley street, Hartford, Conn.

Ruffs worn during the reign of Henry III of France, were so large that many women were compelled to use spoons two feet long when eating.

CLAIM WEST MAIN STREET NOW IS WORST HIGHWAY IN CITY

West Side people owning automobiles have about reached the state of "the last straw". The reason for the feeling is that West Main street from Thames Square west is in a condition most deplorable, holes, gullies and everything that shouldn't exist on a city street being there.

Little or nothing, they claim, has been done to repair the road for over a year and what a few years ago was a good road today stands out as one that is a disgrace to the city. The two hills are in terrible state and autoists feel that nothing short of miracles has prevented accidents and broken springs during the past few months. Every day the road gets worse and the feelings of the people on the West Side correspond.

People driving over the hills have to take to the gutters to save their cars or else to the car tracks, for to drive on the main part of the road is to invite cut tires, blowouts or even worse mishaps.

Now that the baseball season is soon to open nightly at the Fair Grounds there is bound to be a large increase in the traffic that will pass over West Main street and West Siders feel that their part of the city will not be praised by the autoists after they try the hills a couple of times.

One man who has driven several thousand miles on roads in New England during the past few months said Sunday that West Main street is the "rottenest" piece of road he has traveled over, and that the street would be a disgrace to any small town, to say nothing of what it means for Norwich.

FRENCH AUTOMOBILE TOUR THROUGH QUEBEC PLANNED

Philippe Roy, editor of "Le Reveil" of Putnam who has already interested French residents of New England cities in the project of an automobile tour through the Province of Quebec, during the coming summer, is meeting with much encouragement in the work.

His only purpose in organizing such a tour is on the social side, and he desires that a large number of Franco Americans, who own automobiles, may be able to go to Canada, and pay a social call to their compatriots on the other side of the border.

A ten day's auto trip through the Province of Quebec by a party of several hundred automobilists, is being planned by the committee of "Le Cercle des Tourists Franco-American" a tourist club, in which Mr. Philippe Roy is the active secretary-treasurer.

Such points of interest as Montreal, Trois Rivieres, the city of Quebec, the shrine of Ste Anne de Beaupre, and many other cities in the "faecones" are included in the schedule.

The hearty welcome has already been assured the tourists by mayors of Canadian cities, including Montreal, Trois Rivieres and Quebec city, and accommodations for the thousands of sightseers and hundreds of automobiles expected, are being arranged for.

At Montreal, the tourists will visit the port on a special steamer placed at their disposal by M. P. Fennell, secretary and manager of the Montreal harbor commission.

A special reception will also be given by the society Les Artisans Canadien-Francais at their headquarters, on St. Denis street, who represent 165,000 members of the fraternal French society.

The mayor, Mederic Martin of Montreal will welcome the visitors, Rodolphe Bedard, president of Les Artisans and M. P. Fennell, representing the harbor commission will accompany the mayor and say a few words of welcome.

At Three Rivers the mayor, Honourable L. P. Normand will also welcome the tourists on behalf of the city and the group of tourists will be met by a large delegation of the Quebec Automobile club who will come to take charge of the tourists from New England to escort them to Quebec, with their confreres of the Montreal Automobile club and tourists' bureau of Montreal.

In Quebec on the 17th of July, Mayor Samson will welcome the tourists to the old city of Champlain, afterwards Cardinal Regin will receive them in his cardinalist palace.

The same night a special concert will be given by the Citadel band on the Dufferin Terrasse.

The next day, the tourists will leave for the shrine of Ste Anne de Beaupre, and on returning to Quebec, their special train will stop at the foot of Montomorency Falls and they will be invited to a grand reception by the Quebec Tourists club at the Kent House.

OIL STARTS FIRE IN KITCHEN AT FALLS

At 8.57 o'clock Saturday morning the fire department was called to 14 Lafayette street for a blaze in the home of Charles Riha, one of the Falls company buildings. The fire was nearly out when the men arrived and the damage was slight.

The fire was caused by an oil stove left lighted in the kitchen by Mrs. Riha. The flames flared up and set fire to a mantel back of the stove. Mrs. Riha noticed the fire upon returning to the kitchen and caused a telephone alarm to be sent in, then started to fight the flames herself and had nearly completed her work when the firemen arrived. The mantel was charred badly and the kitchen and pantry filled with smoke.

Fined in Police Court.

LESS SCHOOL AID FOR MANY SMALL TOWNS

Many small towns of Connecticut will find themselves disagreeably surprised this week, when the legislative committee on education expects to present to the general assembly a bill sensibly diminishing the amount of aid they receive from the state for their school teachers' salaries. As the bill now stands it will deprive eight towns.

The proposed measure is based upon a revision of the grand lists of small towns by the state board of equalization, and upon a reclassification of these towns so that the smallest ones will receive more state help and the larger ones less. It is figured that the total amount of money, drawn from the state treasury will not be altered.

In Tax Commissioner Blodgett's recent report he called attention to the fact that many small towns underassessed their property so that their grand lists would be small and would thereby oblige the state to grant them more aid for educational purposes than they would be otherwise entitled to. The state board of equalization has now revised the grand lists of the small towns, basing their new figures ruthlessly upon the findings of Commissioner Blodgett. In almost every case the grand lists as revised are larger than before and as the school aid granted under the state law diminishes as the grand list rises this means that they would, under the existing law, have their aid cut severely.

During the current year the grand lists of 1920 will remain in effect. It is intended to place the new ones in force next year, and at the same time after the classification of small towns under the state aid law, substituting 10 classes and raising from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 the upper limit of grand lists that are entitled to aid.

Under the provisions of the bill that Tax Commissioner Blodgett has grouped in 10 classes, in respect to state aid under the support of school's grant. They are: Towns of the first class with grand lists up to $500,000, to receive 75 per cent. of teachers' salaries; second class, grand lists from $500,000 to $730,000, receive 70 per cent.; classes continue by jumps of $250,000 till $2,500,000 is reached, when the 10th and final class includes grand lists between $2,500,000 and $3,500,000. Class three receives 65 per cent.; four, 6 per cent.; five, 55 per cent.; six, 50 per cent.; seven, 40 per cent.; eight, 30 per cent.; seven, 40 per cent.; eight, 30 per cent.; nine 20 per cent.; ten, 10 per cent. Before the bill is crystallized into its final form some of these details may be altered. It is expected that the measure will be introduced into the assembly on Wednesday.

UNDER BONDS OF $1,000 FOR SUPERIOR COURT

At a continued hearing Saturday morning at the Norwich state hospital, John Konsinewski of this city was before Justice of the Peace V. P. A. Quinn and was bound over to the superior court on the charge of transporting a female to a house of ill fame. The woman in the case is Mrs. Lillian McCabe, 27, of New York, who was arrested a week ago in a raid upon a house on the Norwich-Westerly road about five miles from this city.

Judge John H. Barnes prosecuted for the state, calling but one witness, Officer William Sharvan, who arrested Konsinewski in this city after the raid at the house. The officer testified that the accused man admitted to State Attorney Hall in the presence of the officer that he had taken the woman to the house.

Attorneys G. C. Morgan and Earl Matheweon represented the accused, for whom bonds were furnished in court after the binding over.
